VERSES—FROM ETRETAT

By Joe Rudderman

Etretat, June 15, 1917.

Down on the beach at Etretat,
  Where channel and ocean meet,
And the planes hang low for the lurking foe
  Who wait for the transport fleet,
The wounded Tommies congregate,
  And their glances search the sea
For a point they know a map would show
  Blighty ought to be.

Down the beach at Etretat,
  In the dying sun's red glow,
As the Tommies puff at their cigarettes
  Their voices reach me low;
And it's never a word of the Hell up north,
  But the home that lies over the sea,
To the nor'-nor'-east where the trade winds beat—
  Where Blighty ought to be.

Etretat, France, June 17, 1917.

When you're routed out of your quarters
  At three of a chilly morn,
By the bugle calling "Convoy In,"
  And you march a mile or more,
  Feeling sleepy, stiff, and sore,
Brace yourself, and don't give in—
    This is War!

When you lug a heavy stretcher
  Up an endless string of stairs,
And fiercely curse the day that you swore in;
  Take a look at the poor wretches
  Envying you your lazy stretches,
And do your best to grin—
    This is War!

When you drag back to the mess-room
  With an ache in every bone,
And dully wonder why the ration's thin;
  Never let your fancy roam
  To the food you got at home;
We came overseas to win;
    This is War!

ADDRESS

presented to

by the Officers (American and British) of No. 1 (Presbyterian U. S. A.) General Hospital, on occasion of his retirement from the command of this Unit and promotion to the post of Consulting Surgeon to a Division of American Troops at the Front.

Etretat, France, July 29, 1918.

Gentlemen:

The officers of this mess have conferred on me to-night a very great honor and pleasure in selecting me as their spokesman to express their gratitude and good wishes to our retiring C. O. Needless to say, I am "tickled pink" at the prospect.

I understand that in courts martial it is the custom to call upon the youngest member of the court to pronounce his verdict first. To-night we are reversing the process. To-night it falls to me, the oldest member of the Mess—"the many wintered crow" of this crowd, as Tennyson would call me—to pronounce their valedictory verdict. And the verdict of this court to-night is that Lieutenant-Colonel William Darrach, late C. O. of No. 1 (Presbyterian U. S. A.) General Hospital, be sentenced to listen to his own praises preached at him by a padre.

I should not like to say how many Sunday sermons he has escaped while he has been here, but this one he cannot evade. They say that the most terrible form of torture known is to be preached to death by "wild padres," or cawed to death by "many wintered crows." Let the prisoner say his prayers and prepare "to take his medicine." If the penalty of this court is an ordeal for the condemned man, it is also one for his ecclesiastical executioner when he looks around him and meets the intellectual gaze of such a galaxy of "gros légumes" celebrated for bedside and pulpit eloquence—doctors and padres—members of the two most persuasive professions on this planet.

Eloquence to defined to be the art of persuasion. I lay no claim to eloquence. As our great national poet, William B. Shakespeare, says, "I am a plain blunt man that speak what I do know." And what I have to state is a self-evident proposition, namely—that a more charming and lovable personality than that of our retiring C. O. it would be literally impossible to imagine. He is what you would call in your delightfully expressive language, "a white man"; or as our Indian soldiers say of a popular English commander, a "Sahib Khush dil."

"A white man"—"the joy of our hearts." As a capable, successful and popular C. O. of this Unit he emphatically "filled the bill."

It is the business of this meeting to-night to fill our retiring "Bill" with good wishes and good wine. Now the murder is out! I, a British officer, have actually perpetrated the audacity of calling my C. O. "Bill." When I first joined up I heard it recounted with bated breath, in shuddering whispers, that certain wild men, either Canadians or Australians, had been actually overheard to call their Commanding Officer "Bill," and that before a review the latter addressed his men and said, "Lads, when the British General comes along to inspect us, whatever you do, don't let him hear you call me 'Bill'"! Let me explain and apologize.

When a Cockney couple are lovemaking, the climax is reached when she says, "You may call me 'Lizer,' and he says, "You may call me 'Bill.'" I suppose I must have reached that climax. Indeed, we have all reached it long ago in our relations with our amiable C. O., and after all, is there a higher tribute to the universal affection he has inspired?

He has been to us all a veritable surgical sunbeam in whose genial rays we have been basking blissfully for the past year and more. To draw the obvious inference that we keenly regret his departure is a superfluous banality which I will not inflict on gentlemen of your lofty intelligence. Let us rather merge our regrets at losing him in our own compliments on his well deserved promotion.

It is superfluous for us to attempt to "put him wise" as to the warmth of the affection we all feel for him—"Il a l'oeil," as my friend the "Admiral" says; which, being interpreted into the American language, means, "he has his eyes peeled." He knows.

It is said that one who succeeds a very popular C. O. begins under a disadvantage. But, in the present instance, there is no better tribute to our retiring C. O. than his selection of a substitute—in whom we cannot fail to recognize a replica of his own admirable qualities.

In the case of Major Soper the mantle of Elijah has fallen on a worthy Elisha, and I should like to warn him "right here" that even when he is C. O. I shall continue to call him "Jeen," and as our profane lay brethren would say, "damn the consequences!"

The Presentation

Gentlemen: I have the honor to inform you that the sentence of this court has been duly carried out, and it only remains to present the prisoner with his coffin—which in this case is a silver cigarette case subscribed for by all the officers of this mess, surmounted by the initials of the prisoner, and containing engraved in its vitals a record of his crimes.

Some old Greek once said a thing that has been repeated "ad nauseam" ever since—namely: "A thing of beauty is a joy forever." I have the "thing" here. It is, as I have said, a cigarette case. I think that you will all agree that it is a "beauty." Let us hope that it will be "a joy forever" to its possessor. But in the case of every gift from friend to friend the appreciation of the gift is governed by the principle enunciated as follows by Thomas à Kempis, the mystic: "Non reputandum est quantum quis dederit sed quanto cum amore"—"one must not consider how much a person gave, but with how much love he gave it."

And now, gentlemen, before we present the prisoner with his coffin and this written chronicle of his misdeeds, let us first drown him in good wine. And this must be done in correct military style.

I will first propose the toast:

"Health and prosperity to Colonel Darrach ad multos annos."

Then:

On the word One you will raise your glasses.
On the word Two you will shout "crachez."
On the word Three you will drain your glasses.

F. J. IRWIN, C. F.

MISS MAXWELL HOME AGAIN

Miss Maxwell, who left this country in June to go to France, where the P. H. unit is stationed, returned on Thursday, September 19, looking as if she had been on a delightful vacation, and not just arrived from a long and tiresome sea voyage. She was most enthusiastic about her trip, and brought good reports of all who are "over there." Col. St. John and his Mobile Hospital. with 11 nurses from the P. H. Unit, were in Paris, all packed, awaiting orders to move. They had the whole equipment on wheels—operating room, sterilizing apparatus, etherizing outfit, kitchen, etc. She saw Miss Ruth Morgan, Dr. Alexander Lambert, Miss Ashe, and Mrs. Vanderbilt, who has charge of the canteen personnel for the Red Cross.

The Red Cross offered Miss Maxwell a uniform to wear when visiting the units. She was in Paris for the wonderful celebration on the Fourth of July, and marched in the parade, carrying the Red Cross flag. There were 120 nurses in line, and Miss Maxwell was filled with admiration over the demonstration. She reports all members of the unit looking well, and the Tommies very interesting. The British officers were most cordial to her, and offered her a motor car for any use to which she might choose to put it. She spent three days very near the firing line.

We know how glad the members of the Unit were to see her, for we were just as glad to have her back again, and to know that she was safe.

OUR LADIES AND THEIR DECORATIONS

We have been criticized severely for the inaccuracy of the list of nurses who have been decorated with the Royal Red Cross, and we apologize most humbly for the omission; but we have this to say—how could we know, if we were not told? The following list is correct to the best of our knowledge, and with it goes the hearty congratulations of the staff and all the readers of the Quarterly Magazine:

Elizabeth Russell, '97.
Edith Campbell, '07.
Edith Hegan, '07
Silla Marguerite Carr-Harris, '07
Mary Olive Boulter, '08
Mildred Parkins, '10
Catherine Scobel, '12
Naomi Meiklejohn, '12.
Hilda MacDonald, '13.
Pauline Ivey, '14.

THE CENTRAL CLUB AND THE RED CROSS UNITS

The Central Club is a haven of rest and security for the strangers awaiting sailing orders, Red Cross Units from all parts of the country mobilizing in New York. They cannot all be billeted there, but they may all enjoy the privileges of the club, and will find afternoon tea ready for them there frequently, and a dance every Thursday night, reading and writing room, and a rest room where they may nap and bathe. Mrs. Caroline Post Seaman, hostess to nurses in National Service, calls on the Chief Nurse of each Unit, as it arrives in New York, and offers service and aid in sight-seeing, shopping, and the hospitality of the Central Club.

The Mayor's Committee of Women co-operates, in the matter of entertainment, providing theater tickets, magazines, etc. Miss May Brown presents each nurse receiving her overseas equipment with a gift of Sunset roses from the Brown conservatory.

Alice MacLellan, P. H., '03, General Secretary of the Club, says that the 5,000 nurses who have sailed away from New York will endorse her statement that the Club is the Big Sister for the Red Cross nurse.

THE CENSOR AND THE QUARTERLY

We may be able to print no more of the fascinating letters that come from "over there." The Censor has made a fuss, and some of our dear people have gotten into trouble because we have printed the letters almost whole, so the Quarterly News Gatherer will have to be more cautious, and only tell you approximately what is in some of the letters—if we ever get any more!

There is such an interesting one from one of the older graduates who has been over there since the very beginning of the war. She speaks of having some of the American boys for the first time, and says that their morale is superb —equal to that of the poilus, than which nothing finer can be said. The Americans are anxious to get well, so that they can get back into the ranks. One boy said, "I reckon we were a bit late getting here, and now we have to do our damnedest!" Six hundred patients lying about in the yard, halls, and rooms, where 60 beds had been set up, 2,000 more patients arriving every day for ten days, and evacuation impossible because of no trains and no motor cars. No towels, no compresses for the operations, amputations, debridements and extraction of projectiles made often without anaesthesia! When we read such reports as these, we feel that Sherman must have been right in his definition of war.

FROM M. L. D., CLASS '11

(As this article appeared in the Savannah (Georgia) Morning News, it is to be hoped that the CENSOR has already put his stamp of approval on it.—Ed.)

"I do hope that none of the wild rumors that have floated around France about us have by any chance reached America, for fortunately they are over half untrue. I have been living in a wild state of excitement since my last report to you. We left Paris the early part of the month and were stationed very close to the lines in this region of this last big drive.

"With our hospital in running order we sat and waited for our big chance that we knew we wonld have. At 11:30 one night we were awakened by the most terrific barrage, so loud that we could not hear each other speak in the same room. This was followed by the gas alarm, when we all groped wildly in the darkness for our gas masks. We put on what clothes we could and then lay on the floor awaiting, we knew not what. Shells were bursting everywhere, the hut next door to ours was blown to atoms, and they whizzed by our windows every minute. Finally one of the doctors came in and took us all to the dug-out, where we remained for one hour. Then the patients began pouring in, and we had to crawl out and go on duty. Work was at least diverting, but I assure you our hearts stood still many times a minute. Several of the wards were blown to pieces, and while we were operating the roof of the room was carried away with gusto. We carried on for seven hours, when things became so terrific that it was impossible to keep up. Patients and personnel were all taken to the dugout again, where we remained for an hour, and at the end of this time orders came from headquarters for us to evacuate. No one minded, I assure you.

"We rode in lorries for three hours, finally reaching another hospital, started right in and worked day and night. Here we were bombed for two nights, but everyone was too tired and too stunned to even notice them. The third day we received orders to move on, and set up our own tents again, so on we went, reaching a lovely little spot. Here we were left for four days, when orders came again to move on, and now we have been still for five whole days.

"Busy? Yes, but peaceful. So you see my life is being filled with excitement, thrills and heartaches! At last I feel that I am beginning to do my bit over here, and oh! what a privilege it is! I wouldn't exchange places with anyone on earth.

"It's more than true that the Hun deliberately bombs hospitals, for ours could not have been more directly aimed at. The report was circulated that most of our unit had been killed, but, thank heaven, it is not true; although it was only a miracle that we escaped. However, the chief thing is: We are winning the war, and each day brings us more encouraging reports. The Germans are scared to death of the Americans; the prisoners admit this.

"One of our colonels had quite an exciting experience the other night. We were expecting him in camp about 10 o'clock, whereas he reached us at 2:30. While on the road in his car he was sighted by a German plane, and it came right down and turned a machine gun on him. The colonel and chauffeur got out and ran for a ditch, where they buried themselves in mud for two hours, thinking that by this time the enemy had gone on his way. They emerged and started on again. They were not out more than ten minutes when they were spied again and showered with bullets. Again they fled for woods and crawled on their stomachs until they came to a wheat field, where they could not be found. After an hour or so of this a convoy came along the road and attracted the attention of the Hun, and in this way he escaped and reached home muchly battered up, but whole. Of course we were all so excited that no one slept a wink!

"Gypsy life isn't in it with us. We move in big lorries; it takes about fifty of them, and we move along in a long line. Our last moving was on a moonlight night, so when things became too bright and attractive for the Hun overhead we stopped in a thick forest and all got out and slept on the roadside.

"At present we are most comfortably fixed. Our own little tent hospital, pitched on a beautiful green with the nurses and doctors billeted in a big chateau. Our future is sealed orders. We may be here for days, or months; but we are at least hoping for a week."

WHY GO TO FRANCE TO DRIVE AMBULANCE?

Richmond has a woman ambulance driver who, in an inconspicuous way, is doing one of the most splendid things of which Richmond can boast since the war has brought about so many readjustments. About three weeks ago the driver of the Memorial Hospital ambulance was ordered to report to Camp Lee, leaving the hospital without a driver.

Skill in handling a machine, presence of mind, reliability, and many other qualifications are necessary in driving a hospital ambulance. Besides, the Memorial Hospital ambulance is one of the largest cars in the city. Since it never rains but it pours, the driver had hardly left for camp before a call came to meet a troop train at midnight at Byrd Street Station. A number of sick men were aboard, and they must be brought at once to the hospital; and there was no one to drive the ambulance to the station.

No one? Mrs. Fred B. Morlok, the wife of the superintendent of Memorial, who before her marriage was a Red Cross nurse in New York, accustomed to ambulance work, but not to driving the cars, at once volunteered to go to the station and meet the troop train and bring up the patients. With the help of an orderly, the patients were brought safely to the hospital by Mrs. Morlok.

Since that time she has driven the ambulance whenever there was a call. Five men were brought to the hospital one day last week from a troop train, which stopped long enough for them to be carried from the train at the Main Street station.

Day or night, in and out of city streets or out on long stretches of unfamiliar road, Mrs. Morlok has driven the big car with a steady hand on the steering wheel, and no patient, however ill, has had cause to complain of the driver of the hospital ambulance. In an inconspicuous way it is one of the finest things which the war has brought out in the possibilities for service during the war in Richmond.

"Why go abroad to drive an ambulance?" says Mrs. Morlok. "Memorial Hospital is just as much in need of an ambulance driver as they are over there; so I just decided that I would do my bit on this side."—Richmond (Va.) Times-Dispatch, August 26, 1918.

HERE AND THERE

Miss Alice Frances Bell, R. N., B. S., who has been on Miss Maxwell's staff for the past year, was married on June 18th to Major John Burr Piggott, M. R. C., U. S. A. The wedding took place in Fort Oglethorpe, Georgia. Mrs. Piggott is a graduate of the University of Maryland Hospital, Baltimore, and of Teachers' College, New York City. Before he went into the army Major Piggott was a practising surgeon in Washington, D. C.

Dr. Anna Young has been appointed Contract Surgeon in the U. S. A., with the rank and compensation of first lieutenant. She goes to Washington at once.

Major Charles Young was at the Hotel Savoy, London, the last of September, and was expecting to be appointed to take charge of a base hospital somewhere in England.

The German Hospital, New York City, is now known as the Lenox Hill Hospital.

The German Hospital in Brooklyn is now the Wyckoff Hospital.

A BIT OF FUN—LULLABY, 1917 MODEL

Rock-a-bye, baby,
  Up on a bough,
I'm buying your milk
  From a Certified Cow.

Hush-a-bye, baby,
  Don't wriggle and cry,
They're boiling your bottles
  In borax and lye.

Rock-a-bye, baby,
  On the tree-top,
If any one trots you,
  You tell 'em to stop.

Shun the trot-horse
  When you go for a ride,
For he will work harm
  To your little inside.

Hush-a-bye, baby,
  Don't suck at your thumbs,
Some beast of a microbe
  Will perch on your gums!

Don't chew, or bacilli
  Will creep down your throat—
If you gotto bite something
  Here's a sterilized goat.

Infant, don't kiss me!
  That breaks all the laws—
Unless you should kiss me
  Through carbolic gauze.

Rock-a-bye, baby,
  Don't wriggle and squirm,
Nothing is near you
  That looks like a germ.

GLENNA L. BIGELOW, CLASS '01, AN AUTHOR

Among the book reviews in the Evening Sun, Saturday, July 20, 1918, appears the following, which is of so much interest in its entirety that it cannot be cut.

After an introduction, the reviewer says: Miss Glenna L. Bigelow's little volume, "Liege on the Line of March" (John Lane Company), is likely to outlast many much more pretentious books. It is simply the diary of a young girl; a statement of events from day to day as she saw them during the early months of the war. There is little conscious art about it, but it gives one the impression of instinctively choice selection both of words and of subject matter. It is direct, sincere narrative, dealing largely with the little things, but colored throughout with a growing sense of the awful underlying horrors of the whole. She is never hysterical or "highfalutin." She tells what she saw and what she heard with a keen intelligence and utter absence of affectation. The result is a most readable volume, and one that holds matter of moment as a mémoire pour servir.

Miss Bigelow was a guest of a Belgian family at Liege when the war began. Her diary opens with July 30, 1914, when things were still outwardly normal, but when there was some sensing of the impending storm, a sort of electrical tension symbolized by a thunderstorm that came suddenly upon the Belgian garden; but at dinner that night things were commonplace; "the table was as beautiful as usual with old silver and candles which shed their warm light about—all lovely and luxurious." Then the war storm broke, and we see its effects upon the household, the first incredulity and surprise merging into the beginnings of realization; upon the city as the enemy neared; then the battle of Sartilmont, the twelve days' bombardment of Liege, the capture of the city by the Prussians, their brutal murder of civilians, the burning of part of the town, and the seizure of citizens as hostages. Later she saw much of the devastation of the country, though its worst horrors were kept from her eyes. She finally escaped to Brussels and thence out of the country.

The narrative follows the German progress as she saw it with illuminative detail. There is not room to quote much, but from August 14, when the Prussians had captured the city: "We nursed the soldiers all day—if last night was horrible I could not find words to describe what daylight revealed, or the awful odor of burned flesh when wounds were dressed. It was pitiful to see the courage of the poor men—the Belgians are brave not only on the battlefield. With lips too seared to articulate they would try to speak. . . . Merci, chere soeur . . . but never a moan."

She tells little of what she herself did, but the facts protrude themselves on every page, and doubtless many Belgians will never forget the "chere soeur" from America.

Prussian and other German officers intruded upon them, though the chateau was not looted nor its people molested. Here is a picture of the best of the invaders—with a later qualification: "The youngest soldier among them was a handsome boy of about 22 years, who rather interested me because he was different—even his boots were different—and he had a very striking manner, though very gracious. I am convinced that he was a prince of a reigning house. The atmosphere had a way of parting in rapid waves when he came in, and dropping behind him like an impervious shield as he went out." The later qualification is that his face was "essentially cruel."

Here is one typical episode: Mme. T. had a charming villa at a town disguised as X. She was obliged to provide lunch for a group of passing officers in her beautiful garden. The captain glanced around at the flowers and said, "Madame, very pretty; very pretty; to-morrow—nothing!" That night her villa was burned to the ground. . . . My revulsion for it is so great that the words fairly scorch my fingers as I write them.

There is an item of some importance giving her experiences with a certain American consul, concealed as one Z. (a German-sounding name), who betrayed sympathy with the enemy and did nothing to aid her departure. When the time comes there is need of a searching investigation into the activities of some "American" representatives in Belgium. One hopes that it may not be too late for punishment to overtake them.

The book is not all a record of horrors. It has true humor and many bright spots that help one to keep up courage and to realize that the world is not all "Boche," and that the things that matter will survive. A book like this not only helps us to understand, but points the way to the future regeneration.

NURSING IN KOREA

Knowing that my friends are interested in the work here on the mission field, I am sending this message that will perhaps give a little idea of Mission life with its joys and problems.

At the close of another year, the second year of work in our organized training school for Korean nurses, I stand and view the work from the point of looking backwards. If I had to give an account day by day, it would be full of worries, problems, difficulties, rush and weariness. But as I look backward and view it as a whole, I see problems solved, difficulties overcome, advancements made, and much that is encouraging and hopeful.

Two things have especially helped in making the work progress this year. The first is that we were able to obtain much better candidates for nurses. They have not only had more opportunity to study, but have entered into the work with a better spirit. The other is that after months of investigation and waiting I was able to obtain a Korean graduate nurse from another Mission hospital to be my head nurse. She has been fine, just what I wanted—some one who was able to take the initiative and assume some of the responsibility of the work, some one to be a mediator between me and the Korean people. She understands nursing and is able to help me to present the nursing subject to my nurses.

The girls of course have no idea of nursing when they arrive, and for me to tell them that everything must be done just so is too much for them to comprehend; I, being a foreigner, am strange; whatever I say is strange; and they have never heard such strange things before; so of course they often do not get my point. Why should just five drops of medicine be given, no more and no less? Why not give a very sick patient anything he wants to eat? Why does it make any difference if a patient is given the treatment to-morrow instead of to-day? The Oriental pride is inexplicable, and we find one of the hardest things to teach the girls is the dignity of labor. A simple thing as dusting, for instance, although I have told them many times that dusting is a nurse's duty, for the direct protection and welfare of the patients, it is difficult for them to see the necessity of it. And one nurse was heard to say that she was ashamed to go before the patients and dust, for it was only a servant's work. This remark was made by a girl who came from the poorest of poor country homes. All the girls have not been like this one. They are learning now to take the responsibility of work assigned to them, and from time to time my heart leaps for joy when I see them do some good work or make some remark that shows that they are getting a real vision of a nurse's work.

The mission training school has many problems. From untidy homes and ignorant parents we draw our girls. These girls at most have only had the opportunity of a few years' study in a Mission school, so we cannot start the training of these girls at the same point that the training schools start at home. They have not the foundation of knowledge, culture and poise that help the home nurse to take up her professional career. So besides trying to help them acquire certani specialized kinds of knowledge, power and skill which will enable them to meet their duties and responsibilities as nurses we must teach personal cleanliness, honesty, exactness, punctuality, orderliness and purity of thought.

Of the five girls taken in on probation this year four received their caps. One was unable to go on with the work because of home responsibilities, and one of the capped girls has been discharged since.

My head nurse and I have been able to make visits in some of the homes this year, but we have not attempted to organize a visiting nurses work as yet because of lack of time and funds to carry on the work. We are so in hopes that friends at home who are interested in visiting nursing will help to provide funds to organize and carry on this much-needed work.

Our nurses, although not trained, are beginning to be in demand. We sent one nurse to another city to take care of a typhoid patient under supervision of a Mission doctor. And several of the nurses have had opportunities to care for missionaries who have been ill. In this way we have been able to help out in missionaries homes where there has been illness, also it has given the nurses the opportunity of having experience in Western homes, caring for Western patients.

The Korean girls make good nurses. They are patient, very kind and gentle. They are quite deliberate in their actions and modest in their work. Care of the sick in an intelligent way is something new to Korean women, but I have faith to believe that in time we shall be able to produce in Korea some of the best nurses in the world.

The Christian hospital in a heathen land is "as a light set on a hill." The evangelistic work in the hospital is so arranged as to present the Gospel message to those who come for treatment. The hospital in this way has opened many doors among the people of all classes, exerting a great influence, thereby doing a great work for the Korean Church.

On Sunday I attend a new little church outside of the West Gate of the city. This church had its beginning over a year ago with about fifteen children crowded in a Christian home; now often sixty and seventy children gather in the church on a Sunday morning to learn about the Saviour. It will be of interest to know that except from a very few, these children come from heathen homes. My language teacher is superintendent of the Sunday School and teaches the small boys. My head nurse is teacher of the adult woman's class, another nurse has part of the small girls, and I have a small class of six little girls. The work in the church has always been interesting. It is a beautiful sight indeed to see little heathen children sing Christian songs and recite Bible stories; also to see people put aside their heathen superstitions and grow in the joy of the Christian life.

Since this people is filled with superstition, fear, and strange ideas, it is sometimes more or less difficult to administer to them. Not long ago a most uncomfortable patient was brought into the hospital. The brother, who was not quite sure that the Westerner knew the proper remedies, came a little later with a bag of a certain kind of dried leaves, with which he intended to build a little bonfire on the man's abdomen. However, we persuaded him to let us try first to prove that we were able to make the man comfortable. At another time a little patient was much in need of an operation, but the mother refused. The little boy kept crying, "Cut me, cut me." The doctor was very much disgusted that an ignorant and superstitious mother should stand in the way of giving relief to the boy, and said, "The boy shows more sense than his mother." Thereupon the older son replied, "She has had five sons; every time a son has been born it has taken some of her reason, and that is why she does not know anything now."

I want to express my thanks to all the friends in the homeland who have helped me in the work this year; linen, night-clothes, hot-water bottles and support of nurses; also the large sum from the Presbyterian Hospital Alumnae to be used toward the translating and publishing of "Practical Nursing," by Maxwell and Pope.

Because of the kindness of one friend my nurses have put aside their half-minute hour glasses and are now counting pulses with Ingersoll watches.

Dr. Norton, who has charge of the hospital, has always willingly co-operated in everything pertaining to the training school, in the instruction of the nurses, and in advice and help in the work. I am greatly indebted also to Mrs. Norton for her help in the hospital. She has assumed the responsibility of part of the housekeeping and the evangelistic work.

This great world war has undoubtedly helped people to realize more than ever the great need of trained nurses. If they are needed in all lands and in great world crises, they certainly are needed in Korea, this land filled with superstition and fear, and where so little is known of the care of the sick.

Since it is impossible to carry on this work in a heathen land without funds, I must again appeal to my friends at home.

A liberal endowment is essential for the keeping up of a training school. We do trust that some one who has known what it means to have a trained nurse in the home in time of sickness will be willing to make it possible for us to train girls, that this people may have the same comfort. Scholarships are also needed. Sixty dollars a year will support a nurse, and only one hundred and eighty dollars will give a nurse her three years training.

If you could only step across the waters and get a vision of the need as we see it here, I know you would only be glad to remember us who work in the front line trenches of the mission field.

DELIA MAY BATTLES.

SUCH AN EASY JOB

Most anyone can be an editor. All the editor has to do is to sit at a desk six days out of the week, four weeks of the month, and twelve months of the year, and "edit" such stuff as this:

"Mrs. Jones, of Cactus Creek, let a can opener slip last week and cut herself in the pantry."

"A mischievous lad of Piketown threw a stone and hit Mr. Pike in the alley last Thursday."

"John Doe climbed on the roof of his house last week looking for a leak and fell, striking himself on the porch."

"While Harold Green was escorting Miss Violet Wise from the church social last Saturday night, a savage dog attacked and bit Mr. Green on the public square."

"Isaiah Trimmer, of Running Creek, was playing with a cat Friday, when it scratched him on the veranda."

"Mr. Fong, while harnessing a broncho last Saturday, was kicked just south of his corn patch."

Yes, it's a wonder they draw salaries for it.—Lamar (Mo.) Republican Sentinel.

ALUMNAE NEWS

Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Bristol (Dorothy Fletcher, '17) announce the birth of a daughter, Elizabeth Culver, July 18, 1918.

A daughter was born to Mr. and Mrs. Louis A. De Ronde (Louise C. Foote, '14) on August 6.

Dr. and Mrs. E. R. Evans (Mary McBean, '11) have a son, Richard Donald, born June 26, 1918.

A most enthusiastic letter was received recently from Agnes E. McIlwraith, '14, No. 16 Canadian General Hospital, Orpington, Kent. Gertrude Lightbound, Hazel Gillean and Katherine Scott were in the same place at the time she wrote.

Edith Clapp, '02, announces that the trustees of the Englewood Hospital, of which she is the superintendent, have leased The Inn, adjoining the hospital property, to accommodate a class of 20 additional probationers, as a war measure.

Marion Agard Baker, '07, writes that quarters have been fitted out over a garage in an estate in Far Hills, New Jersey, for the accommodation of 12 or 14 convalescent soldiers and sailors. Mrs. Baker is in charge.

A letter from Agnes E. Maynard, '07, received late in June, stated that a unit was then ready awaiting orders, in Honolulu, Hawaii, and that they had been very busy in Red Cross activities since the beginning of the war.

Emma DeV. Clarke, '07, wrote in the middle of July that she was with an Operating Theatre Team belonging to Canadian C. C. S. No. 3, B. E. F.

Harriet Meikeljohn, '07, No. 2 Canadian General Hospital, B. E. F., was with one of the bombed units, of which three sisters were killed. She writes of terrible experiences, and says that one is thankful for the mere fact of living in these times.

Ravenna C. Whitson, '05, received word in August to be ready to be called for service at any time. She was in Portland, Oregon, at the time.

Mildred Parkins, Marie Thompson, Constance Thorpe Scott, Harriet Wilson, and S. M. Carr-Harris, of No. 3

Canadian General Hospital, G. E. F., saw Miss Maxwell "somewhere in France" on her way to Etretat.

Helen C. Howes, '11, has resigned her position at the Hospital of St. Barnabas, Newark, N. J., and is at present at P. H. in charge of Ward Six. Ruth Clark, '99, is in charge of the training school at St. Barnabas.

The marriage is announced of Frances L. Johnson, '12, to Lieut. William P. Bledsoe, of the 6th Field Artillery, A. E. F., in France. Lieut. Bledsoe is from Georgia.

Edith M. Ambrose, '94, Ethel Sleicher, '15, and Marian C. M. Shanks, have been assigned by the Red Cross to Infant Welfare Work in France.

Acknowledgment has been received from the following nurses, with thanks to the Alumnae Association, for the remission of dues to those who are in service overseas: Miss Carr-Harris, E. deV. Clarke, Miss Baird, and M. E. Baker. Miss Clarke says in her letter: "I think I must stop now and feel that I've managed a letter to you without any incriminating news or information I'll be confronted with in print later on. I really would like to write you an honest-to-goodness interesting letter, because as you can imagine, life in France, and especially at a C. C. S., can be both exciting and full of new experiences; but—well, oh! you Quarterly News Gatherer!"

A letter from Elizabeth Fenner early in September comes from Camp Lee, where she was in charge of the Operating Room, very restless because the C. O. would not O. K. her request to be sent overseas, as he found her indispensable in her post as Chief Operating Room Nurse. She says: "I am starting in with another class of boys to-morrow. There have been 8 nurses and 6 boys assigned to an anaesthetic class, and I am told that I am to teach them 'everything' in the op. room (except the anaesthetic, which will be given by a doctor). Expect to have quite a day, as we have 16 cases scheduled. Yesterday we had 20, so we are quite busy. They tell me that this is to be increased from a 1,000 bed hospital to 2,000. The camp is really wonderful."

Margaret E. Baker, writing of Miss Maxwell's departure, says: "We just said au revoir to Miss Maxwell this a. m., when she left us by motor for another point. Fortunately it did not rain until after she left, and we met at the Matron's office at 8.45, each with an American flag and a rose, formed fours, marched down the street to a corner, then divided, half on each side of the street. When she passed through the line we threw our roses into the car. We were terribly sorry to see her go so soon. Her stay was all too short, although I am positive that she saw everyting of interest for miles around. . . . Miss Clelland and I are in new billets, such a dear little villa, with all separate rooms. I have lost my sea and cliff view, but have a garden to gaze upon which will be charming, with warm floods of sunshine in the winter. Meta Butler, Charity Lyon, Miss Cahoone and Miss Thomas are with us. We have a kitchen with two gas-burner stove that gives us "oodles" of pleasure. We are all appreciative to our Alumnae for returning our dues when we are over here. Everyone is very kind to us, and thoughtful for our comfort and pleasure. . . . We play some bridge, walk a great deal, and have many picnics along the cliffs or in back country, watching the beautiful sunsets."

Lucy Branch Cator, '06, and Olive H. Kirkby, '07, have been at P. H. this summer, on Miss Maxwell's staff.

Augusta A. Graves, '02, has charge of the Red Cross House at Camp Merritt, Tenafly, N. J. The purpose of this house is to provide a place for the men to go when they are just out of bed and not able to be about very much, but able to enjoy the advantages to be gained by benig out of the ward atmosphere. There are a few small rooms provided for the use of parents who have been sent for to see a sick son, who may arrive in the night, or who must stay close by on account of the severity of the illness of the son, and who must be cared for temporarily. The Red Cross House is a huge recreation room, furnished with steamer and rocking chairs, books, games, music and the privilege of smoking. Miss Graves also has some investigating to do in the matter of destitute families of soldiers, that the Red Cross may provide temporary relief.

The sympathy of the Quarterly is extended to Mrs. Scott Prescott Kimball (Frances W. Rolff), '14, whose husband died recently in one of the military camps.

Cordelia Jackson, '18, has been assigned for the present to home service, at the Chelsea Naval Hospital, just outside of Boston.

Delia M. Battles writes from Korea that a unit has been formed out there for service in Korea. It was selected by the Consul-General, and leave was obtained for the missionaries to be absent from their missions. They had three days in which to get ready—khaki dresses, coats and hats, and their own uniforms. They had no idea where they were going, how long they would be gone, or what would be the condition of things when they arrived, but were leaving on August 8 for "somewhere in Siberia." Dr. Ludlow, head of the Unit, is from Lakeside Hospital in Cleveland, and Mrs. Ludlow, Chief Nurse, is a graduate of the Post-Graduate Hospital, N. Y. All members of the Unit are missionaries.

The following nurses were assigned to home service in the summer, and as far as is known have not yet gone overseas:

Maria Tripler, '17, Camp Mills, Long Island, N. Y.
Elizabeth Fenner, '17, Camp Lee, Petersburg, Va.
Lillian Sutton, '17, Camp Merritt, Tenafly, N. J.
Marie Dresser, '17, General Hospital No. 1, Williamsbridge, N. Y.
Isabel Woods, '15, General Hospital No. 18, Waynesville, N. C.
Emily Fellows, '10, General Hospital No. 9, Lakewood, N. J.
Cora Glenn, '17, General Hospital No. 12, Biltmore, N. C.
Kathleen Wilson, '18, General Hospital No. 1, Williamsbridge, N. Y.
Grace Warman, '17, General Hospital No. 1, Williamsbridge, N. Y.

The last report of Capt. and Mrs. Meleney (Elsie Todd) was that they were at Camp McClellan, Alabama, where he is in charge of the Base Hospital Laboratory. He is expecting to be sent overseas very soon.

Annabel McClung Freeman, '11, is on Miss Maxwell's Staff at P. H. Dr. Freeman is in service.

The memorial services on Decoration Day at the grave of Amabel Scharff Roberts in France were very simple, but ineffably touching. The grave was first outlined with a daisy chain, and then the nurses, filing by, planted each a sprig of evergreen on the mound until at last a cross of green stood forth. Then flowers were strewn in the spaces left between the cross and the daisy chain, and the whole, a mass of color, marked the grave of one whose untimely passing left in many hearts a poignant sadness, whose memory we shall always hold dear.

Doctors McGuire and Cobb have joined the Unit.

Beatrice MacDonald, a graduate of City Hospital, who went over with the first Unit, left to take charge of an American Expeditionary Force Evacuation Hospital. Our readers will remember that Miss MacDonald is the nurse who lost an eye in the bombardment of the camp.

Captain and Mrs. Louis J. Pollard of New Orleans, La., announce the birth of their daughter, Mary Alice, on July 4, 1918. Mrs. Pollard was Myra Ross Hackett, '15.

A TRIBUTE

On December 22nd, 1917, passed out of this life Mr. Frederick Sturges, who was identified with the interests of the Hospital for almost half a century, and held successively the offices of Vice-President, President, and Chairman of the School of the Nursing Committee. It was due to his unusual breadth of vision that the School of Nursing came into existence; he had formulated definite ideas regarding its usefulness in the community and brought to the accomplishment of this end a constant, devoted supervision of its progress. To his suggestion was due the demonstration of nursing methods and procedures as an educational factor to which the public was invited, and which impressed upon the people the importance of the work of nursing.

In all the advance movements for a more thorough fundamental education of the nurse, Mr. Sturges stood foremost. The curricula of the School of Nursing was laid upon unusually broad lines, for his conception of the development of the training of a nurse was that she be prepared in all ways to meet the ever increasing demands of the community—as an instructor of nursing and in executive or administrative work as well as social welfare work. He stressed the importance of working in all directions for the betterment of public health; he helped to socialize the work of the nurse. To the development of the home life of the student nurse while in training, he gave special attention, doing everything possible to promote an atmosphere of culture and refinement, and great was his delight when the present residence of the nurses, Florence Nightingale Hall, the generous gift of the late Mr. Kennedy, was completed.

Although a man of broad interests and affairs, Mr. Sturges nevertheless found time, through weekly visits to the Hospital, to know the individual members of every class. He endeared himself to the Alumnae because of his personal knowledge of each member. He was untiring in his devotion to their interests and has left an enduring monument in the heart of every alumna, who came under his influence.

On May 10, 1910, the Alumnae presented him with a loving cup as an expression of the loyalty and love they bore him. This gave him untold pleasure. In conjunction with the generosity of the late Mr. John Stewart Kennedy, for many years President of the Hospital, a Sick Benefit and Loan Fund of $50,000 was established by Mr. Sturges, which has grown constantly larger and become a lasting memorial in his honor. His was a distinct philanthropic inheritance, for behind him stood a long line of New England men of note, who had given unsparingly of their services in the communities in which they lived.

Mr. Kennedy and he established the spirit of the Presbyterian Hospital, which is pre-eminently a spirit of service. This is summed up on the motto on the School pin, "Salus generis humani." This pin, which at Mr. Sturges' suggestion was designed for the School, bears upon the reverse side the simple word "Neighbors," so fraught with meaning.

It is there because he instituted for the graduates of this School the "Order of Neighbors"—"neighbors to those who have fallen and are in need." Could anything more beautifully express the spirit which he did so much to foster?

ANNA CAROLINE MAXWELL.

In the death of Mr. Frederick Sturges a year ago, the School of Nursing lost one of its oldest and best valued friends. When the School was small and the graduates represented only a few classes, he knew us all by name and took the most kindly interest in our work, both while in training and when entered the various branches of service. With much regret he said in later years that the names and faces had become so numerous that he could not remember them all, but his interest in the School never waned and we owe much to his careful thought and wise judgment.

Our beautiful pin, designed at Mr. Sturges' suggestion, with its motto, "Neighbors," chosen by him and summing up in one word a great ideal of life, is a constant reminder of him. When he addressed the School in his low, earnest voice, he never failed to point the way to the very highest and broadest service for mankind, through the use of the special training received in the Hospital, and also through the use of any natural or acquired accomplishments which the nurse might possess. At these times particularly he filled us with a consuming desire to live nearer to his ideal for us.

I wonder how many of the nurses, who tasted delicious jam or jelly at the table, knew about the "jam factory." Every year hundreds of pots of jam were made from the fruit grown on his farm by an old retainer in a house on his property in Fairfield, Connecticut, and the choicest of these were reserved for the nurses. The beautiful flowers at graduation, and the Christmas carols sung in the wards by the boys of Grace Church Choir were gifts from him which we all enjoyed, but it would be impossible to enumerate the many things he did to cheer us on and to make life in the Hospital happier. Unostentatious at all times, only a few knew how many lives were brightened by his quiet generosity. No service to him or his family ever went unrewarded.

The old Connecticut town of Fairfield, where for two hundred and fifty years his family had taken conspicuous part in public affairs, owes much to Mr. Sturges. He loved the old town, was proud of its traditions and history and showed his love in many practical ways. He was Chairman of the Church Building Committee for twenty-five years and his persistent care of the property made it a thing of beauty, the heart of the town. His large expenditures for drainage, which was planned and carried out with greatest care, improved the health of the community to a remarkable degree. He also built five miles of macadam roads and kept them in perfect condition. One day while driving over these roads he said that he wished for no other monument than his roads, and truly they are a fitting monument to one who smoothed life's roadway for so many. Mr. Sturges was one of the largest contributors to the Fairfield Memorial Library and the Fresh Air Homes. His thorough knowledge and constant support of the agricultural interests of the community was an inspiration to many of the farmers of that section of the country, and did much to forward agriculture.

The Presbyterian Hospital was only one of many institutions in which he was interested. He also took an active interest in the New York Public Library, the People's Saving Bank, the Seaman's Friend Society, the Provident Loan Society and the Hospital for Ruptured and Crippled.

OBITUARY

Jean Georgina Hayman, R. N., Class 1908

With sorrow do we record the death of Miss Hayman, at the Bushwick Hospital, Saturday, December 28th, of pneumonia. Strenuous work during the epidemic depleted her ability to fight when influenza prostrated her, and she was only sick seven days, double pneumonia setting in at the last.

Miss Hayman had been Superintendent of the Bushwick Hospital for two years.

She will be greatly missed by all at P. H. for she had been active in all the interests of the Hospital and the Alumnae Association for the last ten years, having been Secretary of the Alumnae Association for several years, and frequently serving as delegate at State and National Conventions. In fact, she represented the A. A. at the last meeting of the New York State Nurses' Association from which we will never have a report, as she had not had time to prepare it up to the day of her illness. She has also been closely identified with the work of the New York County Nurses' Association for several years.

To her aunt, Mrs. Sabocher, of Plainfield, N. J., with whom she made her home, the Alumnae Association extends the most sincere sympathy.

Edith Doolittle Thomas, R. N., Class 1917

Mrs. Clarence P. Thomas, (Edith Doolittle) died in October, another victim of influenza, with pneumonia. She and Dr. Thomas were both sick at the same time. Mrs. Thomas left an eight months old baby. To Dr. Thomas is extended the heartfelt sympathy of the Alumnae Association.

Katherine Beaver, Class 1920

Miss Beaver was a future member of the Alumnae Association, and it seems fitting to mention here her death, which occurred in November, at P. H. following an operation, for which she was poorly fitted because of a recent attack of influenza, and it was felt that she would undoubtedly have recovered had it not been for the inroads made by the epidemic disease. She had been away from the School for some time, on an indefinite leave of absence because of ill health.

Jennie Vivian, Probationer

Miss Vivian was a member of the class which entered the school in September, and was the only nurse on active duty in the school at the time of the epidemic, to succumb.

Extract from Letter Written by Helen Kendall:

Miraj, S. M. C., September 12, 1918.

"We have just had a nice little visit from Dr. I. F. Frost, 'Jack Frost,' a P. & S. man who substituted considerably in P. H. in the days of Dr. Chaplin, Alexander, Peters, Sullivan, etc. He was here in our hospital for some time and then left for war work in the English service. He expects to sail for America to-morrow—to serve his own country.

"You know, I thought I was coming out to assist Miss Steel, a graduate nurse who has been here a few years. Well, you may imagine my consternation when I reached Bombay and learned that Miss Steel had sailed for America in November, and that since that time Miraj Hospital had been without a European nurse. Of course, the other missionaries had done what they could to keep things running, but you can't expect the laymen to run a Nurses' Training School. Nor have I yet been able to start classes, both because of lack of time and also because the ones who need lectures most understand very little English. Of course I cannot begin to teach in the language of this country which is Marathi. I am trying to do a little language work, but there are so many other things to consume my time that I find it difficult to crowd it in.

"I wish I could take time to tell you all about my travels from U.S.A. to India, but I dare not now. Suffice it to say that I had a most delightful trip and met many interesting people. I stopped in Japan and in China to see old college friends and my how we did enjoy it.

"I landed in Bombay March 23rd, exactly two months from the day we sailed out through the Golden Gate. Dr. and Mrs. C. E. Vail, cousin of Madge Gray's husband, came to Bombay to meet me and took me by train to Miraj (pronounced Miriz), a journey of about fourteen hours. Our hospital is about a mile from the railroad station so we were met by Dr. Vail's motor and wisked up home—my new home. It is a delightful place and I love it. Some day I hope to be able to send you some pictures of it. But I was allowed to stay only one night as the days were getting quite hot and anyway language school was to begin the first of April. From here I went directly to a delightful spot up in the mountains where we have a mission bungalow. The place is called 'Mahableshewar,' which means the great power of God. Our place up there is one of the highest peaks and is called Mt. Douglass. We had lots of jolly good times up there along with our study. It gives the new people an opportunity to get acquainted with others of their own mission and also with people of other missions, who come up for language work or recreation. I was there for two months during half of which time Miss Goheen and her mother were with me. You have probably heard that Miss Goheen came right down with me from the hills and is going to remain with me until the first of October. I really do not know what I should have done without her and moreover I don't know what I shall do without her when she goes, for although we are expecting another R.N. in October from America, yet, of course, she does not know the language at all. Frances' knowing the language has been a tremendous help to her. She has had entire charge of the Operating Rooms of which we have four—(1) Major Operating Room, (2) Septic Operating Room, (3) Minor Surgery Operating Room, (4) Eye Operating Room, while I have tried to take charge of the wards and private rooms. This may not sound very much, but it is really only a little bit of our work. For example, we have no real business manager and so it falls to our lot to keep up supplies; then the painters and whitewashers and servers and ward boys and all these people have to be looked after. Oh, my, I sometimes feel it was presumption on my part to ever have undertaken it. But then I comfort myself with the thought that He can 'perfect His strength in our weakness.'

"We have about 130 beds, 25 of which are private, 11 girl nurses and 4 compounders who serve three-quarters of the time as male nurses. Of course, this is not nearly enough to do our work adequately, but we have to do the best we can. The patients always bring one or more of their family with them and you would be horrified if you could see the things they are allowed to do, but we simply have to permit them to help care for their own, else we never could get through with all the work. Then, too, of course it is a good thing to have them here in the wards, for in this way many more have the opportunity to hear the Gospel as it is told through the wards every day.

"I am delighted with our equipment, but even so when one thinks of things that cannot be obtained anywhere nearer than England or America, and you need them stat., I must say it is rather distracting. A missionary has every opportunity to learn patience, if nothing else.

"Miss Thompson and I live in the nurses' bungalow and, of course, have Frances with us. Then we also have some private nurse or transient missionary with us most of the time. We have four suites of rooms besides our living room and dining room and a delightful large veranda. The kitchens out here are always separate from the bungalows.

"Dr. W. J. Wanless is said to be the best surgeon in India, and indeed one of the finest in the world, so I feel that it is a great privilege to be allowed to work with him."

THE INFLUENZA EPIDEMIC AT P. H. AND WITH OUR GRADUATES

The whole medical building was turned over to the care of epidemic patients, with many extra beds in the way of cots, including the beds on the roof. The surgical work was stopped as far as possible, no patients other than emergencies being admitted, and as many of the house staff as could possibly be spared from the surgical side put on duty on the medical wards. It was necessary, of course, to have doctors on duty all the time, day and night. In all, about eighty nurses, including the head-nurses, were ill, usually 20 to 25 at a time. As is recorded on another page of this issue, there was one death among the nurses, for which we are all deeply sorry, but that so many were spared is cause for great gratitude. Miss Patterson and the nurses in the Visiting Nurses' and Social Service departments had wonderful opportunities for service in the district, those opportunities limited only by the shortage of nurses, and the enormous amount of work to be done.

The Home Defense Nurses came to the front splendidly, and the following are the items which we know about, which list will no doubt be incomplete for there are probably many of our graduates who served at that time of whom we have not heard:

Mrs. Geller and Mrs. S. A. Brown were members of the Emergency Council of Nurses formed for epidemic work.

Miss Spencer was in the Red Cross Chapter Office with Miss Evans.

Mrs. W. P. Williams and Miss Gardiner gave their services at Bellevue Hospital.

Miss Pearce was in the Perth Amboy district.

Miss H. A. Wilson, Miss Smiley and Miss Margaret Fisher, with Mrs. Trotter were in the Emergency Field Hospital in Englewood, in the building of the Country Club.

Miss Plastow and Mary Cleland were in the Emergency Hospital at Lawrence Park, Bronxville.

Miss Kirkby opened, equipped, directed and closed an Emergency Hospital in Wilmington, Delaware.

Mrs. Pidgeon and Mrs. Stanwood gave their services in Wellesley, Mass.

Miss May Brown worked with the Visiting Nurses' Associations in both New York and Boston.

ITEMS OF INTEREST HERE AND THERE

Miss Maxwell and Miss May Brown together gave receptions to all out-going units of nurses for overseas service, at the Central Club, and the Cosmopolitan Club, during the first year of the war, providing thereby not only a gracious attention to strangers in a strange city, but giving an opportunity for the nurses of the West and South to meet the nurses of the East and the officers of the Red Cross.

The Graduate Nurses of New York City contributed $2,762.00 to the United War Work Fund. Miss MacLelland was one of the captains in this campaign.

The members of the Central Club bought $45,700 worth of bonds in the Fourth Liberty Loan.

At 37 East 71st street, New York County Nurses' Association holds its February meeting, Tuesday, February 4th, 8 p. m.

AN OPPORTUNITY FOR SERVICE

The closing of the war has left so very many nurses disappointed that they were unable to participate in the biggest thing of the present time, "The Great World War," that many who had the desire to help in bringing about justice and right, still long to be of service in a broad way.

Mrs. Frank Warner spoke to the School in the Assembly Hall on December 13th upon the "Opportunities for World Service." Dr. Allen Whipple introduced Mrs. Warner who had recently returned from a tour around the world. It was astonishing to learn of the dire need for nurses and of the far reaching influence of the few who had gone out with ideals of good nursing and right living to work in the hospitals in foreign countries.

Dr. Shepherd also spoke, telling more specifically of the great need for nurses in Turkey. He gave some short vivid pictures of the life and of the country and also told of the Armenian and Syrian Relief Committee about to send out an expedition for reconstruction. Several graduates of the School have already responded to the call and expect to sail with the party shortly after the new year.

Dr. Barnes, former president of the Student Volunteer Union concluded the meeting with a brief explanation of what it means to volunteer to be a medical missionary, doctor or nurse. There are seven such nurses in the Training School at present who, along with the highest ideals in nursing, purpose to carry highest ideals of Christian living to China, India, Africa and Turkey.

The various mission boards want, right now, over fifty nurses to go to different fields as missionaries, because it is only Christianity which restrains and wakes lasting real reconstruction. What an opportunity to be in the finest kind of service, the development of body, mind and soul; and to share in and be a part of the highest kind of world movements!

I. F. VALETTE.

COLONEL BREWER HOME FROM FRANCE

At the regular quarterly meeting of the Alumnae Association on Thursday, November 21st, Colonel Brewer, just from France, was the guest of honor, and the speaker for the evening. He gave one of the most interesting accounts of life on the other side as seen by a medical officer that any of us had heard, full of humor and pathos, painting such vivid pictures of the scenes he had witnessed and been part of, that we could almost see them with him. In particular, he paid the tribute of sincere admiration of the nurses for their composure and self-control under all circumstances, even while under fire of shell and bomb. He told of the American Christmas which was provided for the Tommies who had never seen such a celebration—carols, trees, presents for all, and a "regular" dinner. He drew for us a very clear picture of a C.C.S. during battle, when the barest essentials in the way of treatment are attended to and the men sent on to hospitals farther from the firing line. He spoke of the difficulty in deciding sometimes just what constituted "essentials" when there was so much that might be done for a wounded lad, but there were also so many hundreds waiting their turn to have something done for them.

About the most thrilling thing he told was about the work done by Dr. St. John and his Mobile Operating Unit, a complete outfit for a 250 bed hospital and staff, mounted on motor trucks, each pavilion of 50 beds complete on one camion. When first assembled it took three days to set it up ready for duty. Before they went into actual service he had trained his staff so that the whole outfit, including X-ray service, operating room service, staff quarters and hospital tents were ready for use in eight hours and fifty minutes, the same dismantled and mounted ready to move on to another station in exactly three hours. Wonderful team work, that.

A LETTER

From "Somewhere in Siberia," in September, 1918.

Should missionaries leave the mission field to do their bit?

When war was first declared I thought it out for myself, for I, too, love my country, I thought of the thousands in America who were willing and able to go into Red Cross work and of the few who answer the call of missions, and then decided that my duty was here. I have watched with interest and pride the work of our unit in France, but never have I had the desire to leave my mission work and go "over there," but have always felt that if we should have any local emergency I would feel it my duty to serve here. The emergency has come. I was asked to join the unit to go to Siberia. Every missionary on the foreign field stands ready and anxious to go, but of course it was the doctors and nurses who were needed most.

Our unit from Korea was chosen by the American Consul-General, and we received permission for leave of absence from our missions and Bishops. Our unit consists of three doctors and five nurses, all missionaries. The whole unit consists of ten doctors and ten nurses coming from Japan, Korea, and China. Dr. Tenslar, of St. Lukes' Hospital, Tokyo, Japan, is in charge of the unit.

The day we arrived in Harbui we went in the evening to the Y.M.C.A. at the American barracks for a moving picture show (a real event here in the Orient). The hall was quite full when the nurses walked in. Such a welcome as we received! The hall was half-filled with the Czechs, the soldiers we had come to serve, and there was some racket with all the clapping and shouting.

The Czechs are splendid men, and they have a well trained, well disciplined army. The American people here are strong for them. I had an opportunity a few days ago to see General Deitrich review his troops. It was one of the most wonderful sights I have ever seen.

The Czechs have officially recognized the American Red Cross and Dr. Tenslar has been asked to take charge of their medical work.

DELIA MAY BATTLES, '15.

OUR UNIT COMING HOME!

Just as this copy is being sent to the printer, a cablegram is received from Mrs. Christy, chief nurse of the unit at Etretat, announcing that the unit is to leave there on the second of January. It is not known whether the trip home will be by way of England or one of the French ports, so it is not known when the nurses will arrive.

THE FOURTH LIBERTY LOAN, AT THE PRESBYTERIAN HOSPITAL

When Miss Maxwell offered the Class of 1921 the opportunity to carry on the Liberty Loan Campaign for the hospital the undertaking seemed to some of us a prodigious task. We had before us a $25,000 goal, for had not the class above us raised over $23,000 on the Third Loan? We considered those figures, and we noted other factors which made an unfavorable prognosis for the hospital drive: the epidemic was curtailing the number of visitors to the hospital, the stress of work on the wards left little energy or time for outside work; one section of the class was very new; one section had not yet arrived; and our own ranks were greatly depleted by influenza. Besides, even some of the most loyal Americans were pessimistic about the Fourth Liberty Loan.

However, the Training School Office had promised us their hearty support, and we were out to win. The morning of September 28th, when thousands of Liberty Loan booths sprang up all over the United States, found some of the Class of 1921, coupon books in hand, taking subscriptions for the Presbyterian Hospital Booth.

Our first plan was to work in teams, three captains being appointed who were responsible for the booth at the front door during certain hours on their appointed days. "Off duty" times are such uncertain elements in the planning of off-duty programs that the captains found themselves borrowing workers from each other's teams to fill up the gaps. As the drive progressed and individual workers came back from the booth with enthusiastic reports of bonds sold, the whole class swung into the campaign as a unit rather than in separate teams.

A big Liberty Loan Rally was to be an important feature in our drive. The members of the school had repeatedly expressed a desire to hear Miss Maxwell relate some of her experiences overseas, and this seemed an appropriate time, so she very generously promised to speak for the Liberty Loan. Through Miss MacLellan, the Superintendent of the Central Club for Nurses, we were able to get as a speaker Miss Madeline Jaffery, the first nurse returning to this country wearing the Croix de Guerre. Although many of the school were kept away by influenza, those present were so stirred by the addresses that many took out second subscriptions and over a thousand dollars was raised that evening.

At a Liberty Loan meeting of the class it was decided to buy a class bond and $100 was quickly subscribed. Later, as the 1921 workers continued their canvass of the school the idea occurred to some of us who could not buy individual bonds, that an opportunity should be given to every American to do something for the Fourth Liberty Loan, thus making ours a 100 per cent. training school. This plan met with a ready response and another bond was bought by the school, both bonds to be given to Miss Maxwell for the Nurses' Pension Fund.

The night before the closing day of the drive our total was $24,450, so that we were feeling pretty relieved about that $25,000 "inside limit." With a second "pay day" before us $550 would be easy to get. However, our zest did not subside with the goal in sight, and Saturday, October 19th, "P. M.'s" and "hours off" alike were gladly given to the Loan. The booth was opened at 10:30 a. m. and was not closed again until the last possible purchaser had left the hospital at 9:30 that evening. At the same time all day long workers persistently followed the trail of the paymaster through the hospital and employes good-naturedly joined in the campaign for bonds.

Subscriptions were taken so fast that there was not time to find out the total until after the booth was closed. Then as we poured over our pages of subscriptions the usual drudgery of adding and adding was changed in a twinkling —columns of figures danced before our eyes as rows of animated bayonets, for suddenly we discovered we were going over the top—we had shot beyond our mark $7,100. The Presbyterian Hospital total was $32,100!

MARGUERITE A. WALES,
Chairman, Fourth Liberty Loan Committee.

ALUMNAE NEWS

Edith J. L. Clapp has resigned as Superintendent of the Hospital at Englewood and is at present with her family in Montclair.

Mrs. Edith Joy Fields returned to P. H. in the fall and completed her course and graduated in December. She left training school in 1902, to be married.

Grace Warman, '17, who is at Base Hospital No. 1, called at the Training School Office recently and was most enthusiastic in her accounts of the work being done there now for returned soldiers.

Mrs. John Herrick was on Miss Maxwell's staff during the month of November, assisting in the office.

Anne Foster, '15, recently with the Unit in France, resigned and was married, October 22nd, to Alfred Grennough who is with the Navy at Brest, France. She wrote a fascinating letter describing their trip through the devastated towns of France and the battle fields of the Marne, certainly a unique and long-to-be-remembered wedding trip.

Ruth Hovey, '14, with the Unit in France, has been very ill with pneumonia, in Paris.

Two operating teams were sent to Casualty Clearing stations in August, composed of the following doctors and nurses, from the Unit: Team No. 1, Captain McCreery, Florence Riemann, '16, Anne Penland, '12, and two orderlies. Team No. 2, Captain Stevens, Lieutenant Cunningham, Margaret Ashmun, '16.

Major Woolsey, Sara Strain, '01, and Anna Balen, '13, were at a C.C.S. when the armistice was signed.

A letter received from Jessie Mundie, '12, acknowledging with thanks the receipted bill for Alumnae dues, written from Brighton, England, late in November, contained interesting accounts of the work which she had been doing, mostly surgical, but noticeably changing to all medical, the men constantly arriving from overseas being very sick. They were expecting the returned prisoners at any moment at the time she wrote.

Elizabeth Fehrman, '96, writing to Miss Maxwell says: Here we are shopping for the Canteen again. We had six weeks of mildly busy work at the one we went to the week you were with us (in August). All during that fighting we had from one to three thousand a day and at times, with changing divisions, twenty thousand a day passing. Many of these could not break ranks long enough to come in but we went out to the corner, and even the officers were clamoring for coffee. I emptied one of our biggest urns in less than an hour one hot morning. It was coffee from the day before,—cold,—but it was 11 a. m. and most of the men had had nothing since 4 a. m., marching in the dust and almost American heat. The village was nearly in ruins but we had a big dance hall that made the finest kind of a canteen and it was full of men all the time. We could scarcely get enough books and games for them. Then our army (the Third French Army) was moved back for a two or three months' well earned rest and we are to be transferred to the general who gave Miss Hackett her Croix de Guerre in 1914. It's a busy life but an encouraging work.

We have made hosts of friends in the French Army, good fighters, who think we are rather wonderful. We had four companies of American Motor Transports in the village the week before we came away. There were many nice boys among them. One afternoon I made between five and six hundred doughnuts for them. If you could have seen those things fly! And all our reserve of condensed milk disappeared with gallons of coffee. There was nothing to be bought in the village and we were thirty-five kilos from a shop, but I had eggs and sugar and the Americans furnished the flour and some lard. The rest of the frying was in our "very hard to get" salad oil. It made a great afternoon, they said.

In a letter to Miss Maxwell from Mrs. Grace E. Potter, '99, dated November 16th, she says: "I am off to Siberia as Headquarters Matron of the Canadian Red Cross, the first Canadian woman to go to Siberia this way. My husband is C. O. of the Canadian Hospital there. Isn't that an experience for me! Our work will be among the civil population principally, and I am trying to get Helen Locke as my assistant, to "follow on."

Jane Durham, '14, writes: "You will be interested in the latest news of Dr. Darrach, if you have not already heard. For some time he has been at the front as consulting surgeon of the Rainbow Division, then was promoted to be consulting surgeon of the First Army Corps, and now is consulting surgeon of the First American Army."

The regular quarterly meeting of the P.H.A.A. ought to be one of special interest since the Unit from Etretat will be home. Save the date, Thursday, February 20th, at the hall.

THE RETURN OF THE UNIT

The Managers of the Hospital and the Alumnae Association jointly entertained the members of the Unit on Tuesday, the eighteenth of February, at the Hall, at eight in the evening. All the nurses of the Unit were invited, but those of our own school had a "preliminary party" when Miss Maxwell presented to them the special greetings of the Alumnae, in the form of a pin, of blue-and-white enamel, with the dates '17-'19 artistically and inconspicuously done on the front of the pin, and the word "Service" on the back. After that, dancing and refreshments were the order of the evening, and greetings as old acquaintances were renewed. Many of the Alumnae came from some distance for the occasion, among them Mrs. Frederic Morlok, from Richmond, Virginia.

An Appreciation From One of the Unit

"I want you to know, Mrs. Christie, that not only myself but everyone of us appreciated your very difficult position, and that we think you the very nicest and best Matron ever. I think we were as happy for a big family as it was possible to be, and many of us will look back with pleasant recollections on our life in Etretat." JOAN F. SCOTT.

GENERAL IRELAND PRAISES WORK OF PRESBYTERIAN UNIT

In a letter to the trustees of the Presbyterian Hospital, Major General Merritte W. Ireland, Surgeon General of the United States Army, yesterday called attention to the important part played by such units as Red Cross Base Hospital No. 2, organized at the Presbyterian Hospital, in the final triumph of the Allies. The actual service of the unit is reviewed and the Surgeon General urges that it be kept intact for further usefulness.

General Ireland's letter is as follows:

"Red Cross Base Hospital, No. 2, accredited to the Presbyterian Hospital, having been returned to this country for demobilization, I take this opportunity to express my appreciation of the invaluable service rendered the nation by this splendid organization.

"It will always be remembered that the first organization of the American army to be sent overseas were six Red Cross base hospitals, and at the time of the great allied offensive, beginning July 18, 1918, thirty-nine of the forty-five base hospitals on duty in France and England were Red Cross hospitals.

"Their readiness for service and the patriotic devotion to duty, as well as the professional excellence of the personnel of these organizations, have made them the chief reliance of the Medical Service of the forces in France, while those on duty with the British have rendered equally valuable and appreciated aid to the British army.

"It is earnestly recommended that effective measures be taken by you to keep the organization of your unit intact and and that every effort be made to imbue its future personnel with the fine esprit to be expected in the possessors of the glorious heritage of splendid achievement handed down from the great war by the original personnel of Base Hospital No. 2.

"In this connection I desire to invite your attention to the excellent work done by Colonel George E. Brewer, M. C., as director of Base Hospital No. 2, and to ask that you convey to him my sincere appreciation of the value of the service he gave to our country in its time of need."—N. Y. Herald, March 19, 1919.

ANOTHER HONOR FOR THE P. H. UNIT

The first woman to win the American Army's Distinguished Service Medal is Miss Beatrice MacDonald of the Reserve Nurse Corps, who was seriously wounded while remaining at her post with wounded men at a British casualty station during a German night raid. Secretary Baker invited her to the War Department today to receive the decoration with formal ceremonies.

"Miss Beatrice MacDonald, reserve nurse, Army Nurse Corps, for extraordinary heroism while on duty with the surgical team at the British Casualty Clearing Station No. 61, British area. During a German night air raid she continued at her post of duty, caring for the sick and wounded until seriously wounded by a German bomb, thereby losing one eye."

In presenting the Distinguished Service Cross to Miss MacDonald, Secretary Baker said that it gave him great pleasure "to say that the army of the United States is under deep obligation to the nurses, who served so gallantly and faithfully; that our losses in this war were so slight, relatively, is undoubtedly due to the fidelity, self-sacrifice, and heroism of the women of the nurse corps, who ministered to our wounded at the very front."

The raid in which she was wounded occurred on the night of August 17, 1917.

General Pershing in a personal letter commended Miss MacDonald and Miss Eva Jane Parmello of Springfield, Mass., another nurse who remained at her post after being wounded in a German air raid. Both nurses have been recommended for the British Military Medal "for exceptional bravery," and Miss MacDonald has received the Royal Red Cross decorations from the British authorities. Miss MacDonald was formerly office secretary to Dr. George E. Brewer, who is now a Colonel in the Army Medical Corps and formerly had charge of the Presbyterian Hospital Unit

THE QUARTERLY MEETING

At the regular Quarterly meeting of the Alumnae Association on Thursday, February the twentieth, Dr. Anna Hamilton, Superintendent of the Florence Nightingale School of Nursing in the Protestant Hospital in Bordeaux, France, was the guest of the evening. After the regular business had been transacted, of which the following report of the Scholarship Committee was an important part, Dr. Hamilton told about her work in establishing a school of nursing organized along the lines of schools in this country, with its attendant difficulties and discouragements, owing to the traditions of the French people, and their ideas about what women should and should not do. An abstract of Dr. Hamilton's talk appears on another page of the Quarterly.

Following Dr. Hamilton's talk, an abstract of which appears elsewhere in this issue, the members present, after some discussion, voted $500 from the general fund to be given to Dr. Hamilton for use in the school for educational work, probably to assist in the establishment of a library, as a memorial to Miss Roberts.

Report of the Scholarship Committee:

At the annual meeting of the Alumnae Association, 1918, it was moved and seconded that a scholarship be created by the Association in memory of Annabel Scharf Roberts, class of 1916, whose death occurred in France while in the service of her country.

Frances A. Stone was appointed chairman of a committee with the privilege of selecting the other members.

After investigation, meeting and discussion, the committee presents the following report:

1. The Alumnae Association to offer an annual scholarship for the period of five years—to be renewed upon the recommendation of the Committee and approved by the Alumnae Association.

2. That only graduates of the Presbyterian Hospital School of Nursing, and members of the Alumnae Association in good standing to be eligible for this scholarship.

3. Applicants to have had at least two years experience in an executive position in a hospital or other position in a related field of work. Said candidates to be endorsed by the Director of the School of Nursing, and two other persons whose relation to the work which she has been doing, qualifies them to judge.

4. Applications for scholarship to be filed with the Scholarship Committee.

5. The sum appropriated not to exceed five hundred dollars ($500.00) per annum, to defray the whole or such portion of the expense that may be necessary.

6. The Committee to prepare a statement giving in detail the scope and advantages of various post-graduate courses in special work, hospital executive, teaching, social service, etc., to aid applicants in their selection. This statement to be published from time to time in the Quarterly Magazine.

7. The scholarship to begin with the class of 1916, with which Miss Roberts graduated, and to continue with subsequent classes.

THE ANNUAL MEETING, P. H. A. A.

Plans are being made for Alumnae Day, to follow the graduating exercises, with the annual business meeting in the afternoon, so that a large attendance should be possible. The activities of the Alumnae Association should not only be resumed, but increased now that the Unit is home, and you are urged to plan to be present at the annual meeting and to take an active part in it.

AT THE WAR IN A MOBILE HOSPITAL

The interesting account of the activities of a Mobile Hospital under fire, found in this issue of the Quarterly, appeared in the St. Luke's Alumnae Bulletin for April, and is copied with permission. Miss Manelva Wylie Keller, '10, St. Luke's Hospital, was with Mobile Hospital, No. 2, which was a P. H. Unit.

A TITHER

The following paragraphs were found in a little pamphlet on "How to Tithe and Why":

John Stewart Kennedy, banker and philanthropist, who died in New York City, October 31, 1909, had risen from humble circumstances. His fortune was accumulated through many years of tireless energy and an unusual capacity for affairs. His life is said to have been one of the most striking recognitions in the history of America of that obligation which rests upon men who, under our system of government, have risen from poverty to wealth—who have made almost unlimited use of the great opportunities open to every capable and energetic man—to hold their wealth not for selfish purposes, but for the betterment of humanity.

Dr. Parkhurst, in the memorial sermon which he preached in the Madison Square Presbyterian Church, Sunday, December 5, 1909, said:

"Mr. Kennedy's Christianity was a pervasive atmosphere which gave breath and subsistence and color to every remaining feature of his life. Strict in the observance of the Sabbath, constant in his attendance upon sanctuary service, fixed in his habits of Bible study and contemplation, he was as much a Christian when not praying as when he was, and to serve God and his fellow man sums up in a word the meaning of Mr. Kennedy's life."

From the start of his business career Mr. Kennedy was a tither. This is known. There was found among his books one very old in which his benefactions were put down. These benefactions bore this heading: "Behold, the tenth of all I give unto Thee."

During his lifetime he built the United Charities Building at the corner of Fourth Avenue and Twenty-second Street in New York, and presented it to the four philanthropic societies which are housed in it. He gave $250,000 to the School of Philanthropy, and $1,000,000 to Columbia University, the latter anonymously. He gave $1,000,000 to the Presbyterian Hospital in 1903, and $400,000 to the Nurses' Home. He gave to the Lenox Library, the New York Historical Society, and the Metropolitan Museum of Art.

THE MOBILE UNIT

(Extracts from a Letter from a Member of the Unit)

"We left Paris in the early part of the month and were stationed very close to the lines in the region of this last big drive. With our hospital in running order we sat and waited for our big chance which we knew we would have. At 11:30 one night we were awakened by the most terrific barrage, so loud that we could not hear each other speak in the same room. This was followed by the gas alarm, when we all groped wildly in the darkness for our gas masks. We put on what clothes we could and then lay on the floor awaiting, we knew not what. Shells were bursting everywhere; the hut next door to ours was blown to atoms, and they whizzed by our windows every minute. Finally one of the doctors came and took us all to the dug-out, where we remained for one hour. Then the patients began pouring in, and we had to crawl out and go on duty. Work was at least diverting, but I assure you that our hearts stood still many times a minute. Several of the wards were blown to pieces, and while we were operating the roof of the room was carried away with gusto. We carried on for seven hours, when things became so terrific it was impossible to keep up. Patients and personnel were all taken to the dug-out again, where we remained for an hour, and at the end of this time orders came from headquarters for us to evacuate. No one minded, I assure you.

"We rode in lorries for three hours, finally reaching another hospital where we started right in and worked day and night. Here we were bombed for two nights, but everyone was too tired and too stunned to even notice them. The third day we received orders to move on, and set up our tents again. So on we went reaching a lovely little spot. Here we were left for four days, when orders came again to move on, and now we have been still for five whole days.

"Busy? Yes, but peaceful. So you see my life is being filled with excitement, thrills and heartaches! At last I feel that I am beginning to do my bit over here, and oh, what a privilege it is. I wouldn't exchange places with anyone on earth."

AT THE WAR IN A MOBILE HOSPITAL

Nine o'clock, Friday morning, July 5, 1918, found all of us, twenty-three nurses of Mobile Hospital No. 2, scrambling around, tossing our few belongings, which had been reduced to the minimum of the minimum, into our duffel bags and haversacks and attaching a residue to our persons in the various places assigned to them. In due time we were all lined up for roll call and as we stood there we had something of the sensatoin which a pack mule might have as we endeavored to bear up under the burden inflicted by the various straps and hooks which served as our communications with our haversacks, gas masks, canteens, helmets, mess kits, etc. Everyone being "present," we were assigned to our places in brand new Government touring cars and said good-bye to Paris. These cars, I might mention in passing, we later learned to recall with great respect, for they were by far the best transports with which we were ever to be favored.

The morning was bright and warm and as we sped along the Paris streets these first moments of our trip tended to make us forgetful of the undertaking upon which we were embarking. After a time however, our thoughts reverted to our destination. All we know about this was, in the terminology of our orders, "Châlons-sur-Marne for orders," for tension was high in those days and secrecy and mystery and uncertainty were the very air we breathed, so in true soldierly fashion we suppressed our curiosity and endeavored to make the most of our experiences as they came, one by one. The roads were very deeply dusty and the further we traveled the more so they became, so that before we had gone far we had acquired a thick coat of the heavy tenacious dust which abounds in this part of France in dry weather. This discomfort was more than compensated for, however, in the beautiful scenery that lay along our route in the form of magnificent fields, with abundant and thrifty crops, adorned in profusion with countless varieties of flowers which, though charming to look upon, bore to our minds the association of the ugly thorn that was torturing the side of France a few kilometres ahead of us.

As we progressed on our journey signs of war activity increased steadily. Roads were more and more congested with trucks, ammunition, horses, soldiers, refugees, etc., and the whole picture before us began to take on a more serious aspect. All the way along we received enthusiastic ovations from the French civilians and soldiers, who showered upon us their "Vive l'Amerique!" and "Bravo les Americains!" and as we neared our destination we had the sensation of entering a real Little America, for our own soldiers were to be seen everywhere, busy in all capacities, and as the sight was new to us, we were thrilled by it and greatly cheered by the cordial, friendly and noisy greeting which we received from them at every turn. This was the first tangible demonstration we had seen of America at war in France, and the business-like and thorough way in which Americans were conducting themselves, and the attitude of being in full possession and masters of the situation made us feel very much at home and displaced a feeling we had theretofore more or less unconsciously harbored of being merely visitors in Europe on a very important and momentous occasion. The Stars and Stripes were flying everywhere, the American tongue was in striking evidence, and we saw the war and America and the world in a new and very impressive light. The conservative Americanism tucked away in our hearts and enshrined in our jealously guarded traditions received a tremendous shock on this occasion, but another Americanism, adaptability, came promptly to our rescue and we rejoiced in the situation and entered into the spirit of it with enthusiasm.

Late in the afternoon we arrived at Châlons, where we were quartered in a French hospital which was then at rest. We were very hospitably received by the officers and infirmieres of this hospital and spent a very comfortable and refreshing night. Here we had our initiation into two of the prominent features of our future existence: dormitory life and the dugout, for we all slept in one big ward on iron beds or cots, but before we were allowed to settle down for the night, a French officer and one of the French nurses very seriously and solicitously took us on a tour of inspection of the abri in the courtyard, in which we were to take refuge in case of an air raid. We had been through air raids during our sojourn in Paris, but we found ourselves taking the possibility of such a thing nearer the front much more thoughtfully. We slept well, however, undisturbed by air raids, and early the next morning resumed our journey toward Bussy-le-Château, where we were destined to start our career in earnest.

Our hospital equipment had been sent on ahead, so when we arrived we set to work at once to put our house in order for some great event which we felt was to occur soon. At Bussy-le-Château we occupied a large French hut hospital, which had been used previously by the French. The buildings were all very substantial and were equipped very completely, and our quarters were comfortable indeed. A French officer and staff were on the grounds to work in liaison with us, and one of our own field hospitals joined us to constitute with us the main front-line hospital of the Champagne sector for what turned out to be one of the most important battles of the war, particularly so far as our own country is concerned. Within a few hours we were installed and organized and then turned our attention to the various details with which life at the front is necessarily encumbered.

We were very near the line of battle at Bussy. The noise of the heavy artillery convinced us of this and frequent enemy aeorplane visits kept us reminded of it. We were also in the "gas zone," which meant special and very strict precautions against gas attacks. A big battle was impending, also, and we must be prepared for possible invasion. All this made our life at Bussy-le-Château rather tense and anxious, and we lost no time during the week of our waiting there, employing every moment in preparation against every emergency. The gas mask drill was perhaps the most unique and impressive one of our precautionary measures. The American mask is a rather complex one, and considerable practice is necessary for the easy and quick adjustment of it. When the designer of this mask worked out his headgear he forgot that woman constitutes a part of the impedimenta of the Twentieth-Century army and made no provision for her crowning adornment, so we were considerably handicapped in this branch of our education until we finally overcame the difficulty by the very simple, though distressing, method of eliminating the civilized element of beauty from this proud possession. In due course of time we learned to mask our hair as well as our faces, a very kind provision of the procedure being that we were required to hold our breath during the operation. Having mastered the art of adjusting our masks we were then decreed subject to arrest if found without them slung over our shoulders in the prescribed way. This was very irksome at first, both to our shoulders and our memories, but after a little application to this strange duty we developed both our muscularity and our mentality to the degree of perfection and began to feel that we were gas-proof. We had been told what the gas alerte would be and our duties when it was given, the most impressive one of these being that we must "cease breathing," so we assumed the attitude of the veteran and went about our work, gas masks and all.

In a day of two, patients began to filter in, our machine began to functionate, and we stood ready for the great attack which we had earned was to take place at midnight on July 14th. Aside from the sound of heavy artillery and the passage of numerous aeroplanes, both friendly and hostile, nothing of importance occurred until the appointed day of July 14th, when, in spite of our efforts to join with our French associates in the celebration of their National fête day, an unmistakable seriousness overtook us all and we felt that the time was as the French say, "grave." We all retired that night with a feeling of uncertainty and sleep forsook many of us. At midnight the sound of the guns became more distinct and more ominous, and from that time on the firing increased greatly in intensity. The attack was on, and we were all convinced that a strenuous and serious night was ahead of us. Suddenly, all those who were not already awake to the situation, were rudely made so by the unmistakable explosion of a shell in our midst, and upon the heels of this came the even more startling gas alerte.

Lights were off, of course, but after a general scramble and many individual fumbles, the gas masks were in place. This accomplished, the next step was not quite clear to anyone. Shells, chiefly high explosive ones, were coming faster and nearer, and in our inexperience we had to stop a moment to decide upon the wisest course of procedure. On an occasion like this one seems to have an exaggerated sense of loneliness, even in the midst of a crowd, and just as this feeling was at its height the reassuring voice of the commanding officer was heard in the hallway, saying, "Are you all right? There is no gas as yet. Take off your masks, get dressed, and come with me to the dugout. Hurry, but don't be frightened." By this time some were already well on the way through this program, but we were now organized, and in an unbelievably short time all were ready, though it may be commented, not uniformly, for the fifty-yard dash through the open to the abri. Minds work very strangely under stress and the relative importance which various individuals attached to the details of that preparation for flight from danger has been very interesting to recall since time has placed the event in perspective.

The shells were now falling faster and the enemy seemed to be getting a more accurate aim each time, but everyone managed to get to shelter without injury. Though the abri was a perfect one and very capacious, some time was required to organize it, for patients in all conditions had been carried down and needed care, and the personnel could not get their bearings at once. Soon, however, one end of the dugout was converted into a hospital, everyone was made as comfortable as possible, and then all that remained to be done was to await developments. After the battle had continued for about two hours, patients began to arrive in large numbers, and as the firing upon us had somewhat abated, we went out to our operating rooms and wards and set all our machinery into motion. For about two hours we had the gratification of accomplishing a great deal of urgent work. but by the end of this time, two of our wards had been struck by shells and two of our patients killed, so we bowed to discretion, assembled our personnel, and took shelter. Bedlam now seemed indeed let loose.

Patients were pouring in, shells were shrieking about our heads furiously; our hearts were torn between our longing to do the work that so sadly needed to be done and our powerlessness to do it. After about an hour the scene became somewhat calmer and we ventured back to our work, but were soon compelled to abandon it entirely, and after all the patients and personnel had been again safely sheltered in the abri, we settled down to await a safe moment when we could evacuate our hospital and care for our patients in some place further to the rear. The night was now well spent and day was dawning. Our mess sergeant provided us with hot coffee and as much food as anyone had the heart to eat, and as the attack had somewhat slackened by this time we returned to our hospital and our quarters, gathered together all our effects (which were very few, as we had, a few days before, as a precautionary measure, sent all our baggage except our haversacks, to the rear), loaded them and our patients on our trucks and ambulances, and retreated a few kilometres, where we joined another hospital, and set to work immediately to care for our patients who had passed so ghastly a night with us in Bussy-le-Château. Though none of us had slept for many hours, no one realized it, and we persevered in our work till twelve o'clock the next night, when we felt we had made up in some degree the time lost the night before. We all realized we had passed through a strenuous twenty-four hours, but were apparently none the worse for it, and by this time the bulletins announced that we were winning the battle, which was all that mattered. Uncle Sam has since very generously commended us for the "fine courage" shown on this occasion, and to this we gratefully reply that we could do no less.

Thus was Mobile No. 2 received in her infancy and rudely put to the test by the enemy, and though she did retreat she did it strategically, in an orderly manner, and entirely "according to plan." Though it is not the Medical Corps' duty to seek or even desire revenge, yet it did fall to our lot when we, five months later, had the grim satisfaction of constituting a part of the Army of Occupation when it made its triumphal and victorious march into the land of those who had so long kept the world in horror and misery. We saw their haughty, blood-thirsty guns from the rear, silent and in ruins, and the miserable gunners crest-fallen and at our mercy. We had retreated before the enemy, but for that we appreciated all the more the glorious victory.

LETTER TO MISS MAXWELL FROM MISS DELIA M. BATTLES

"Somewhere in Siberia," December 2, 1918.

We have not received any mail from home for about five months, so am anxiously waiting for the Quarterly to see the result of your last visit to France. I have been so interested in all the work our nurses in France have done, and I am sure you must be very proud of them.

A New York reporter is going back to America, so am sending a message to you. I thought you might be interested in what the Red Cross is doing in Siberia. Just now our unit is in Omsk, the capital of All-Russia, we have been here during the revolution, we saw the last government overthrown and General Kolcharf put as dictator, but the whole affair was very quiet and we were not in any danger.

During the four months we have been in Siberia the Red Cross has established a three hundred bed base hospital and refugee hospital in Valadivostock, done work in a Russian military hospital in Harbin for two months, established a hospital in Bukhedu for tuberculosis patients, established a three hundred bed hospital in Tuman and is now engaged in establishing a one thousand bed hospital in Omsk. Even though peace terms are now being made in France, it has not stopped the struggle here. So far there has been only guerilla fighting at the front, but we have just heard that a defensive has been planned.

While we were waiting in Harbin, Manchuria, we helped care for the American Railroad Engineers. One lieutenant especially, was very sick, and we were glad of the opportunity of doing something for "our boys." The Red Cross work here is for the Czecho-Slovaks and Russians.

Our trip across the continent from Harbin to Omsk was most interesting. Although we were made very comfortable, everything showed evidence of disorder and confusion of war times. The beautiful Trans-Siberian cars were dirty and in a run down condition, the bullet holes and broken glass showed that our car had been fired on at some time. We beat our upholstery and washed the windows and woodwork in our coupes and sprinkled insect powder about our berths. Most of the cars were in need of repair and we travelled slowly. However, it was remarkable that after four years of war and a time of revolution, that the railroad was in such good condition. The scenery along the way was superb and varied. We passed through great plains on which were herds of cattle, horses and camels, and again we passed through birch forests and beautiful wooded mountains. As we proceeded along our trip we saw many evidences of the destructiveness of war, broken bridges, burned buildings and many buildings filled with bullet holes and in the close smelly stations there were always to be found poor refugees huddled together munching their bits of black bread. The Red Cross is doing a great deal toward feeding, clothing and housing these poor unfortunate people.

After we arrived in Omsk we obtained a large building for a thousand bed hospital. It was an agricultural school, beautifully located. The promise of the building was freely given, but it is quite another thing to obtain it. Nothing is done in a hurry in this country. The building is occupied by Cossack soldiers, they are comfortable and are not anxious to get out. We cannot get rooms so are obliged to remain in our car until we get into the hospital. The city, as it is, is overcrowded, people are living in box cars, in boats frozen in the river and many in dugouts under the ground. Our train stands in the tracks with other trains containing soldiers, refugees and freight. Just now there is a French cavalry train here and we can hear the horses stamping day and night. Cows, pigs and dogs run about and there is dirt everywhere. We are thankfuf that it is winter for at least, we are free from dust and smells.

Our train is lighted with candles and the water supply is scant. In our train the water is brought into the aisle in a pail, and we go out with our basin and scramble for a portion, more than once getting left. Just now a tub bath would be the greatest of luxuries.

Our first real cold morning, 25 degrees below, we awoke to find our car cold, the pipes frozen, and no water to wash with. Some of our discomforts were quite distressing, our berths were already inhabited by "bb's" when we arrived which kept us cleaning, but knowing the East, we came prepared with insect powder. Working among the refugees, some of us suffered the embarrassment of getting fleas and lice on us. While we wait, we sew, knit, help in refugee work and visit and study the Greek Catholic Cathedrals, which we find most interesting.

The supplies in all the shops in the towns in the interior of Siberia are very low. Shelf after shelf and case after case stand empty. The prices of the supplies that can be obtained are impossible, thirty dollars for a pair of shoes, sixty cents for a candle, two dollars and thirty cents a pound for sugar and everything else accordingly. Vegetables are scarce but other food supplies, such as meat, butter, milk and cheese are very plentiful.

So far the work here has been most interesting.

THE FLORENCE NIGHTINGALE SCHOOL OF NURSING IN FRANCE

By GRACE ELLISON

For over seventeen years now the teaching of Florence Nightingale has been put into practise at the Maison de Sante Protestante, Bordeaux, and to a woman of British origin, Dr. Anna Hamilton, is due the honor of introducing the work of our great British pioneer into France.

Up till the time of the separation of the French Church and State French nursing had been almost exclusively in the hands of the nuns; but, unfortunately, the nuns were allowed to leave France before there was time to train other women to take their place.

It was in the year 1900 that Dr. Anna Hamilton presented, at the University of Montpellier, the most brilliant and complete thesis of the year—a thesis which had taken her three years to write. During the years that she had studied for her medical degree and walked the hospitals at Marseille and Montpellier, she was struck by the unnecessary suffering of the patients, first of all from bad nursing, and, secondly, from being considered as specimens from which students were to learn their profession, rather than as sick and suffering mortals.

Dr. A. Hamilton was born at Florence, the birthplace of Florence Nightingale, and had from an early age read and digested the "Notes on Nursing" and all the writings of Florence Nightingale that she could procure. She was therefore soon awake to the many reforms necessary in French hospital life, and particularly to the need of educated women of high moral character to complete the work of the doctors as nurses. Accordingly she chose as the subject of her thesis, "Hospital Nurses," making several journeys to England in order to study the question first-hand and to give chapter and verse for all her statements. The thesis is a history of nursing from the fourth century up to the present day, showing the disadvantage of nursing being in the hands of either nuns or deaconesses; also the faults in the teaching of the existing French lay schools and the French Red Cross. Then it introduces the Florence Nightingale system of nursing as the only system which can give the best results. Naturally the thesis called forth the bitterest criticism from all, Roman Catholics and Protestants alike, also the French Red Cross and the existing nursing schools, and it wounded the amour-propre of the French women, who considered they did not require to turn to England to be "taught" to nurse.

Dr. Hamilton, however, set to work to find a hospital where she could introduce the principles of Florence Nightingale, and an opportunity presented itself at the Protestant Hospital, Bordeaux, where she became and is still the resident doctor and directrice of the Nursing School.

Her task has not been an easy one—no pioneer work is easy—and for many years it was hard to find French women of education who would undertake to became professional nurses, without the protection of the nun's veil to shield them from the criticism to which persons taking up a profession like nursing are exposed, even to-day, in France.

But the work of Dr. Hamilton is becoming known in France as it is known in the United States, and it is gratifying to see the American medical and nursing delegates as they land in Bordeaux come to pay their respects to the founder of the Florence Nightingale nursing in France, and the school whose history occupies thirty pages of Miss Dock's most interesting "History of Nursing."

When Dr. Hamilton first expressed her ideas about nursing, few took the trouble to follow such revolutionary ideas. Now, however, she has had an opportunity of showing what she can do. And not only has she turned her hospital into a hospital that can vie with any of our British hospitals for cleanliness, comfort, and good nursing, but she has trained educated women as first-class nurses.

In 1914 a splendid gift was made through Dr. Hamilton by a lady in Bordeaux, Mdlle. Elizabeth Bosc, who during her lifetime had taken the keenest interest in the training of nurses, and watched the work gradually extending. On her death her beautiful house and domain of sixteen acres, with a farm and flowers and fruit trees, were left to the hospital to build a much enlarged hospital school. Mdlle. Bosc felt what a necessary work it was to train good nurses, and she wanted to double the number; she felt, also, what a fine thing it would be for the poor of Bordeaux and the foreign sailors, for whom the Protestant Hospital was originally built, to enjoy the fine fresh air and beautiful surroundings of the home she loved. But funds were needed to build the hospital. War broke out and money became very scarce. Yet such a good and necessary work must and will find support. Which country will have the privilege of setting this scheme on foot—Florence Nightingale's native land or the U.S.A., where her teaching is best put into practice?

American delegates have come to France to help in all good works, and above all to help France to help herself; they have come to start dispensaries to fight the great white plague, tuberculosis, to care for the orphans and refugees—perhaps they have already seen that for all these works they must have trained nurses.

The professional value of the school is incontestable. Besides the tribute paid by the American experts, Misses Dock and Nutting, we have the opinion of the greatest living nursing expert, Mrs. Bedford Fenwick, who has visited the site of the future school. She writes: "The work is a wonderful educational work, and it would be of the greatest benefit as a standard of nursing in France. The school should not only be extended, but imitated in other localities, and we imagine no greater work connected with reconstruction than the provision of thoroughly qualified French nurses."

Dr. Hamilton is naturally proud of this professional appreciation from the pen of a woman who for forty years has never ceased to defend the interests of nursing.

Dr. Hamilton is a naturalized Frenchwoman. Her mother is French, and her uncle, the celebrated French Protestant preacher Leon Pilatte, is the founder of the "Eglise Libre." On her father's side she descends from the Scotch Hamiltons, and to her great grandfather, General Sir. William Ponsonby, a monument has been erected by public subscription in St. Paul's Cathedral for his services on the field of Waterloo. We feel sure that if the need of help to enlarge her hospital were better known, help would be sent to her at once. Who will help in this work of mercy?

This establishment, founded in 1863, recognized by Napolëon the Third, in 1867, as an "Establishment d'utilité publique," receives since 1879 a yearly allowance from the Bordeaux town council, amounting to Fcs. 10,000—that is, one-fifth of its present annual expenses, the Protestants of Bordeaux providing for the remainder.

It consists of:

1. A hospital service of Medicine, Surgery, and special departments for men, women and children, with free treatment for indigent Protestants of Bordeaux, especially British, American and Scandinavian sailors who are very grateful to find a hospital which reminds them of their home, and where the English language is spoken.

(More than 15,000 have been admitted to the hospital.)

Twenty-two doctors, chosen from the best of the town, are entrusted with the medical service of the establishment, which has also a resident doctor.

They are assisted by six fully certified nurses and twenty nurses in training (probationers).

2. A small section for paying cases, including several rooms for sick people of small means.

3. A Maternity service, with consultations for infants, created in 1903, attended by three "agrégé accoucheurs" and one lady doctor.

4. A dispensary, created in 1876, receiving all poor applicants without distinction; an average number of 96 consultations are held every month, and numerous operations take place in this dispensary, which receives about 12,000 yearly applicants.

5. A gratuitous distribution of remedies, bandages, etc., which enables a great many poor people to be cared for at home. More than 1,000 free prescriptions are given yearly, as well as numerous orthopaedic or electric-therapic treatments.

6. A service of "visiting nurses to the poor," created in 1908, to give attention to poor people who cannot come to the dispensary.

Since the beginning of the war, many ill or wounded poor people have been visited and attended at home. They have received 3,440 visits and have been provided with 4,068 dressings.

7. A service of nurses who attended to ill and wounded people at their own homes, for those not rich enough to take a nurse in the house but who can pay for one or two hours a day of professional attendance.

8. A free register for nurses, to answer demands for trained nurses and find employment for same.

9. A school for nurses, created in 1884, reorganized sixteen years ago, according to the Florence Nightingale system, receiving paying and non-paying pupils of every religion, who follow a complete course of study in the establishment, training themselves for service in civil hospitals, clinics, or for private nursing.

This school, since its reorganization in 1901, has delivered 106 diplomas and has twenty pupils actually following the studies.

Taking a general view of the history of the Maison de Sante Protestante, we can point out seven important innovations:

(a) In 1870, a field-hospital service, spontaneously offered to the military authorities.

(b) In 1870-71, public and gratuitous vaccination.

(c) In 1876, opening of an out-patient department, the first in the town.

(d) In 1882, creation of the first sanatorium for children in France, at le Moulleau, near Arcachon, (now an independent establishment).

(e) In 1884, foundation of the first nursing school in France, free and gratuitous, which was gradually improved to its present state.

(f) In 1903, the first consultation for infants in Bordeaux.

(g) In 1908, the first visiting nurse for the poor in France began her service, which has never ceased.

In 1914, directly after the outbreak of the war, one part of the building under the title of "Auxiliary Hospital No. 2," was set aside for the wounded soldiers.

On the first of May, 1917, this hospital had recorded 33,988 days of hospitalisation. On December 1st, 1918, there were 57,259 days.

The civilians' service was continued, nevertheless, giving a total of 20,450 hospital days for the same period, whereas the Dispensary gave 24,113 consultations, and the service of the Visiting Nurse for the poor amounted to 3,440 visits, with 4,065 dressings for wounds, etc.

The Nursing School continued, and we had a very large demand for our trained nurses, for Military or Red Cross Auxiliary Hospitals.

At the date of December 27, 1914, through the death of Miss Elizabeth Bosc, the Maison de Sante Protestante of Bordeaux inherited the domaine (small estate) of "Bagatelle," situated in the Commune of Talence, at the confines of the town, on the national road between Bordeaux and Toulouse.

The testatrix had on several occasions expressed the wish that the services of the Maison de Sante Protestante should be transferred to Bagatelle. The Administrators had therefore to examine whether this wish could possibly be put into execution; they knew the changes which have taken place in hospital technic and that the "park hospitals" are now much to be preferred to the ancient type of hospitals, which could be described more as "barracks."

The Administrators fully realized that the building of the rue Cassignol had been utilized to the utmost, and that space was wanting to establish a really modern organization, to isolate sufficiently the different sections, and to fit them all on the same floor. It also clearly appeared that new services which would later on be of great use, through lack of space could never be established, and that to lodge all the nurses of the establishment was a practical impossibility.

Therefore, notwithstanding a high offer which was made to the Administration for the purchase of the Domaine of Bagatelle, it was resolved, for the reasons given above, to study fully the possibility of transferring the whole establishment to the domaine bequeathed by Miss Bosc for that purpose.

A plan was prepared, with an estimate which in February, 1915, reached Fcs. 400,000, owing to the tremendous in-increase in cost of all materials.

In 1916, the architect declared that, on account of the rise of price for building material and workmanship due to the war, the same estimate would be increased by Fcs. 200,000. At the present date (May, 1917,) the architect, questioned again, answered that the execution of the same plan had to be estimated about Fcs. 800,000. This figure would perhaps be reduced if things come back to normal conditions. Yet everything had been planned out in the simplest, though modern fashion: the new premises, equivalent to the ancient, with an increase of about 100 beds—that is a total of 210 beds— seven wards and twenty-four rooms, an out outpatient department, and lastly a Nursing School, really well organized, with lecture hall and drawing rooms according to the English and specially American principles.

In the year 1918, the estimate was 1,500,000 francs.

The Maison de Sante Protestante of Bordeaux has existed fifty-four years, has rendered great service to the sick of all religions, which caused it to be recognized for public utility by the Government, and to receive yearly allowances from the town of Bordeaux.

It possesses premises at rue Cassignol, valued at Fcs. 225.000, and a small estate on the National road of Toulouse, valued at Fcs. 250,000. It disposes of about Fcs 12,000 income, and the annual budget is covered without deficiency, thanks to the generous collaboration of the Bordeaux Protestants and the Municipality.

It is well known in Bordeaux and all through France for the services rendered to poor and needy people. Its nursing school, Florence Nightingale system, draws young women from everywhere; its recruitment is unique in France as regards the education and instruction of the candidates, more than half of whom pay their board to obtain the privilege of studying at the establishment.

The certified nurses of the school are much sought after by military and civil hospitals, the number of requests always being greater than the number of candidates, especially since the war broke out.

What is wanted at the Maison de Sante Protestante de Bordeaux is the means of becoming more modern, of increasing the number of its beds, and organizing its school so that by means of its nurses it may spread over the whole of France—to be equal, now and later on, to cope with the considerable misery and illness which will be the consequence of the war, in the different social classes.

It is with this aim that it appeals to those who are interested in France and wish to contribute in lightening her present and future burdens and difficulties.

ALUMNAE NEWS

A son was born to Dr. and Mrs. Vermilye, (Elise Hillyer, '13) in Etretat, France, November 9th.

Rosa Muller, '11, is in charge of a war orphanage, in Etretat, founded by an American woman. Miss Muller was one of the pioneer volunteer nurses of the American Ambulance at Neuilly at the beginning of the war, and last year the French Government bestowed upon her the gold medal dés epidemics for distinguished services. In December she was presented with the insignia for three years' war service.

Ruth G. Clark, '99, is in charge of the Faulkner Hospital, Jamaica Plain, Boston, Mass. She writes that it is a very attractive hospital.

Grace A. Meeker, '13, writes of her work just begun, in the Union Labor Hospital, Eureka, California. For three months of the winter, she was at the Letterman General Hospital, Presidio, Cal., and had charge of the largest influenza ward during the epidemic. The hospital of which she is now Superintendent of Nurses is a forty-bed institution, in a mining, lumbering, and ship-building community. It is on the coast, 280 miles north of San Francisco, in the redwood section of the State.

A letter from Helen Kendall, '17, from India, is full of interesting news. At the time the letter was written, early in December, she was specialling Frances Goheen, her classmate, who had been operated upon for intestinal obstruction, and had been, for a time, in a very serious condition, but was progressing satisfactorily then. The work in the hospital of which Miss Kendall is in charge, is mostly surgical, with a good deal of eye work, four operating rooms being in use nearly every day in the week. There are thirteen native nurses on the staff, with some volunteer workers. It has not been possible to start a regular training school as yet, for the demands of the work are so great and the number of assistants so small that it is all they can do to get the work done. Both Miss Goheen and Miss Kendall were ill with influenza, the epidemic causing deaths in India by the thousand, during its height. Miss Kendall writes with much enthusiasm about her work, and says there is need for more workers there in India.

Elizabeth Fenner, '17, who has been at Camp Lee for several months, writes of the interesting results which are to be seen in the reconstruction work that is being done with the men returned from over-seas, Physio-therapy, and occupational instruction.

War camp letters are all full of the tragedies of the epidemic, and the figures in some of them are enormous. Miss Whitson, '05, writing from Camp Lewis Washington, says that she had charge of a ward with fifty-eight pneumonia cases, the ward later reduced to only forty-four beds for the greater safety of the patients. There were 3,500 cases of influenza in camp during the epidemic. She had as assistants four graduate nurses, four pupil nurses, three corps men, one K. P. with his staff of convalescent patients, and the Ward Master and his assistants, quite a problem in maintaining discipline and keeping peace, between drafted and enlisted men. The Army Training School had eighty nurses who had received their caps, and it was expected that by January first, there would be over a hundred pupil nurses in the school. Camp Lee is the largest in the U. S. and one of twenty-seven to be made a permanent cantonment. On Christmas Day there were 30,000 men there. There were four hundred nurses there during the epidemic, fifty of them being civilians called in to help. Horse-back riding is the chief form of recreation there, an officer or an orderly always accompanying the nurses when they go out.

A son was born to Mr. and Mrs. Robert H. Hoff, (Myrtle Gould, '14) December 26th, 1918.

The following Presbyterian nurses went with the Unit which sailed late in February for Turkey, under the auspices of the American Committee for Relief in the Near East, their address being: Care Dr. W. W. Peet, Bible House, Constantinople, Turkey:

Mary Magoun Brown,' 97.
Elizabeth Stirling Frost, '14.
Rachel King, '17.
Blanche Stewart Easton, '18.
Gladys G. Curry, '18.
Helen Jameson, '18.
Frances Huntington, '18.
Katherine A. H. Twidale, '18.

Mrs. Christie has been quite ill since returning from France.

A daughter was born to Mrs. Louis A. de Ronde (Louise Foote, '14) last October.

Annie Thomas, '05, recently returned with the P. H. Unit, is back at her old post, in charge of the Social Service at P. H.

Anne Piper, '16, is again in charge of Men's Medical.

Cordelia Jackson, '18, is in charge of the Accident Ward.

Marie Thompson, Mildred Parkins, both of '10, and Helen Latimer, '13, are on a transport in Canadian Service.

Frances Rolfe Kimball, '14, Ruth Simpson, '09, and Iva Haff, '18, are at Nursery and Childs Hospital.

Anne Penland has resumed her work as an aesthetist in the Operating Room, at P. H.

A daughter was born to Major and Mrs. H. B. Boyd (Vernon Smith, '06) on January 18th, 1919, in London, England.

Gertrude Reid Smith, '01, is taking a course in Public Health Nursing at Teachers' College in order to make a specialty of this work.

Mrs. P. C. Field assisted during the epidemic in the Children's ward of the Memorial Hospital, Morristown, N. J., and the Children's Country Home.

Mrs. William Van Kirk, (Lilias Savage, '96) assisted as volunteer visitor in the relief work of the Charity Organization, Montreal, Canada, during the epidemic.

The marriage is announced of Jessie Mary Mundie, '12, to Lieutenant William Macdonald of the 52nd Canadians, C. E. F., on January 27th, at Folkstone, England.

Dorothy Brown, '07, and Mr. Frederick Corning Knote were married on March 15th, in the City of New York.

Dora M. Anderson and Lieutenant Carroll Ray Hutchins, U. S. A., were married, at Panama, N. Y., March 20th. They will be at home after April 15th in Fort Sill, Oklahoma.

Marjorie Parker Armstrong, '14, is now Mrs. Quintard Taylor, residing in White Sulphur Springs, West Virginia.

Kathleen Wilson, '18, has been invalided home, following a serious illness due to blood-poisoning, from which, she writes, only a strong constitution with good resistance saved her.

The following extracts are taken from a letter from Ednah C. Smith, Camp Hospital 85, Montoir, France, American E. F.: "Montoir has one of the biggest of the evacuation camps. Yesterday I went over to watch the troops in one of the enormous mess halls. I cannot tell how many boys are fed in an hour, but it is a wonderful sight. Our chief trouble now with the boys is trying to overcome homesickness. They are growing very impatient. On March 16th I am expecting to leave for my fourteen-day trip. We are going down to the Spanish border by way of Bordeaux and the western coast, then across the southern border to Nice and up to Paris. It will be my first sight-seeing trip. . . . . A very strange coincidence happened to me recently. One of the nurses who came about six weeks after we did thought I looked familiar and we found that she had been a patient in Ward Six, in the little room.

Florence A. St. John, '18, writes from "Three miles from Tours, in the Chateau district of France": We are at a Reclassification Hospital of 2,000 beds and manage to have plenty to do. Miss Helen Clark, who is in charge of the Officers' Ward had as a patient Mayor Lathrop, the Presbyterian interne, so we have had some fine talks about the hospital. He told us that Doctors Alexander and Larson are doing such good work where they are. Miss Williams and I are assistants to the Chief Nurse, and enjoy very much learning the ins and outs of a large Army Hospital. Captain Knaff, an old Roosevelt interne, is Chief of the Medical Service here, and was so surprised to find four nurses from P. H. We appreciate our splendid training more and more, Miss Maxwell, and the happy faculty you have of choosing women who are suited to the profession. They are all not that, I have learned.

P. H. nurses who do special nursing at the Hospital will be interested to know that the Managers have increased the rates to $4.50 per day for each 12 hours of duty, in the Hospital.

The price of the Alumnae pins, formerly $4.00, has been raised to $5.50.

GRADUATION

The Twenty-fifth Anniversary of the First Graduation.

Graduation this year resumed some of its former festive air, so much missed while our Unit was on the other side taking part in the War. The Assembly Hall was decorated as "before the war," and the graduating class carried their graduation red roses once more.

Dr. Walter B. James, who needs no introduction to Presbyterian Hospital Alumnae, made the address, the keynote of which was a charge to the out-going nurses to keep up the team-work, which has made the Presbyterian Hospital successful in its work in past years, team-work in all departments, and just as keen a sense of loyalty to Presbyterian standards as had been maintained while they were in the training school.

Miss Grace L. Wheeler of the Class of 1920 sang two delightful songs, beautifully, adding to the charm of the music the pleasure of heading it from one of "our own."

Mr. Sloane made an announcement which brought forth loud applause—an anonymous gift of $25,000 to the Pension Fund, in honor of this, the twenty-fifth graduation of the training school. Mr. Sloane presented the diplomas, and Mr. Delano the pins. The reception and dancing after the exercises were enjoyed with freedom from that restraint which had been so apparent during the war period.

ALUMNAE DAY

The day after graduation, at the morning session called for the special purpose of discussing the Pension Fund, there were about 30 members present. Dr. Fisher opened the subject, presenting some very intersting data which he had been good enough to take the time to secure for this occasion, from such sourses as the Carnegie Foundation Fund for the pensioning of retired professors and the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company. The Carnegie Fund, which started out with something over a million dollars, has failed to carry out its original purpose, through the lack of funds, because each year adds so many people to the list of eligibles that the pensions increase out of all proportion to the income. The Life Insurance figures show that in the ordinary course of events, taking the figures from groups of thousands of women of the age and earning capacity of the average of our nurses, the pensions which would be due to be paid in the course of five years, at the rate of $300 a year, would amount to $15,000 a year, while the income on the present $100,000 now in the Pension Fund will amount to $5,000 a year.

The above facts make it quite clear that it is impossible to plan to pay pensions to every alumna who has spent a certain number of years in active nursing, simply for that reason, and it was the opinion of those present at this meeting, that it would be best to make the rules governing the administration of the Pension Fund to cover cases of actual need—an amount to supplement the small income which every nurse ought to have after having earned for twenty or twenty-five years. Dr. Fisher demonstrated quite clearly the impossibility of the plan which some have desired in connection with the Pension Fund, of paying in a certain sum each year with the definite understanding that in a certain time a specified amount can be returned. That sort of business belongs to the Insurance Companies and the Savings Banks. Whatever goes into the Pension Fund should be given in the hope that the donor will never need it herself.

An effort was made to have a verbatim report of the discussion of the morning, but it was difficult for a stenographer not familiar with the subject to make anything clear out of the questions which were brought up. Many questions were asked which started discussion, themselves remaining unanswered.

The following is a summary of the discussion:

Miss Maxwell thought that the donors of large gifts to the Pension Fund had in mind only that the Fund should be ready to use for those nurses who should be in need, that none of our graduates should ever want for the necessities.

The question was then raised as to the propriety of retaining the name "Pension Fund." Does Pension Fund imply that every person passing the service time is to draw a pension whether it is needed or not? There seemed to be a difference of opinion about this, but generally it was thought that the term "Pension Fund" might be retained with perfect consistency even though in the case of this association it may mean the giving of assistance along the lines of a Relief Fund.

The Alumnae Association of Mt. Sinai has had sad experience in the administration of their Pension Fund, to the extent that some of the donors of large amount have withdrawn their gifts. Their effort to pay pensions to everybody has failed utterly. Miss Maxwell reported having investigated a Pension Fund which exists in England, for nurses, which is governed by a committee which decides upon the eligibility of applicants, according to their term of service and their needs. In other words, it appeared from the discussion that it is consistent to approach the operation of the the Pension Fund from the standpoint of paying pensions only to those who need them, and not to all who qualify from age and term of service, etc., etc. It will be observed from reading the Report of the Pension Fund Committee that the use of the Pension Fund does not bar any member from the benefits of the Benefit Fund, and it will also be seen that the Benefit Fund takes care of situations not covered by the Pension Fund.

The following motions were made and carried: That the Report be accepted as a whole (this for the purpose of opening the subject for discussion): That the name "Pension Fund of the Alumnae Association of the Presbyterian Hospital Training School for Nurses" be retained: That no definite action be taken at this meeting, but the matter be held for action at the next annual meeting: That the President be authorized to make use of the Quarterly in every possible way to bring the subject before all the members of the Alumnae during the next year: That a copy of this report appear in the July Quarterly, and that copies be mailed, beside, to all members in order to emphasize the importance of the subject: That a member of each class be asked to see that every member of her class receive this report with a personal request to consider the matter very carefully.

It should be the subject uppermost in all discussions of Alumnae affairs during the coming year, and those members who are at a distance from New York should be urged to send their opinions in writing to the Chairman of the Pension Fund Committee, Miss Frances Stone. It is no small responsibility for our Association to handle such a large sum of money, now over $105,000, and it must be with hard business sense and the best advice we can secure and entirely without sentimentality that we approach the undertaking. It is also essential that the final action represent the voice of the majority, and not that of the faithful few who always attend the meetings, not more than forty or fifty at most.

It must be clearly understood that no definite plans have as yet been made concerning the operation of the Pension Fund, and that recommendations and suggestions are in order.

REPORT OF PENSION FUND COMMITTEE

In considering the various problems connected with the Pension Fund, your committee has kept in mind the spirit and suggestion of Mr. Kennedy and Mr. Sturges, namely: the establishment of a fund for the benefit of the members of the Alumnae, after they had reached an age when they might be incapacitated for earning, and in need of some financial assistance.

Eligibility

1—Permanent or temporary disability occurring after a term of service covering twenty-five years or more.

2—Conditions arising through the period of less duration than twenty-five years of service be considered under the terms of the Benefit Fund.

Amount

3—The amount of pension to be determined through a knowledge of the financial standing of the applicant, and to be adjusted according to the individual necessity—not to exceed ($?) per annum. (To be decided upon later.)

4—A pension should not be considered a claim to a sufficient amount to maintain an alumna, but as a supplement to be used when conditions have arisen making it impossible for her to provide adequately for a time of disability.

5—The recipient of the Pension Fund not to lose the privileges of the Benefit Fund.

Committee

6—That a committee of five be appointed as follows: One member for five years, one member for four years, one member for three years, one member for two years, one member for one year; thereafter, appointments to be made for five years each.

7—Any vacancy occurring to be temporarily filled by the committee, subject to the approval of the Association at its next regular meeting.

8—This ruling to be placed with the articles of the By-Laws when approved by the Alumnae Association.

THE ANNUAL MEETING

The annual meeting was preceded by a luncheon given in honor of the graduating class with Dr. Fisher, Miss Maxwell, Mrs. Hartwell, Miss Burns, Miss Willson as guests of honor. Miss Burnes is doing notable work as an industrial nurse in Newark, New Jersey, and she gave a very interesting talk on "Opportunities for Nurses in Civic Welfare." Miss Willson spoke on "Rank for Nurses." The luncheon was delightful and all voted formally and informally votes of thanks to those who were responsible for it. The only embarrassment which occurred was due to many coming for lunch who had not sent their R. S. V.P., for which there can hardly be criticism on the luncheon committee, as cards were sent to all, that any who cared to do so might come for the lunch by simply sending word that they would be there.

The meeting was called to order at three o'clock, with fifty members present, aside from the Class of 1919. The usual routine business was accomplished, including the reading of reports which were accepted and placed on file. A copy of the report of the Red Cross Committee and of the treasurer appears in this issue of the Quarterly. The graduating class was accepted into membership by unanimous rising vote of the members present. A communication from The Relief Fund Committee of the A. N. A. was read urging the continuation of our contributions to this most worthy cause. It was voted that a pledge of twenty cents per capita annually for five years be made, the motion being carried.

At the request of the Revision Committee of the A. N. A. that all alumnae associations withdraw their membership in the A. N. A. in order to comply with the provisions of the new plan of membership, a motion was made and carried that the secretary be instructed to forward our resignation.

A communication was read from the New York County Nurses' Association requesting contributions toward the expenses of the legislative committee of the state for the year 1919, for which it was voted to send an amount equal to ten cents per capita.

Rank for Nurses was discussed and it was voted to send resolutions of this association to the Committee on Rank for Nurses endorsing whatever action seemed best to that committee to be brought up at the next session of Congress, with the suggestion that the government make the improvement in the military status of the nurse a memorial to Miss Jane Delano.

A resolution was offered expressing to Mrs. Christie the appreciation of the Association for her successful conduct of the P. H. Unit to France and back again, returned home in good health and intact, save for one who gave her life in the Cause, in France.

The President was instructed to appoint a committee to draw up suitable resolutions on Miss Delano's death, to be send to National Headquarters at Washington.

The report of the nominating committee was accepted without additions, and the secretary was instructed to cast the ballot, after which the meeting adjourned, at five-thirty P. M. The officers for the ensuing year will be found on the directory page.

THE GIFT OF $25,000 TO THE PENSION FUND

The gift of $25,000 which was announced at the graduating exercises as coming from an anonymous friend appears to have come from Mr. William Sloane, and we take great pleasure in making this acknowledgement with our deepest gratitude to him for his interest and generosity in taking our pension fund over the top of the hundred-thousand-dollar mark in such a splendid way.

REPORT OF RED CROSS COMMITTEE

May 15, 1919

During the past year there has been nothing outsanding to report regarding the activities of the Red Cross in connection with the Presbyterian Hospital Alumnae. The return of the Unit has been announced in the Quarterly, so the members of the Alumnae are all familiar with that joyful event. A small group of our graduates have joined the Serbian Relief—Mary Magoun Brown, '97, Elizabeth Stirling Frost, '14, Rachel King, '17, and five members of Class '18: Gladys Alma Curry, Blanche Stewart Easton, Frances Huntington, Elsie Jameson and Katherine A. H. Twidale. At present a relief unit for Siberia is being prepared, the personnel of which when complete will be announced in the Quarterly.

Miss Anna J. Culgin will make known in her report the fact that Red Cross Auxiliary No. 307, which was so active during the war, has disbanded. These earnest workers occupied room 330 in the hall where they spent many busy hours. The Auxiliary had a balance in the bank of from three to four dollars which was turned in to the Pension Fund.

We expect the present Senior Class to join the Red Cross even though some at present are not able to go on the active service list.

HELEN YOUNG,
Chairman Red Cross Committee.

FROM A. C. R. N. E.

An Interesting Letter from Rachael King, '17

Paradise, Smyrna, Anatolia,

April 17, 1919.

Dear Miss Maxwell:

No trip could have been more interesting than this has been. We traveled from Brest to Marseilles on a hospital troop train, where we ate soldiers' "slum" three times a day and slept thirty-six to a car in bunks three up. The British transport "Gloucester Castle" was waiting for us there, an brought us straight to Constantinople stopping two days in Salonica where we were rowed ashore and allowed to see the city. There were lots of British officers stationed there and they took us through old mosques, minerets and up to the ramparts. No one could have been more courteous and thoughtful than the English have been to us during the entire trip. There was difficulty in getting houses for us in Constantinople. Some were fixed up in a train, others stayed at the Bible House, and the rest on one of the Princess Islands called Prinkipo. It was about two hours' boat ride from the city and a beautiful place, made up of big estates and gardens. Most of the houses were empty and we were free to wander all over the island as also were over a hundred German officers interned there and waiting trial for Armenian massacres.

One little English Tommy says, "Oh, don't be afraid, there are 'aight' of us."

Both the Armenians and Greeks gave us big receptions of welcome in which they delivered addresses in their own language some of which were interpreted for us. They idealize America and we could never hope to be what they think we are. We had beautiful big rooms with balconies overhanging the sea of Marmora, and nice clean beds but no hot water and only candle light because of the scarcity of fuel.

First morning we woke up and with one accord all scratched and haven't stopped since. Fleas are particularly fond of Miss Easton and me. Our food variety for the week we were there consisted of fish, macaroni, rice, greens and bread, occasionally meat and an orange for desert.

One day an American sub chaser stopped at our back door and took us all to Derindje, a naval port on the Bay of Ismid. There were four large former German warehouses there where the relief supplies are stored. The women have hospital cots up on the fifth floor of one and the men in another. Other than being very cold, it was quite comfortable. We were under military discipline, and not allowed beyond the barbed wire without armed guards. We were all assigned to duties wherever needed, for checking supplies, when they were loaded on trains sent out to the interior, doing office work, bossing laundry hands or doing guard duty. I was a warehouse M. P. There was always danger of fire or the natives getting away with our stuff and they certainly were clever at it. Gangs of red fezzed Turks looked rather formidable at first but I've seen four of them go down on their knees and throw up their hands when a nurse pointed her club accusingly at them.

It wasn't long before sick people began to crowd in and four tents were put up. One for a dispensary and three for fever patients too sick to let go. A Turkish official brought a sick child in one day which was apparently at the worst stage of pneumonia. They sent a nurse and doctor over to see it twice a day, gave sponges and other treatments and proper food. Second day the temperature dropped and the child picked up so rapidly that the people thought it a miracle. That was enough to put us in good favor among the people in all the nearby villages. All kinds of skin diseases and accident cases kept coming in constantly.

After two weeks there Miss Easton and I were sent here with a medical unit of twelve and hospital equipment. We came on the Bagdad-Berlin railroad on a freight train. Two box cars were fitted up with cots for sleeping and one contained food supplies, and an oilstove for cooking. The train stopped about every hour so you could plan on all getting in the dining car near meal time. Eating was a problem as things bobbed up and down and slid around the table and stove. This train was typical of the East. Each stop was anywhere from twenty minutes to eight hours. When she started the train men did a lot of shouting, a bell was rung in the station, the train man blew a whistle, then the engine blew a couple of minutes and you were off. There's no such expression "too late" here. Going up grade she just crawls but down grade you trust in Allah, and the engine reverse if necessary, and fairly fly. The braking system doesn't work and you often are out of sight of the station before stopping. On flat open cars we had a Ford, an ambulance, truck, and tractor in which we all sat during the day and saw a good part of Asia Minor. It took us five days and certainly was great fun. For a whole day you'd see nothing but smooth hills and no trees, but an occasional flock of sheep or village. Then suddenly you come on the edge of a deep gorge or go over mountains from which the views were beautiful, especially at sunset.

We had time to walk through several small towns, one of which was the ancient Philadelphia, but have not seen any of the starving Armenians yet. The people all look remarkably fat and contented squatting around in their dirt and rags. We arrived in Smyrna Saturday noon and lived in our train in the freight yard three days till a house could be secured and hospital decided upon. We finally secured this empty house out in the suburbs and are staying here till we can get started. Nothing could look more out of place than our great long truck in a street of Smyrna. The streets are so narrow and crooked that you can't get it around the corners without upsetting a corner house. We are all having a great time, and certainly seing lots but are anxious to get started in our work.

Remember me to Miss Young and everyone. Miss Easton and I often talk about you all and wish we could be back to tell some of our experiences.

Very sincerely yours,

RACHEL KING.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS

The following is an extract from a letter written by Delia Battles, '15, dated May 19, 1919, Mission Hospital, Haijii, Korea.

"When in Vladivostock on my way home from Siberia, I met Grace Moore Potter. She had charge of the Canadian Red Cross Relief work there. Her little office was filled with packages and supplies. We sat on half-nailed boxes and talked of the Red Cross Unit in France and the latest P. H. news. It was so refreshing to meet her, and to know that there was another P. H. nurse able to come and serve in Siberia.

"I had another delightful surprise a few weeks ago, when I learned that Lillian Van Stiem is located in Japan. She writes that she is busy housekeeping and studying the Japanese language."

Ruth Eddy, '11, writes from American Red Cross, Tripoli, Syria, as follows:

"I have been living such a wandering life since leaving America that my things are all scattered hopelessly. I was in Cairo doing Y. M. C. A. work for two years and then I was in the Canal with the Australians for one year doing the same work, and then put in seven months at Jerusalem, Palestine, where I left the British and joined the American Red Cross Commission to Palestine and the Near East.

"These have been years just brim full of experience and variety and interest. You cannot realize how much I have enjoyed them. I am so happy here I do not know when I will come back to America."

The following letter has been received from Grace E. Potter, '99:

Vladivostock, Russia, June, 1919.

"Since our arrival we have had plenty of work to do, each day being busier than the preceding one. It has been a very interesting experience and I hope we have helped the situation a little, but that remains to be seen.

"Miss Battles and her P. H. nurse came to see me one day when she was down from Omsk for a few days and we had a good old P. H. chat.

"Our workers are Russian. They do splendid work and deeply interested in all our nursing methods.

"I am sure the P. H .Unit must be delighted at being home once more. The Quarterly came and it was splendid to read about all the P. H. happenings in this far distant country."

NEWS NOTES

Colonel William Darrach has been appointed Dean of the College of Physicians and Surgeons. Following is an extract from the The New York Times:

"Colonel William Darrach, M.D., has been appointed Dean of the College of Physicians and Surgeons of Columbia University, it was announced at the university last night, to succeed Dr. Samuel W. Lambert, whose resignation was accepted by the Trustees of the university a month ago to take effect on July 1. Colonel Darrach, who served as a surgeon with the British and the American Expeditionary Forces at the western front for more than two year, received his discharge from the American Army less than a month ago.

"Colonel Darrach, who is well known for his administrative ability and organization work among New York hospitals, including Roosevelt and the Presbyterian Hospitals, received his commission in May, 1917, and left for the western front with Base Hospital No. 2 on May 14, 1917. From July 20 to September 14, 1917, he served with the British Casualty Station No. 47 in France, and from February until July 19, 1918, he was the commanding officer of General Hospital No. 1 of the British Expeditionary Forces.

"Transferred to the American forces as consulting surgeon with the First Corps he served until October, when he was attached to the headquarters of the First Army. A month later he was appointed senior consulting surgeon at the Third Army headquarters. Colonel Darrach received the rank of Lieutenant Colonel in June, 1918. and was promoted to Colonel last March for distinguished service."

Dr. Charles H. Young has returned from abroad and having been discharged from service, has resumed his duties at the Presbyterian Hospital.

The death of Jane A. Delano, Director General of the Department of Nursing in the Red Cross, brought to an end a splendid career of achievement and self-sacrifice. Miss Delano died on April 15, 1919, at Savaney, France, in the service of the American Red Cross.

On Thursday evening, May 8, 1919, a meeting in honor of her memory was held at Carnegie Hall, N. Y. Prominent speakers told of her career and paid tribute to her character.

Miss Delano crowned her life work by recruiting 30,000 nurses for the service of the great war.

MISS HUTCHISON

Miss Mary E. Hutchison, who has been for seventeen years the principal of the training school at Sloane Maternity Hospital, and who is known to a very large number of the graduates of P. H., has resigned her position and will take a long vacation before resuming work. Sloane has always been so closely identified with the work of the training school at P. H. that the changes which take place there are of interest and importance to P. H. nurses.

Miss Hutchison has accomplished important work in standardizing the practise of obstetrical nursing and her departure from the special field of maternity work, if it is to be permanent, will be a distinct loss to that particular branch of the profession.

THE QUARTERLY MAGAZINE, which means all its readers, wishes her God-speed and a good rest, and accepts this opportunity to express appreciation of the splendid contribution she has made to the history of the nursing profession.

Just as the Quarterly goes to press, the news is received of the death of Dr. Woolsey who was with the Unit.

The last incident in the career of Edith Cavell took place on May 15, 1919, after an impressive service in Westminster Abbey, the body of the martyred nurse was laid to rest in Life's Green, near Norwich Cathedral. The burial took place with full military honors.

The Following Are Copies of Letters Received from the War Department, re. P. H. Unit

G. H. Q.
American Expeditionary Forces,
France, February 28, 1919.

General Orders, No. 38-A.
My Fellow Soldiers:

Now that your service with the American Expeditionary Forces is about to terminate, I cannot let you go without a personal word. At the call to arms, the patriotic young manhood of America eagerly responded and became the formidable army whose decisive victories testify to its efficiency and its valor. With the support of the nation firmly united to defend the cause of liberty, our army has executed the will of the people with resolute purpose. Our democracy was been tested, and the forces of autocracy have been defeated. To the glory of the citizen-soldier, our troops have faithfully fulfilled their trust, and in a succession of brilliant offensives have overcome the menace to our civilization.

As an individual, your part in the world war has been an important one in the sum total of our achievements. Whether keeping lonely vigil in the trenches, or gallantly storming the nemy's stronghold; whether enduring monotonous drudgery at the rear, or sustaining the fighting line at the front, each has bravely and efficiently played his part. By willing sacrifice of personal rights; by cheerful endurance of hardship and privation; by vigor, strength and indomitable will, made effective by thorough organization and cordial co-operation, you inspired the war-worn Allies with new life and turned the tide of threatened defeat into overwhelming victory.

With a consecrated devotion to duty and a will to conquer, you have loyally served your country. By your exemplary conduct a standard has been established and maintained never before attaind by any army. With mind and body as clean and strong as the decisive blows you delivered against the foe, you are soon to return to the pursuits of peace. In leaving the scenes of your victories, may I ask that you carry home your high ideals and continue to live as you have served—an honor to the principles for which you have fought and to the fallen comrades you leave behind.

It is with pride in our success that I extend to you my sincere thanks for your splendid service to the army and to the nation.

Faithfully,
JOHN J. PERSHING,
Commander in Chief.

Official: Robert C. Davis, Adjutant General

War Department, Office of the Surgeon General,
Washington, D. C., March 1, 1919.

Board of Trustees,
Presbyterian Hospital, New York City.
Gentlemen:

Red Cross Base Hospital No. 2, accredited to the Presbyterian Hospital, having been returned to this country for demobilization, I take this opportunity to express my appreciation of the invaluable service rendered the Nation by this splendid organization.

It will always be remembered that the first organizations of the American Army to be sent overseas were six Red Cross base hospitals, and at the time of the great Allied offensive, beginning July 18, 1918, thirty-nine of the forty-five base hospitals on duty in France and England were Red Cross hospitals.

Their readiness for service and the patriotic devotion to duty, as well as the professional excellence of the personnel of these organizations, have made them the chief reliance of the medical service of the forces in France, while those on duty with the British have rendered equally valuable and appreciated aid to the British Army.

It is earnestly recommended that effective measures be taken by you to keep the organization of your unit intact and that every effort be made to imbue its future personnel with the fine esprit to be expected in the possessors of the glorious heritage of splendid achievement handed down from the Great War by the original personnel of Base Hospital No. 2.

In this connection I desire to invite your attention to the excellent work done by Colonel George E. Brewer, M.D., as director of Base Hospital No. 2, and to ask that you convey to him my sincere appreciation of the value of the service he gave to our country in its time of need.

Very truly yours,
(Signed) M. W. IRELAND,
Surgeon General, U. S. Army.

War Department, Office of the Surgeon General,
Washington, D. C., July 31, 1919.

MEMORANDUM: To Mrs. Janet B. Christie
Subject: Expression of Appreciation on Leaving Service.

Upon their separation from the service, the Surgeon General directs me to express to all members of the Army Nurse Corps, both regular and reserve, and to all dietitians. reconstruction aids, laboratory technicians, medical secretaries, and other women civilians who have rendered such valiant service with the Medical Department of the Army, his personal appreciation and that of the Department for their patriotic devotion to duty and the self-sacrificing spirit they have manifested in giving their assistance to the Department and the Army when it was so badly needed. He sends his gratitude particularly to chief nurses whose burdens were so heavy.

He regrets that it has not been possible to accept all the offers of renewed and continued service because of the great reductions of the Department personnel, and he hopes that all who can will continue their connection with the Department through their membership in the American Red Cross.

(Signed) JULIA C. STIMSON,
Acting Superintendent, Army Nurse Corps and Dean, Army School of Nursing.

Victory Day in Paris, Described in a Letter Received from Overseas

Paris, July 14, 1919.

The Day of Victory arrived at last and a day the like of which you cannot imagine. To have waited for this for four or five year and then to have it all that one might possibly wish! It was perfect—nothing more could have been desired. If I could only describe it all.

It really began yesterday when all Paris was abroad to see the decorations. The Champs Elysees was closed to traffic about noon on Sunday and every one wandered about all over that vast space from the Place de la Concorde to the Arc de Triumph—just looking. Such beautiful decorations of flags and bunting, and posts with great pictures of the different cities of the war! At the Rue du Pont des Champs Elysees, on either side, were two huge piles of German guns strung with golden leaves. On one pile, on a huge gold ball marked 1914, was an enormous golden cock ready to fight; on the other, marked 1918, stood a cock crowing to all the world. They were very fine. Then, mounting the hill one looked under the Arc and saw an enormous golden catafalque, almost as high as the Arc. This had been erected in memory of the dead. Last night it was all lighted with torches when they held the Watch of the Dead and the people marched around it, the Square meanwhile being surrounded by cavalry. We started out at eight, arriving in time. You never saw such crowds. We stood until nearly eleven and then finally got into the Etoile. At that hour the people were already ensconced for the night. It was a little before twelve when we left for home. Poor Mlle. Antoinette had a heart attack on the way and I thought she was going to die; today, she was unable to go to the parade. After an hour's sleep I got up at a quarter to two when I wakened Mrs. Underhill, who is in the house here. We heated some coffee, ate some bread and started off. It was an ideal night—brilliant starlight with a full moon and quite cold. We walked up to the Etoile and, of course, there were crowds already there. The people were sleeping in all sorts of positions, waiting for the morning. We walked around and at length found a place at the side in the front row just behind the mounted cavalry and there we talked things over. The horses were tall and we were short, so we knew we should not be able to see the faces of the paraders, although, of course, we could see the Arc as it was very wide at that point. Moreover, it meant standing for probably eight hours, if we remained where we were, so we decided to try to find a more advantageous spot. We walked down the Champs Elysees and just by the Alma Metro Station we found two splendid places on boards placed across ladders, which seemed secure. There, at about half past three, we ensconced ourselves and waited.

The parade was not to begin until eight-thirty, but the time did not drag as there was always something to catch one's eye. At last the lights went out, marking the beginning of day. The people took up their various positions, sometimes being moved on by the police, but merely to crowd in again at the first opportunity. Still we waited. At about seven they began to clear up the place. There was a barrier all the way down, but there were hundreds of people inside it so that the cavalry had literally to fight them and drive them ahead like so many sheep down to the only opening where one could cross. I felt so sorry for those people; I do not suppose they saw anything at all of the parade. Once the way was made clear, the boundaries were kept by a row of officers, stationed all the way down for miles.

At eight o'clock the President arrived and drove up the Champs Elysees between the men, who were presenting arms, and at exactly eight-thirty the cannon went off and the great procession started. A band led the way and then came several hundred wounded, the first to go under the Arc. The people cheered them like mad. Then there was a minute's space and the roar began. Papa Joffre with his marshal's baton in his hand, smiling and beaming, came into view and beside him, a little to the rear, was Foch, stern, silent and military to a degree. It was beyond everything. They went slowly down, followed by their staff. There was a slight pause and then the Americans! A band, playing stirring music, preceding Pershing, a splendid figure, followed by his staff and a regiment of the most beautiful soldiers I have ever seen. Their lines were perfect and they swung down that avenue as though ready to conquer the world. About fifty beautiful flags, which literally sparkled in the sunlight, next greeted our eyes. After these came a contingent of smart, spick and span soldiers. The enthusiasm was unbounded. Then again a pause and we waited breathlessly until the British marched into view, very stolid and very fine. No, first came the Belgians, sturdy and heavy looking; then the British, headed by Sir Douglas Haig with two hundred and more flags. Next were the Japanese, the Siamese, Portuguese, Roumanians, Servians, Poles and then, last of all, the poilus with their beloved generals, regiment after regiment. These were followed by the Colonial troops after whom came the Arabs, the Croatians, the Sengalese and wonderful cavalry, ending up with armored motor cars and gas tanks. The crowds just swept out and rolled down in a sea after them. Then the President came along and behind him, in a motor, was the "Tiger" with the people clinging to his motor amidst yells and schrieks—the Victory Parade was over for that part of the city. But think, for miles and miles, all along the boulevards, it was still going on and thousands and thousands of people were cheering themselves hoarse while the cannons were booming and booming. Just think of having been in Paris on such a momentous day.

EXTRACT OF LETTER FROM MISS TWIDALE, '18

Armenian and Syrian Commission

It was only within the last month that we have started in to work here; the rest of the time we have been waiting for the country to become settled and safe enough for us to go into the interior. Miss Brown has gone up into the Caucasus district, Miss King and Miss Easton to Sivas, Miss Curry and Miss Jameson to Aintab, Miss Huntington in Kinia, and Miss Frost and myself in Sidon.

Miss Frost and I had such an interesting trip down from Constantinople to Beirut in a box car, which to judge from the smell, the horses had very recently been turned out of. Fifteen of us came that way. It took us two weeks, and was really, on the whole, a very comfortable way to travel. We came through Konia, Adana, Aleppo; stopped at the ruins at Baalbek for a day, and then came on over the Lebanon range to Beirut. The work which we are doing is very interesting. We are both in orphanges, the children of which were street waifs and beggars, their parents having died or been starved during the war; and they have all sorts of diseases themselves, mostly skin and eye diseases, and everyone of them has malaria. We are very busy.

Extracts from a Letter Received from Helen Wilson, '18, Dated August 18, 1919

Care of American Legation, Belgrad, Serbia.

A small pig has just put an inquiring nose through the Kapana door and seemed quite surprised at his rude reception. We have the distinction of being the only people in town who do not share living quarters with our live stock.

There are three of us "Amerikanha" running a small orphanage in a town called "Lazarevatz." Miss Childs, the other nurse in our unit, is in charge. She is from Newton Hospital—though she should have been at the Presbyterian. She is splendid.

So far we have done almost everything but nurse, for the kiddies have kept well all summer. One week when Miss Childs was away, I had a rush of emergencies—a broken arm, a sprained ankle and an amputated finger as well as an epidemic of a Serbian fever which is every like malaria. The town doctor and I have very little faith in each other, though I do find his onion and oil poultices most effective for a "boli prst" (sore finger). His standing order is "Il faut fermer les fenêtres."

The little boy who cut off his finger is from a neighboring town. The accident had happened three days before I saw it and someone had clapped tobacco over the stump and left it to take care of itself. It is beautifully clean now and I hope to get the flesh pulled up over the bone by using flamed adhesive. Sterile precautions seem almost unnecessary after the treatment it has had.

Next month we expect to be transferred to a much larger place, which the rest of the unit are getting under way. We will then have an infirmary and clinic of our own and let some one else look after the housing and clothing and schooling. We have bumped up against so many difficulties—but it has been fun getting around them, or over them.

The Serbian language is bad enough. I still marvel at the intelligence of the babies who can prattle it. We have come to use a mongrel assortment of French, German, English and Serbian.

The living conditions are about nineteen hundred years behind the times. A New York woman breezed in from Paris the other day and amused us all by remarking: "What Serbia needs is transportation, organization, education and sanitation." I think she almost covered the ground.

Horseback riding is the most satisfactory way to travel. The roads are unspeakable—and spring wagons unknown. The oxcart is the Serbian automobile.

The country is very lovely with rolling hills and heavenly skies. The Serb has little need to work, for his land is so fertile that all he has to do is to sow his grain and gather the harvest. If he has a wife or mother, he does not need to do that! The wild flowers that grow along the road would take prizes in our flower shows.

The people in this part of Serbia seem to have plenty of food, but their clothing is sometimes hard to recognize as such.

We have heard many frightful tales of the Austrian invasion and have proof of it in the nervous condition of some of our children, but we believe that with a little help and encouragement, Serbia will develop and be more prosperous than she has ever been. It is tremendously interesting to watch.

THE RETURN OF THE WOUNDED

BY MARGARET ASHMAN, '16

Dear were they to us when they went away,
And now returning are they dearer still.
Then they departed, eager to fulfill
Their country's pledge, and not afraid to lay
Their bodies on the altar. So today
We meet them marked by sacrifice, and thrill
With pride, not sordid pity. Come what will,
They need not shrink from what our eyes shall say.

To us who love, there are no faces marred,
Hands impotent, or lam and halting feet,
For well we know their souls were never scarred;
Their courage marches ever straight and fleet.
Anew the windows of our hearts are starred
With their great service—glorious, complete.

THE NEED FOR MORE NURSES

At the request of the Surgeon General, the American Red Cross recently conducted a servey of nursing resources in the United States. The following table of figures gives the result of the survey:

Graduate Nurses	49,701
Pupil Nurses	38,149

There are less than 50,000 graduate nurses in the United States and the population of the country is well over 100,000,000. That means one nurse to every 2,000 persons. Moreover, not all these nurses can engage in active service, many of them are married and no longer follow their profession. Everything must be done to encourage women to enter the nursing field, where there is so much opportunity for service.

Our warm congratulations are extended to Miss Mary R. Harold, who did such admirable work as dietition with the Presbyterian Unit in France.
(Quotation from letter to Miss Maxwell from Miss Harold.)

"I have received through the War Department a Royal Red Cross from the British Government, and yesterday, a citation authorizing me to accept and wear the same.

I understand that one is recommended for these honors, and I wish to express my appreciation for having been chosen, by those in charge, as a member of the Presbyterian Unit. Not being a Presbyterian nurse, I feel doubly grateful to all the members of the nursing staff of the unit, not only for this, but for the cordial treatment which I received while I had the pleasure of working with you in the service of our War Department in France."

"HOSPITAL STEWARDS AND NURSES' UNION"

Some of the nurses in California are not satisfied with an eight hour day, so they have formed the Hospital Stewards & Nurses' Union. This body sent two representatives to explain its purpose to the San Francisco Nurses' Association, at a meeting held in June. The nurses present voted to allow them to speak, thinking it well to hear both sides of the question. The Stewards defined the purpose of this "Union" in a short sentence expressed about as follows: "This-ere union will git a livin' wage for yuse women."

TREATMENTS

(Sung to the Tune of "School Days")

Treatments, treatments,
Dear old Medical Treatments,
Clysis, Transfusion, and Salvarsan,
Ne'er can be done by one lone young man,
It takes a dozen and sometimes two,
And then you know when their work is through—
The patient is dead and the poor nurse too,
After their treatments are done.

ALTERATIONS IN THE DIET KITCHEN AT P. H.

The diet kitchen is being enlarged for the purpose of doing additional work in metabolism. This is primarily to relieve the wards of calculating and weighing diets and cooking special foods; also to centralize the work in one department. The two rooms adjoining, one formerly known as "the padded cell," and the other used by orderlies, have been added and connecting doors put in. The milk room has been moved, and the former milk room is to be used for the new work. The store room between has space for the refrigerators, a broom closet, and our electric motor ice cream freezer which is to be installed. The equipment of the new room consists of a large working table, shelves for the trays, a steam heater for the purpose of reheating weighed foods, and an enclosed truck to take the trays to the wards. In the new department all of the weighed diet in the hospital will be cared for—the calculating cooking and serving, and the weighing of uneaten foods. With the present equipment the maximum number will be forty trays.

The work will probably begin about October 1st.

MISS MORLEY

The Bulletin of the N. Y. Nursery & Child's Hospital in its September issue, pays tribute to the work done by Miss Morley during the four years in which she has been superintendent. She has put the hospital into much better financial shape, has raised the standard of nursing by establishing affiliation with prominent hospitals, nurses going there for six months in obstetrics and pediatrics. Miss Morley's ideal was to have a hospital with a soul, which object seems to have been accomplished according to the Bulletin.

THE NOVEMBER QUARTERLY MEETING

Report of the Red Cross Committee

The majority of the members of the Class of 1919 are joining the Red Cross on finishing their time. Several have already received their pins. It is difficult to give the number, since their acceptance is sent to them personally, and this is, of necessity, after they have left the school.

The Class of 1922 took charge of the recent Red Cross drive for the Hall and the Hospital. The sum of $409.00 was collected in this way, which means that 409 people either renewed their membership or joined the Red Cross.

Two groups of Presbyterian nurses are abroad at present doing relief work.

November 20, 1919.

Miss Gilman, who is chairman of the Legislative Committee of the New York State Nurses' Association, gave a very interesting talk on the need of active legislation on the part of the nurses in order that the Nurse Practice Act may be passed in Albany this January. The Legislative Committee is in urgent need of funds. One hundred dollars ($100.00) was voted from the treasury, but any individual contributions will be gratefully received, and may be sent to Miss Young, our Treasurer.

A report of the meeting held by the Delegates of the Associated Alumnæ of New York County, October 31, was submitted, and after discussion it was agreed upon to increase the rates of Private Duty Nurses to the following, effective December 1:

General Nursing,	12	hour	duty,	$6.00	per	day.
" "	24	"	"	7.00	"	"
Obstetrics	12	"	"	6.00	"	"
"	24	"	"	7.00	"	"

Contagious and Mental, 12 or 24 hour duty, $7.00 per day.

A memorandum from Dr. Young to Miss Maxwell was read, stating that the Board of Managers of the Hospital had agreed to increase the rates of Special Nurses in the Hospital from $4.50 to $5.00 a day, effective December 1.

Mrs. Christie was presented with a silver loving cup and roses in loving appreciation of her long service as Treasurer of the Alumnae, the presentation being made by Miss Cadmus.

DELEGATE'S REPORT

The annual meeting of the New York State Nurses' Association was held at the St. George Hotel, Brooklyn, N. Y., October 21, 22, 23, 1919.

Tuesday, October 21

At the Public Health Nursing Association meeting the following subjects were discussed:

1. The Need for Public Health Nurses Throughout the Country.

2. Should Public Health Nurses, in Their Various Occupations, Adopt Uniforms?

A joint evening session was held at which Miss Grace Day of T. C. spoke on Psychology of Supervision.

Mrs. Helen Hoy Greeley gave a very able and convincing talk on the subject of Rank for Army Nurses. This was followed by a number of interesting statements from several of the Army Nurses who had been in the Service in France and who felt very strongly the need of the nurses having rank.

Wednesday, October 22

After Registration of Delegates, a business meeting was held at which the reports of various committees were accepted.

Wednesday afternoon Miss Greener's paper on the Readjustment of Training Schools and Hospitals from the Nursing Standpoint contained some good points for discussion, the subject being approached from the standpoint that the trained attendant is a reality for which provision must be made, and made soon. She submitted a plan for a regular course of training and two years and three or four months, for all, to be supplemented by eight months additional work along a special chosen line for those who desired to go on in further preparation; that trained attendants might well be used in hospital wards to relieve some of the more highly trained nurses of some of the routine detail work; that the eight-hour day means an effort to secure for training schools, as for other schools of education, endowments to meet the increased expenses.

Industrial Insurance was discussed by Mr. Miles M. Dawson, who drafted the Insurance Bill, in such a dignified fifteen-minute address, to be followed by a man who pretended to be there in place of Dr. Lee, who was to have spoken also in favor of that bill, with the most absurd display of soap-box oratory imaginable.. This event was most embarrassing to the Chair, who admitted him to the platform in perfect good faith, but the situation was relieved at once by Miss Goodrich, who was given the floor, clearing the air again in very short order.

The Child Welfare discussion brought out the interesting fact that the school nurse has reduced the skin and trachoma infections in the public schools from 50% to 5% by weeding out the cases before they could be spread.

The plan for a National Organization of Business and Professional Women whose membership shall be composed of at least 75% business women, whose object is to promote the interests of business women and to acquire and disseminate information about vocations and other subjects of particular interest to women who are in business, was attractively presented by a woman who had attended the first Convention in St. Louis, in July.

The Army Nurse Corps During the War, The Campaign Against Venereal Diseases as It Effects the Teaching and Practise of Nursing, and the Eight-Hour Day for Nurses occupied the rest of the afternoon session on Wednesday.

Thursday, October 23

At the Thursday afternoon session the discussion of the work of the Maternity Center was made very interesting by Miss Stevens, and Col. Butler, of the Medical Staff of the Army, spoke for a few moments on the American Legion, urging all nurses who were members of the Army Nurse Corps, either here or overseas, to identify themselves with the Legion, as a great privilege. Miss Ward's paper on Social Service in the Curriculum of the Training School was convincing and logical, as an aid to the better understanding of the pupil nurse's work with her patients.

The Round Table, conducted by Miss Sally Johnson, was instructive and very lively. Many excellent suggestions were exchanged about the little details of the Training School office—too insignificant to be given a place on the program, but of infinite interest to those whose job it is to settle them.

The Red Cross Motor Corps transported the delegates to the Peck Memorial Hospital, where inspection and tea ended a very protfiable day of the convention, except to the finishing of a few business matters at the evening session and the announcement of the returns of the election.

Suggestions on Ways and Means of Using the Pension Fund

After receiving various opinions from a number of members of the Alumnae Association in regard to the use of the Pension Fund when necessary, your Chairman decided to incorporate them as far as possible into the following outlined plan, merely as a suggestion, to be presented at the October General Meeting, for discussion and possible consideration.

This plan to be operative only for probable applicants from the first graduate classes (the years yet to be decided upon). The idea of an insurance plan to be considered especially for the use of the later graduates.

1. When an alumnus has reached the age of sixty years, after at least twenty-five years of active service in the nursing profession, she becomes eligible to receive the benefit of the Pension Fund, unless at such time she is occupying a position that commands a salary she considers sufficient for her comfortable support. In which case she does not apply until necessary.

2. The sum received not to exceed $300.00 per year. The Pension Fund always to be maintained as such, but to receive assistance from the Benefit Fund if considered necessary.

3. The full amount of payments not to be taken from the interest of the Pension Fund, only such portion as decided upon by the Executive Board and standing Committee on Ways and Means. If two-thirds from Pension Fund, then one-third from the Benefit Fund.

4. No plan to operate for longer than three consecutive years. At the expiration of that time to be renewed, or such changes made as deemed necessary or advisable.

5. All pensions received under stated regulations to be so continued for life, unless changes occur in the fund sufficient to necessitate curtailment or complete annulment.

6. This or some plan to go into effect after the next annual meeting of the Association.

Respectfully submitted,

FRANCES A. STONE, Chairman.

A Suggested Plan for the Administration of the Pension Fund

1. That it is not expected that the Fund will be materially increased except through the contributions of the Alumni who intend to avail themselves of the benefits offered and through interest.

2. That the older members should not be required to meet the same conditions as to payments as the future graduates.

3. That the plan adopted should provide for the withdrawal of at least the amount paid in by those who do not complete their 25 years' service or their payments.

4. That the average age of the graduate is 25 years and that 25 years' service is about the limit planned.

Age at graduation	25	years
Active service	25	"
Probable added life	20	"

25 yearly payments of $100 compounded at 4%—$4,331
" " " " " " " 4½%—$4,657
$4,331 with 4% interest will provide 20 annuities of $300
$4,657 " 4½% " " " 24 " " $300

Members who lived beyond the 20-year period would continue to receive their annuities. The required amount would be obtained from interest on the Reserve Fund (now about $100,000) and interest from the amounts withdrawn by members who do not qualify for annuities. (See *.)

Members who die after commencing to receive annuities may leave a part of the principal paid in to some beneficiary. (The maximum amount should be determined by an actuary or accountant.)

*Members who withdraw before they have completed 10 payments will receive amounts paid in only. Those who complete 10 payments, but not 25, will receive amounts paid in and in addition interest at 2% (or the minimum rate to be determined). The balance of the accrued interest would be accumulated to help meet the annuities paid to those living beyond the expected age. (See *.)

Members now graduated, to receive $300 annuity, must deposit $100 for each year since graduation, but need not deposit the equivalent of interest accrued. (In the $2,500-year class, this accrued interest amounts to about $1,800.)

Members electing to contribute less than the required amount shall receive a smaller annuity in proportion.

Members must make payments on or before due date or pay accrued interest and a suitable penalty.

Funds should be carried and invested in such a manner, if possible, so that no tax would be assessable.

In all calculations, an amount should be set aside for postage, stationery, bookkeeping, etc.

Provision should be made so that the governing body of the Association would have power to use any surplus that might accumulate beyond that needed for annuities in its discretion for sick benefits, etc. It should also be arranged so that the whole fund might be disposed of in some way in case, for any reason, the Association should cease to exist. (Taking over of hospital by the city. [?])

MILITARY RANK FOR THE ARMY NURSE CORPS

These are days when history is swiftly written. That small page, which the nurse may claim as privilege and reward, will not be complete until she may write upon it the triumphant passage of the Jones-Raker Bill, giving military rank to the Nurse Corps.

The principle involved in the demand for this bill is simple and definite—that of ages ago when men were given military rank to provide them with the most direct method of marshalling forces and proceeding with the campaign with order and efficiency.

The necessity in detail is too well recognized to need recapitulation in this magazine.

This is the moment when the experiences of the war are still so acutely in mind that men who saw service overseas can give their support and testimony in favor of the bill with understanding and authority.

Will you enlist all your energies in this fight?

General Lines to Be Followed

First: Write every man you know, asking his influence with his Congressman. If the reply is indifferent or antagonistic, ask for an interview of five minutes only, and give reasons for the bill and win him over.

Second: In addressing doctors, in addition to the above, request letters to be sent by them, giving definite reasons and occurrences abroad, addressing Mrs. Helen H. Greeley, 717 Woodward Building, Washington, D. C.

Third: Ask all your soldier friends to write their Congressman—also ask them to influence their American Legion Post.

Fourth: Secure the interest of every woman you know, who, in turn, can write her Congressman. With her vote in hand, she will obtain a hearing. Keep a careful alphabetical list of names addressed.

Fifth: Keep a supply of data and information so that you may answer questions intelligently.

Copies of the "World War and the Army Nurse" (primer of information), stamped envelopes, paper and stamps will be furnished for this purpose and may be obtained at the desk at Florence Nightingale Hall, 37 East 71st Street.

Please act quickly, as this bill must be passed by the 66th Congress.

Any further information address Miss E. E. Pearce, Secretary, 112 East 87th Street, New York City.

65th Congress
2nd Session

H. R. 12698.
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
July 6, 1918.

Mr. Raker Introduced the Following Bill; which Was Referred to the Committee on Military Affairs and Ordered to Be Printed.

A BILL

To Grant Rank to the Army Nurse Corps, and for Other Purposes.

BE IT ENACTED BY THE SENATE AND HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA IN CONGRESS ASSEMBLED, That the members of the Army Nurse Corps shall have relative rank as follows: The Superintendent shall have the relative rank of Major; the Assistant Superintendents, Director, and Assistant Directors the relative rank of Captain; Chief Nurses the relative rank of First Lieutenant; and Nurses the relative rank of Second Lieutenant; and as regards medical and sanitary matters and all other work within the line of their professional duties, shall have and shall be regarded as having authority in and about military hospitals next after the medical officers of the Army, and shall wear the insignia of the rank in the army to which their rank corresponds.

As the Quarterly is about to go to press, the Editor has been informed that Mr. Wadsworth, Chairman of the Sub-Committee on Military Affairs, has vouched for the fact that the plan of the Jones-Raker Bill has been written into the Reorganization Army Bill.

This does not mean that it will become a law, as it might be changed, but it is doubtful if it can be taken out of the Reorganization Bill. We have to renew our efforts to make sure it is carried through.

PEACE-TIME ORGANIZATION OF BASE HOSPITALS

The P. H. War Unit will be held intact for service in peace time. This will be the case with all the base hospitals, of which there are fifty, located at important points throughout the country. The plan is part of the peace program of the American Red Cross, and is in accordance with the wishes of the military authorities. It provides for the maintenance of an efficient organization to deal with all future emergencies, whether they be those arising from another war, which is unlikely, or in peace time emergencies such as epidemics, floods, earthquakes and other disturbances.

JANE A. DELANO POST, No. 344, OF THE AMERICAN LEGION

Through the efforts of Mrs. Grace P. Rogers of the New York Hospital, the Jane A. Delano Post, No. 344, was organized, named as a memorial to Miss Delano, who devoted her best efforts to the interests of the nursing profession.

The first meeting was held on September 15, 1919. At this meeting temporary officers were elected, to hold office until January, 1920. An executive committee was formed, consisting of the officers and ten members at large, the latter being chosen as representing some of the hospitals in and about New York City, which were most prominent in supplying nurses for the Federal Service. Our representatives at present are Miss Gertrude Smith, '01, and Miss Sara Strain, '01.

Any nurse who was in the Federal Service, at any period between April 6, 1917, and November 11, 1918, whether at home or abroad, and who is an American citizen, is eligible for membership.

I would like to urge every one of our graduates who is eligible for membership (and we have a large number) to affiliate herself with this post, so that we may be well represented.

The post now has over six hundred members, and I am sure will be a source of great pleasure and benefit to us all when it is permanently organized and a good constructive and social program worked out. Now is the time you should join, so as to aid in the election of permanent officers and the adoption of a good program.

No better statement of the objects of this organization can possibly be made than that contained in the preamble of the National Constitution of the American Legion, which says:

"For God and Country we associate ourselves together for the following purposes:

"1. To uphold and defend the Constitution of the United States of America.

"2. To maintain law and order.

"3. To foster and perpetuate a 100% Americanism.

"4. To preserve the memories and incidents of our association in the Great War.

"5. To inculcate a sense of individual obligations to the community, state and nation.

"6. To make right the master of might.

"7. To promote peace and good-will on earth.

"8. To safeguard and transmit to posterity the principles of Justice, Freedom and Democracy.

"9. To consecrate and sanctify our comradeship by our devotion to mutual helpfulness."

Any information regarding the post may be obtained from the Adjutant, Miss Anna B. Duncan, 305 West 45th Street, New York City.

ELIZABETH BRACKETT, R.N., '15.

NEW TIME SCHEDULE FOR STUDENT NURSES AT THE PRESBYTERIAN HOSPITAL

A long contemplated change to the shorter duty hours for student nurses was inaugurated in the school on October 6.

The School of Nursing Committee had voted the change early in the year, and it was hoped that, as the classes are large, the plan could be put into effect without great internal disturbance.

The tentative plan now being tried out is arranged for a fifty-two hour week for day duty and a fifty-six hour week for night duty. The day force is on from seven to nine in the morning, head nurses arranging for the hours off. Off time includes one-half day on Sunday, one-half day in the week and four hours off on five days.

The night force is on from eleven to seven, and take their dinner before going on duty.

Little can be said as to the result of the experiment in so short a time, but we look for better work for our patients and improvement in the general health of the students of the school.

OPPOSES NURSES' UNION

There has been a report that a number of nurses have formed themselves into a union affiliated with the American Federation of Labor. Miss Maxwell indorses the sentiment expressed in a letter published in the New York Times on December 27, written by Miss A. S. Ward, General Superintendent of Nurses of the Municipal Hospitals, copy of which is given below:

"So far as I know," wrote Miss Ward, "all nurses of recognized standing not only would not be in sympathy with such a movement, but would be most strongly opposed to it.

"There are reported to be only 500 in this organization. The New York County Registered Nurses' Association, of which I am president, has about 4,000 members. We hope in a few days to publish an article saying that these people are not part of us and that we are absolutely opposed to the step they have taken."

LOUISE CLARK, '18, WRITES FROM AINTAB, TURKEY

"August 14, 1919.

"I have thought about you often, but have not written because I knew you would rather wait and hear all about 'my home town.' We had a wonderful trip all the way over. On the 'Patria' I was sick for the first five days after leaving New York, but when I did get my 'sea legs' on I had one grand, glorious time. We landed in Naples on July 13 and had to sail the next day. The Mediterranean boat was a small one and our party of twenty-five, which had twenty more added to it in Naples, occupied almost the entire number of first and second class staterooms. The name of the awful old tub was the 'Bulgaria,' but we soon christened it with formalin, the 'Bug-garia.'

"We stopped at Messina, where we got off and climbed around in the old ruins—there was little of much interest except the huge clouds of white dust. Then we went down to Cattonia. At Pirens we took autos and went up to Athens. The cars left us at the grand old acropolis and were to return at 12 noon. Meantime we got word that the 'Bughouse' (as it was called by this time) was going to sail at 11:30. So the Athens American Red Cross sent us down in their trucks—the wildest ride that I had had then, but I am used to wild driving now. The boat waited for us.

"At the next stop, Saleneka, where we were to be for one whole day, we saw our first mission station. It was great fun to watch a crowd of A. C. R. N. E. workers who 'hated' missions look the place over and open their eyes. They found the house so cool and restful and clean, the first home-like place they had seen since leaving the U. S. A. And the tea and white bread (which we hadn't set eyes on since leaving our country) quite won their hearts.

"At Smyrna we saw some more mission work, colleges, etc. On every side there were ruins from fires, and there were strikes and riots all the time in every city from Naples on. It was especially interesting going up the Dardanelles, where I counted the wrecks of eleven vessels—and I did not see them all either. One big liner had just run onto a sand bar a few hours before we passed her. The banks along the Straights were covered with camps, huge cannon, forts and ruins. We sailed into Constantinople early Sunday morning, July 27. My, but it was a wonderful sight—the white stone buildings, mosques and minarets against the deep blue sky. Monday we visited the great old St. Sophia, spice market, etc. The next day we went in a tiny little steamboat down to Oerindje. It isn't even a village, simply car tracks, six big warehouses and three or four shacks where the A. C. R. N. E. unload the big boats from the U. S. A. and send the goods to the interior. When we next got under way it was in freight box cars—ten of us in three cars, with food rations for thirty days and much luggage. None of us slept the first night on the 'railroad' —the only springs under us were those on the beds, so the jolting was ——. We were held up for two days at Konia, where Frances Huntington is running the hospital with Dr. and Mrs. Smith. (You remember Mrs. S.; she was our Miss Gutterson at P. H.) Fanny seems to be very happy and is certainly making a great mark for herself.

"The ride down through the Tours Mountains I would not have missed for the world. We saw the grand old snow-capped peaks, the deep canyons, with the river, like a tiny green thread, miles below, the shining, brilliantly colored rocks, then we would plunge into one of the seventy tunnels, coming out again to see a new view. Oh, it is away beyond me to describe it. We disembarked from our palatial cars on Friday evening, August 8, in Aleppo, where we remained over Sunday. The eighty-one mile truck ride out here was awfully interesting. I might say that we left the remainder of our party in Aleppo, as none of them had been assigned to Aintab. There are only twelve Americans here, counting us three newcomers. A Mrs. Anderson is in charge of the hospital, Gladys Curry in the operating room and Elsie Jameson in charge of one of the two floors.

"The A. C. R. N. E. workers are doing a big work here. There is a boys' orphanage with only 'a few hundred kids.' In the girls' orphanage there are only about four hundred. Down in the khan they have about five hundred women, who have been rescued from the Turks and brought in there, where they are clothed (first scrubbed), fed and taught to sew, etc. While I was there yesterday a specimen came in—a fairly good-sized female about thirty years old, with a bright red weather-beaten wrinkled face, mouth possessing but one tooth, chin tatooed, feet big fat and bare, and dressed in bright red, yellow and green rags and patches. At first she raved and jabbered so ferociously that we all thought that she was even more than crazy, but after a short and snappy lecture she calmed down meekly enough. She had run away from a Turk who had captured her from the Arabs. About one out of every ten refugees have had their faces tatooed, even the very small girls—it is sickening.

"I have spent most of my time following a lady M.D. around. Dr. Little has clinics in the different places and she is certainly doing a great deal for the poor people."

EXTRACTS FROM A LETTER WRITTEN BY MARIE JESSEN, '18, IN SIBERIA

September 8, 1919.

I had a wonderful trip over and I have met some most interesting people. We stayed in Japan about a week. Yokohama is a typical Oriental city—that means dirty. We spent three days at Nikko, a beautiful spot way up in the mountains. It is full of Shinto shrines, sacred bridges, etc. One does not have to be religiously inclined to enjoy its wonders. I forgot to mention Honolulu, where we stopped for one day. We went in bathing on that famous Waikiki beach.

No, we are in Vladivostok, which, were it not for the poverty, could be a beautiful city, because it has the natural attributes. There is a large harbor with many rolling hills. The Russian people are very poor and their homes are pathetic, some being made of old tin. There are a great many refugees, but conditions will be much worse this winter. There is but one main street here. There are no sidewalks. The method of conveyance is the droskey, a one-seated buggy drawn by two horses. The driver, who has a small seat of his own, always wears a turkey red shirt.

We live at the hospital, where we have about forty nurses. At first I had charge of a surgical ward, then I was night supervisor for three weeks, and now I have charge of the operating room for my permanent assignment. I just love it, but I am so busy.

Really, this change is just what I needed. It has done me worlds of good so far. We have some very good surgeons. The technique we are compelled to carry out just kills us, but we are making big improvements every day.

It is such fun having Miss Kinne here. She has charge of the maternity ward, Miss Shufford has the clinic, and Miss Wood is the dietitian. Miss Cameron and Miss Field have gone into the interior. They are just this side of Irkutsk.

Col. Teusler, who just returned from Washington, gave us a most encouraging talk yesterday. He said we would be here throughout the winter and that undoubtedly our operations would be westward. We all want to go into the interior.

The 27th and 31st Infantry are here, so we are kept very busy. There is a dance at some barrack every single night. They send a 'bus, and as many tired nurses as can possibly stand it go. We do enjoy the boys.

I do quite a lot of riding. We get our horses from the Army. The country over the hills is beautiful, and the wild flowers are just as wonderful as you read about.

I have a Russian lesson every day. I exchange English for Russian. My teacher is a sweet little nurse from Moscow who works here.

I just can't close without telling you about the wonderful Y. W. C. A. girls here. They came over on the same steamer with us. The one I am especially fond of is Gladys Gorman. She is a Wellesley graduate, where she has been instructor in athletics for two years. She knows heaps of people whom I know. They have to stay for three years, and I just know when once they are established they will do some wonderful work. They want me to be transferred to Y. W. C. A. when my year with the R. C. is up. Perhaps I shall.

A LETTER FROM VIRGINIA ANDERBURG, R.N., '07

September 23, 1919.

We are now in the interior of Siberia, having had interesting traveling experience but very little work. Siberia is a beautiful country, but very hot in the summer. The scenery and flowers are wonderful.

We are at present camping in a pine forest, attached to the 27th Infantry, and are in tents. We have about fifty nurses here.

Coming up from Vladivostok we had many interesting experiences, compared to the excitement of which France seems tame. We were held up at one place by Chinese bandits, "The Hun Hoozahs" or Red Beards, who burned the village, taking the principal Chinese merchants for ransom, but did us no harm whatever. A day further on we were in the midst of a battle between the railroad strikers and Cossack soldiers. Two days after that we arrived at Harbin, where cholera was raging, and visited the principal cholera hospitals. Now we are in the midst of an American camp, and it is hard to realize we are in Asiatic Russia.

We are rather disappointed at not having accomplished more here, but the Bolshevists keep us from the places where we are most needed.

We have some splendid women in our unit and are exceedingly fortunate in having Miss MacIntyre as our chief nurse and Dr. Bucher, an old Navy officer, as captain.

This has been a privilege and a wonderful experience which we all appreciate and only wish we could accomplish what we had hoped to do on leaving home.

EXTRACT FROM LETTER WRITTEN TO MISS MAXWELL FROM SISTER MARY SYLVIA IN SAGADA, P. I.

"Each time I see a letter from Korea in the Journal I resolve to write you of my work in Sagada, but the days seem too full for more than hurried notes. We have a dispensary in the mission and often patients staying over night. We are looking for a Miss Davis to come out from Boston. You may know her. But at present the male nurse, Mr. Howland, a graduate of Bellevue and also from Boston, has a good native assistant and is able to go out into the ballios to look for the sick. We do a good many dressings, but medical care is hard to give, for they just will not take any medicine left with them, and the heathen are often unwilling to let you even enter the house when there is illness. It will be many years before the white man's advice will have more weight than the canao with pig or caraboa. But from time to time one is cheered by unexpected confidence, and so we go on happily doing the best we can."

Copy of the Quarterly Magazine, July, 1913, issue, wanted for records. Please forward to Miss Gould, 37 E. 71st Street, New York City.

OBITUARY

Gertrude Davis Cowell, R.N., '06, died on December 18, 1919, at the Deaconess Hospital, Buffalo, N. Y., where she had been assistant superintendent of the hospital and training school.

Funeral services were held from the chapel of the nurses' home. Student nurses attended in a body, and a great many nurses of the city were there as well.

Mrs. Cowell was buried in the white uniform of the Presbyterian Hospital officers, wearing her school pin.

Haseltine Hampton Church

It is the flower of the land that is so often called upon to make the supreme sacrifice in time of conflict, and so, too, among those of us who are engaged in the eternal peace-time struggle of life and death, the blossoms of finest texture are often the first to go.

In the death of Haseltine Hampton Church on December 15, not only the class of 1920, but the entire personnel of the Presbyterian Hospital, feel that they have lost something priceless, a friend in the truest sense of the word.

She stood for the highest and best in her profession, and her unselfish, purposeful life was an inspiration to us all. We feel that the nursing profession has suffered a distinct loss in the passing on of one whose sincere interest in her chosen profession resulted in work of the highest standard, supplemented by a spirit of love, without which there is no service.

The memorial service in the Nurses' Home, conducted by Dr. Coffin and attended by the members of the staff and the school, was most impressive. Three verses of "O God, Our Help in Ages Past" were sung by the nurses, and words of comfort spoken by Dr. Coffin. It was very gratifying to have Mr. William Sloane, president of the hospital, with us.

Member of the Class of 1920.

OBITUARY

It is with keen sorrow that we record the death of Mr. William V. S. Thorne, the Chairman of our Finance Committee.

In his death, on February 6th, 1920, the Alumnæ Association of the School of Nursing has sustained a great loss.

Mr. Thorne had many and wide interests, but was always ready to help us with wise counsel and give time and thought to our problems.

We feel that it is to Mr. Thorne's genius for affairs and devotion to any worthy cause that the success of the various funds of our Association is due.

Those of us in the hospital who were accustomed to meet him on his daily visits will miss his genial presence and ready sympathy with everything that had to do with the advancement of this school and hospital and others in which he was deeply interested.

AN IMPORTANT LETTER FROM MISS MAXWELL

March 16th, 1920.

To the Alumnæ:

In the unsettled state of our people, due to many causes, amongst these the sudden increase of wealth during the war and the numberless openings for women at high salaries, the ranks of the Nursing School are not being filled.

I am therefore asking the Alumnæ to make an effort to recruit probationers for their Alma Mater.

You can all point to your own enjoyment (?) of the years of training, to the delightful companionships and to your own successful careers.

The members of the Alumnæ are the ones who have carried the banner of health into the homes of our state and have established the good name of the School and the Hospital.

We need twenty probationers by June 1st! How many can each of you send?

The School of Nursing of the Presbyterian Hospital, New York City, offers a three-year course of training in all branches of nursing, including public health, for graduates of accredited high schools. Also a two-year course of training, with three months' preparatory course, to graduates of colleges whose work has included courses in elementary science. Classes will be admitted on June 1st and September 1st.

The Presbyterian Hospital School of Nursing co-operates with the Department of Nursing and Health of Teachers' College, Columbia University, in offering a five-year course leading to the degree of Bachelor of Science and to a diploma in nursing. Students who have completed one or more years of college work are admitted to advanced standing.

For particulars concerning this course apply to the Department of Nursing and Health, Teachers' College, Columbia University.

ANNA C. MAXWELL.

THE FEBRUARY QUARTERLY MEETING

At the Quarterly Meeting of the Alumnæ Association held February 19, 1920, a motion was made and carried that the Alumnæ Association should contribute $500.00 to help defray expenses of the committee which is working for the passage of the Army Reorganization Bill, Section 10, giving rank for nurses.

The President was instructed to draw up resolutions to send Mrs. Thorne, expressing the sympathy of the Alumnæ Association for her bereavement in the loss of her husband.

Miss Cadmus presented the report of the Pension Fund Committee in the absence of Miss Stone. It is hoped to put this fund on a working basis by 1921. This report was mailed to each member of the Alumnæ, so we omit it from the Quarterly.

MILITARY RANK FOR THE ARMY NURSE CORPS

The Committee to secure Military Rank for Army Nurse Corps, through their counsel, Mrs. Greeley, has succeeded in having the provision of the Jones-Raker Bill incorporated as Article X of the Re-Organization Bill. This article was passed during the House of Representatives debate on Friday, March 12th, without opposition.

CHRISTMAS GREETINGS FROM MR. F. STURGES, JR.

December 22, 1919.

Miss Anna C. Maxwell,
Presbyterian Hospital,
New York City.

Dear Miss Maxwell:

This is the second anniversary of the loss to me of my beloved father. He was indeed a real father in every sense of the word and also a true friend of yours.

I cannot let the day go by without making some recognition of it which I think will give you pleasure. I therefore take great pleasure in being able to send you a check for the Nurses' Pension Fund for $500.00 with my best wishes for a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year to you all in your great work for the service of mankind.

Yours sincerely,
(Signed) F. STURGES, JR.

SCHOOL NEWS

A circus was held in Florence Nightingale Hall on Wednesday evening, March 10th, for the benefit of the building for the Florence Nightingale School at Bordeaux. This building is to commemorate the nurses who gave their lives in the great war.

The performance was opened by a parade led by Miss Maxwell driving a chariot drawn by two spirited chargers and followed by every animal known to man, and some that up to this time have remained unknown.

Miss Maxwell was dressed in royal purple with plumes in her hair, and her entrance to the hall was most regal and effective.

The stunts were more than usually clever, and the School feels it cannot express its gratitude to the doctors for their co-operation and invaluable help in making the circus successful.

The Class of 1921 held a fashion show and auctioned off three dresses and a bathing suit, made by members of their own class. These models rivaled those seen in Fifth Avenue shops and actually brought the same prices at sale.

The Juniors and Probationers had charge of the cake, candy and ice cream booths, and too much cannot be said in appreciation of Miss Keith, who did much to make this part of the entertainment successful. She also gave many valuable suggestions in regard to the parade.

The Occupational Therapy Department contributed attractive bits of its handiwork for a booth, and Mr. Sargent of the firm of Roger & Gallet gave enough soap, powder, cold cream and perfume for one booth. These were sold at popular prices.

As this was such a gala occasion, we were allowed to dance till one o'clock and everyone took advantage of this unusual opportunity. As ten cents a couple was charged for each dance, over one hundred dollars was made by this alone.

The crowning event of the evening was Mr. William Sloane's donation of $1,000.00. This came as a complete surprise to everyone, yet it is an act typical of our great benefactor. With this bountiful check the total sum of the evening amounted to $2,100.00, and the School wishes to express to the Committee its deep appreciation for bringing about this undreamed-of success.

The influenza epidemic this year, while not as grave nor as far-reaching as that of last year, nearly doubled the work in the hospital. The whole medical side, including the Children's Ward, was given over to patients suffering from influenza. There were comparatively few nurses ill this winter, and the School feels that the long-anticipated "eight-hour day" is largely responsible for this.

The Annex of the Children's Ward has been converted into a well-appointed, attractive Demonstration Room, the old Demonstration Room having been discontinued.

The X-Ray Department is being considerably enlarged by annexing adjoining rooms.

An addition is being built to the Dispensary, which, when completed, will relieve some of the present congestion.

RED CROSS BUREAU OF INFORMATION FOR NURSES

Following is an announcement received from Miss Noyes, giving details regarding the Red Cross Bureau of Information for Nurses. The organization, aims and accomplishments of the Bureau are given, in the hope that the institution may prove of equal value to nurses in the future as well as during demobilization. Again it is brought home to us how deeply we are indebted to the Red Cross, which stands ready to help us in time of peace as it helped us in time of war.

"Jobs for Nurses, and Nurses for Jobs" still remains one of the aims of the Red Cross Bureau of Information for Nurses, as it completes on February 10th the first year of its organization, and turns toward its future program of information and advice in all branches of institutional and public health nursing, for all members of the profession.

Established in co-operation with the three national organizations of nursing, with its headquarters at the port of debarkation, 44 East Twenty-third Street, New York City, and in close communication with the hospitals and institutions in all parts of the United States, the Bureau of Information has been in an unequalled position to learn the temper of the demobilized nurse, and to record the various phases of development which have characterized this important period of re-adjustment. In its files are now represented information regarding war-risk insurance for nurses, Federation re-education and hospitalization of sick nurses, and requests for institutional nurses covering a wide range from staff nurse to hospital superintendent. To this Bureau public health agencies present their needs for nurses for infant welfare, mental hygiene, medical social service, school and industrial work. Complete information will also be given regarding Red Cross Scholarship and Loan Funds for assisting nurses to prepare themselves to enter various phases of the profession which interest them. It registers not only institutions desiring to secure the services of nurses, but also nurses desiring to secure new and broader fields of activity, or to make a change in their present occupations. From the wisest hospital administrator to the youngest high school student who "wants to know how to become a nurse," from little rural communities in Vermont to the cotton mills of the South, from the hospital wards of New York City to the University of California, where several of its registrants are taking post-graduate courses, the Bureau of Information stands ready to advise you regarding the opportunities which await you during the New Year.

Will you not write today to the Red Cross Bureau of Information for Nurses, 44 East Twenty-third Street, New York City, New York?

INDUSTRIAL NURSING

The following notice, received from Florence Swift Wright, Chairman Committee of Industrial Nursing of the National Organization for Public Health Nursing, gives information regarding the forming of an Industrial Nursing Section in the National Organization to meet in April at Atlanta:

There has been a definite expression of opinion recently among industrial nurses generally that there is need for uniform standards of service and for better preparation for their work. Employers are seeing similar needs. Industrial nursing is still a field for the pioneer nurse who often takes up her work without thought of preparation other than a hospital training. She find immediate need for a broader knowledge, which is often fairly easy to obtain if the way is pointed out.

The industrial nurses of the National Organization for Public Health Nursing plan to form an Industrial Nursing Section in the National Organization at the meeting in Atlanta next April. The object of this section will be the formulation and maintenance of high standards for nursing service in industry. It is planned to make known to nurses throughout the country the opportunities for education for industrial nurses. Opportunities exist or may be developed in many large centers. The program will be of interest both to industrial nurses and to employers.

Membership in the National Organization for Public Health Nursing

Qualified nurses are eligible to membership. Employers are eligible to corporate membership. Associations of employers, of employers and workers, or of employees, are eligible to corporate membership.

All industrial nurses are urged to attend the Atlanta meeting and employers of industrial nurses are urged to send nurses as representatives. If the nurse becomes an active member, she will have a vote. In any case, she will learn what other industrial nurses are doing and she will return to her duties with renewed energy and inspiration.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER FROM H. A. WILSON, '18

Care of American Misza, Lazarevatz, Serbia.

You can't have any idea how we love to get letters over here.

We had a very gay time over the holidays, but I noticed that no one talked very much about home. On Christmas eve we lit candles in all the windows, and at twilight went up to the Serbian hospital and sang carols. It was like carrying coals to Newcastle, for the Serbs sing beautifully and we weren't anything to brag of, but they were awfully polite and seemed to like it. On Christmas night we had a big dance—it was a revelation to see our fellow workers in evening dress. I felt like a girl again.

The children celebrated their Christmas thirteen days after ours, for they go by the Greek calendar.

They have a mother's day on the Sunday before Christmas, when the children steal into their mother's room and tie her in bed until she promises them a present. For weeks before the kiddies called us "Myka" or "Mother" instead of the usual "Cestra," and every pocket bulged with bits of twine and cord. We took them all to the movies in town on their Christmas, and they adored it. It was quite a job looking after a hundred and fifty of them, especially as a lot of them can just toddle. It was a French film we saw, and the children piped shrilly in chorus "Vidi —Gospoditsa Yelena" (See—Miss Helen), when a vamp who happened to have short hair like mine appeared on the screen. They were equally confident that the heavy villainess was Mrs. Leavitt, the head house mother.

I don't know what they thought she was doing in some of the rather "risky" scenes.

By wonderful luck and a little wire pulling I managed to be transferred down here from headquarters, with the nicest girl I know over here. We are enjoying it hugely, for neither of us cared for the institutional life at Cacak. We felt that if we had to live with a lot of Americans and not see anythig of the Serbs, we might just as well be at home.

Now we have a small place—only forty children—all to ourselves and have to take our place in the village life whether we want to or not. Of course, we love it.

We never eat at home on feast days, of which there are many, and we always have the best table at the dances. They would never think of having a dance without tables laden down with wine and cakes. You don't need to send your partner for your punch—it is right there before you every minute. Also you need never fear that you will be a wallflower—it's an unknown species. Their "kola," the native dance, is a sort of snake dance with innumerable steps and you join in or drop out as you please. I never hope to waltz with a Serbian again. They never reverse, just go round and round and round, double time, like whirling dervishes.

I may have to wait over here until fall, because the girls who are coming home with me aren't ready to leave. We're very keen to see Egypt and India, not to mention China and Japan, and I'm not making any plans beyond that.

Write as often as you can, won't you?

Much love,

HELEN A. WILSON, '18.

FROM BLANCHE E. EASTON, '18

Talas, Syria, December 12, 1919.

How many, many times we have wished that you might visit us. We have been so happy and busy and often very homesick, too. We are one hundred and twenty miles from a railroad and have been two months at a time without any American mail.

Our supplies and equipment are brought to us in Reo trucks, old German trucks and by trains of one hundred camels each. Several of us started out in a Ford at five o'clock one morning to meet the first camel train and I nearly jumped out of the car when I saw our Stars and Stripes carried by the leader. It had been several months since I had seen our flag.

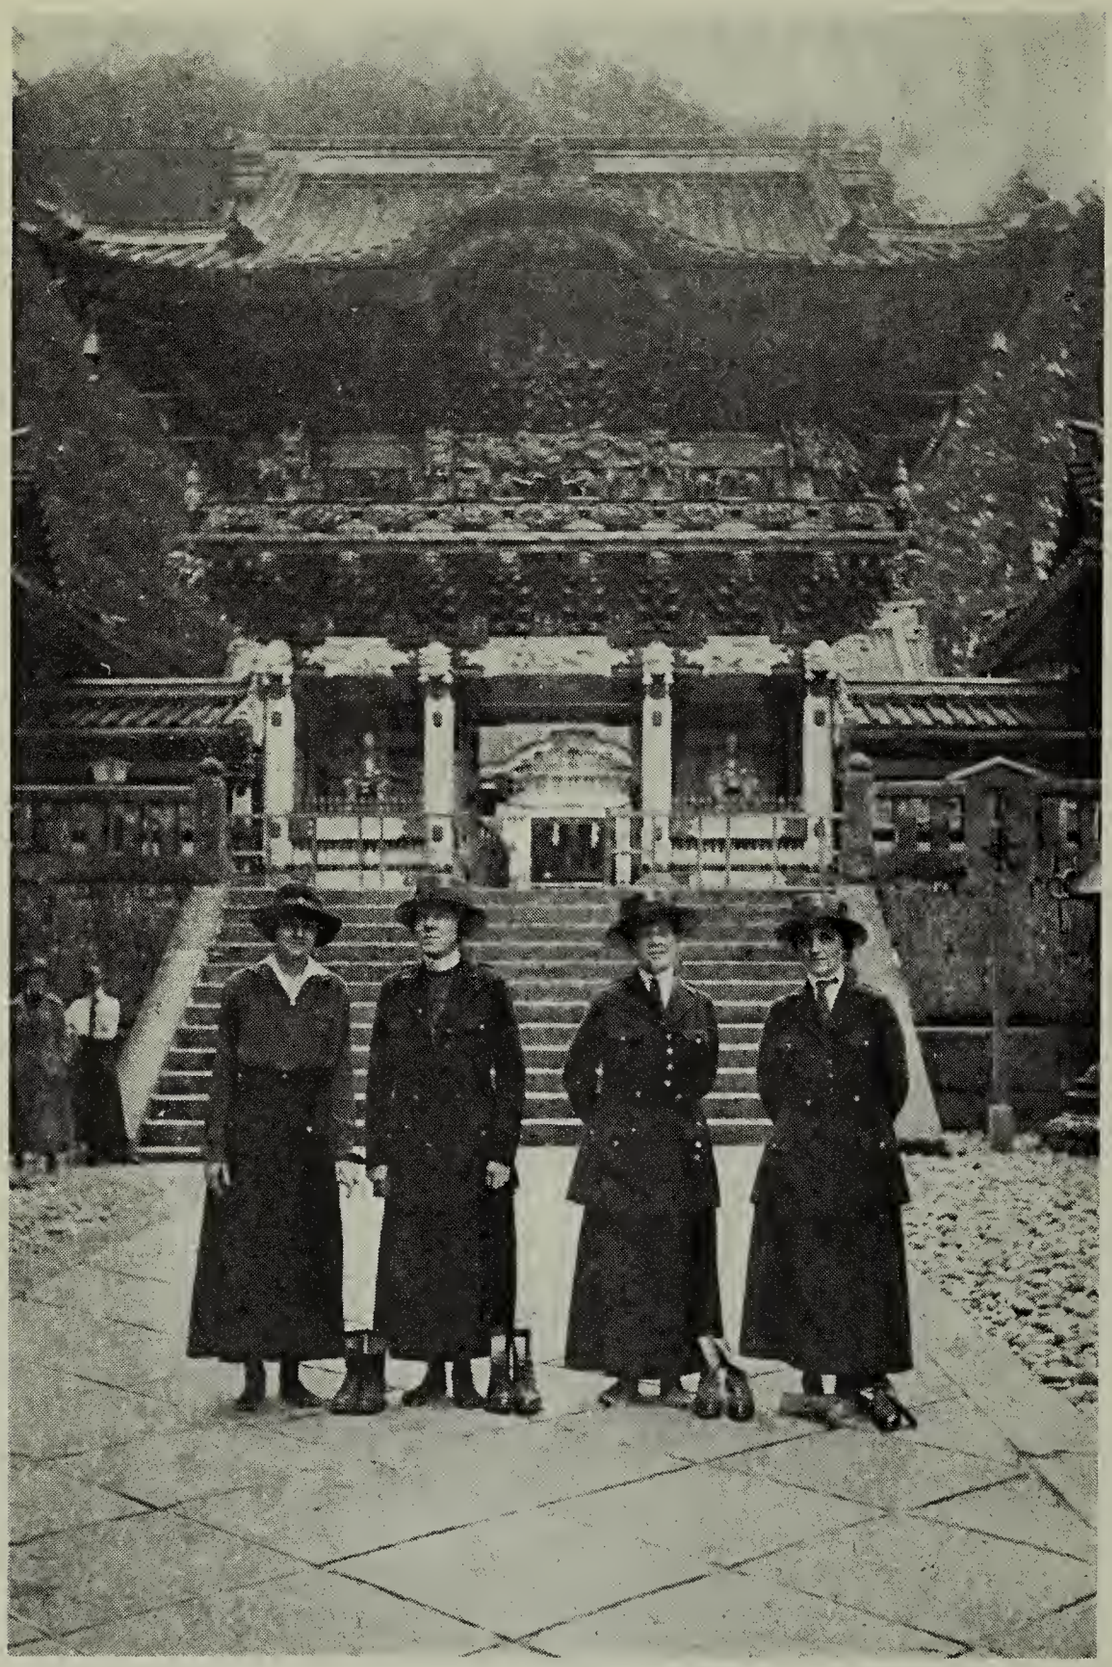

The hospital is situated on the side of a hill, and, with two schools, two houses and a pharmacy and dispensary, is surrounded by a high wall. We have a splendid view of the surrounding mountains and the city of Cæsarea, six miles from here.

The hospital is a very modern and conveniently arranged building. We have fifty beds and they are filled all of the time, in fact, several of them have two patients in them, one at the head and the other at the foot.

We have three Greek and four Armenian nurses and two Armenian orderlies. Four of the nurses speak English, so we are very fortunate. Each one has several weeks in the operating room, wards, dispensary, and is taught dressings.

Miss King has charge of the wards and gives the anæsthetics. I have operating room, dressings, dispensary and housekeeping overseeing. There is only one young, inexperienced doctor here, so I have to assist him with the operations. I do all of the dressings, as he has clinics three days a week and takes our X-Rays and develops them himself.

Practically all of our equipment has come now, but it has taken almost a year to get it here. We had been here but nine days and had to do an intestinal resection. I bought thin, white material and made it up into sponges and compresser, tore up unbleached muslin for towels and sheets and we wore children's nightgowns which had been made before we came. The operating room table had been returned by the Turks and a great many instruments had been left untouched. The operation was successful and the patient comes six miles every three weeks to see us.

A great many of our patients cannot pay for their operations, so they give us livestock. We now have a cow, calf, three lambs, a dog, bird, ten chickens and a turkey. It is a problem to know what to do with them.

I am rather late in wishing you "Merry Christmas," but I hope you will have a very happy New Year.

We have enjoyed the Quarterlies so much. I don't think that I fully appreciated them before.

LETTER FROM ALICE FIELD, '03

My dear Miss Maxwell:

This is rather a late date to give for an idea of our trip through "Nippon," as we have traveled quite extensively since then, but this time it is better late than never. Our next letter will take you with me into Siberia, so for the present look at the enclosed pictures and know that a few of the fortunate ones have enjoyed the dreamlike places of Japan. This picture [page opposite] was taken before one of the temples at Nikko—and as runs the Japanese saying: "He who has not seen Nikko cannot say Kikko" (meaning beautiful, splendid, superb.

It pleased us not at all to remove our shoes—especially high ones—but such is the custom, as you know, before entering temples, tea houses, etc. This is not done for sanctity, but for cleanliness. Of all Japan's sacred places, Nikko, or "Sun's Brightness," is dearest to the Japanese heart. Each day it has new charms, and it's strange fascination but deepens with acquaintance.

With its forest shades, its vast groves and lofty avenues, it's hush, it's calm and religious air, Nikko is an ideal place where rulers and prelates may well long to be buried and pilgrims love to abide.

Two bridges cross the river and lead to groves and temples that make Nikko's fame. One bridge is an everyday affair, across which jinrikshas rumble noisily, the other, the sacred bridge, over which only the Emperor may pass. It is built of wood, covered with red lacquer, with many brass plates and tips. It's sanctity is so carefully preserved that when the Emperor wished to pay the highest conceivable honor to General Grant (many years ago) he ordered the barrier to the bridge to be opened that his guest might walk across, but greatly to the credit of our beloved general, that modest soldier refused to accept this honor, lest it should seem a desecration to the humble believers in the sanctity of the red bridge.

We climbed countless steps and visited innumerable temples and shrines, gorgeous and beautiful in red lacquer and gold, situated in beautiful spots and enchanted groves.

Over the gateways leading to temples one recognizes significant carvings, such as the group of monkeys with eyes, or ears, or mouths covered with their paws (see, hear and speak no evil), and the white cat, which is declared to wink when rain is coming.

The strangest hierophant in Nikko is the priestess who dances at the temple of Iyeyasu. She looks every bit her fourscore years and ten, and is allowed a small temple to herself, where she sits posed like an altar image with a big money box on the sacred red steps before her. Into this the pious and the "curious" pour their offerings. Then the priestess rises and solemnly walks a few steps this way, a few steps that way, poses before each change, shakes an elaborate sort of baby's rattle and gesticulates with an open fan in her left hand. After all these movements, which constitute a dance, this aged priestess sits down, bows her head to the mats and resumes her statuesque pose. She is always amiable and responds readily to a conciliatory coin, but one wonders that the cool and shaded sanctuary in which she sits, with nearly the whole wall making an open door, does not stiffen her aged joints with rheumatism and end her dancing days. She is really a wonder.

Our first sight of Japan was thrilling as we landed at Yokohama—'rikshas waiting at pier in dozens to take us to our hotel, and while we thrilled (twenty-five in a line) our conscience pricked, feeling ourselves indolent to be pulled by these tiny, muscular coolies.

Yokohama and Tokio being closely connected, we spent much time visiting the fascinating shops, emperor's palaces, temples, gardens, etc. Tokio station, with its never-ceasing, monotonous clattering of wooden shoes on stone floors, men, women and children in gay kimonos, babies strapped on the backs of children, little more than babies themselves,

'rikshas and the ever-faithful coolie made a panoramic memory.

Through the courteous hospitality of Mr. Asam (owner of the Japanese steamships) we enjoyed a delightful and elaborate Japanese tea at his beautiful Japanese residence, which is one of the show places in all Japan. A delightful entertainment of music, juggling, etc., and the pleasure of seeing this superb house, museum and gardens, finished a memorable afternoon.

A trip to the famous and sacred Mount Fujiyama also to Kamakura with its endless old Japanese streets, beautiful and never ending temples and shrines, where is the colossal Buddah of Kamakura, finished our nine days of joyous trips in the land of sunshine and courtesy. Our traveling on train to Tsuruga, our port of embarkation for Vladivostok, was also filled with little surprises in the customs of the traveling Japanese. We are now in Irkutsk, 3,000 versts inland, and will write you later of our arrival in Vladivostok and trip up here through Manchuria to this beautiful city, called the "Paris of Siberia."

Our thoughts are with you always, only wishing you could enjoy it with us.

Affectionately,

ALICE G. FIELD.

FIRST PART OF A LETTER FROM MARY MAGOUN BROWN, '97

Karaklis, Caucasus, October 26, 1919.

I am hoping you will all visit our Karaklis Red Cross Shop, and in case you do not find it convenient I am going to tell you something of its story, and last, but not least, of its special attractions. You may be weary long before you reach the end and can skip as you read. I am sure I never could have realized what a centre of interest a shop could be until I had lived for some weeks in a place where you could buy scarcely anything. You will have the warmest of welcomes if you come, and please allow more than fifteen minutes for your shopping. I have always thought it would be fun to have a little country store, but I never thought that having charge of a large one would be part of my work as a Red Cross nurse in trying to help "save Armenia."

Karaklis is only a short distance from Tiflis and is to be found on the map, though it is only a very small town. It should take about five hours to come by train, but our party waited thirty hours in the station yard at Tiflis before starting and the trip itself took us twenty-four hours more. Transportation is a little better now since Colonel Haskell has come.

Karaklis is a little mountain village about 6,000 feet high and is most picturesque, but it is very pathetic to see it as it was left mined by the Turks. It is surrounded by wonderful mountains. Many houses are standing, just the four walls, as they are built with very thick walls of stone, but if they have roofs they are open at either end, and there are no windows. The houses that are used as camps by the refugees have the window spaces filled in by stones or pieces of old iron or tin or branches of trees. The tile roofs are red and orange, and the flat-roofed houses have either hay cocks on top of them or are grown over with weeds and grass. The houses outside have the most wonderful colors of blues and pinks of varying shades. The people love color, and the refugees are always picturesque in their rags for that reason. You see ox-carts, sheep, a few small donkeys and very poor-looking horses driving funny old carriages as you walk about the town. The ox-carts are often decorated in lovely colors.

Our Karaklis shop really started August 23rd, the day it moved into its present quarters, a large building which had been used for a hardware shop before the Turks came, but had been empty ever since. It has a large front room with counter and shelves to the ceiling, some with glass doors, and a show window and a large entrance door, and beside it a very small one that you have to squeeze through. There is a standing desk, and above it on the wall are a pair of horns. There is a back room just as large, which was nearly filled with bales of blankets to be used in the orphanages. Our stock consisted of the contents of sixty bales of old clothes sent by the Red Cross from all parts of the U. S. A. When we moved in only a few of these bales had been opened. We just had a room in the office building of the American Committee, which is our present dining-room, as we are living in that house and the office has moved to what used to be the court house. We were greatly handicapped, as we had no space and had to sort the clothes on the floor. Then we moved to one of the wards of the new Orphanage Hospital before it was occupied and there we used the wooden beds as tables. It seemed very wonderful to think of having space, so we were very enthusiastic about our last move to permanent quarters, especially as the unopened bales were stored in the building right next to us and we could enter it from our back room, where some of the bales were moved. It took only three wagonloads to move what we had opened except for a few special things that I carred myself and had a man carry. I asked to have as helper the man who helped with the moving and who seemed to clean with some energy and who did not sweep with the gentle, restful motion that is usually seen in this country. Later I added to my staff a little Armenian girl, Arexia by name, who is most willing but who has to be shown over and over again, and who has no idea of sizes—even now! The same is true of Karaken, the man who has charge of the men's clothes, and who only yesterday gave to a large man a small pair of corduroy trousers for a seven-year-old boy, with a man's coat and vest!

We started to unpack and arrange our stock. The men's clothes were made up into outfits—a suit of clothes and underwear. The same was done with the women's and children's clothes, until it seemed best only to sort the women's clothes in case we ran short and could not give them a complete outfit. At first our quarters were so spacious, or so it seemed, that we matched up the bags of old shoes, of which we had a goodly number, and we wasted good shelf space on them until they were consigned to gunny sacks again. They had at least been matched up somewhat, and we put them in bags in lots, all the high-heeled and pointed toes together, all those with holes through the soles, etc., etc. Our shelf space was all filled very soon. There were two or three days when I seemed to live on the high stepladder, until I had "Small Women's Suits, etc.," packed tightly on the shelves that reached to the ceiling. The space behind the counter was filled, the drawers (of which we have three large ones) had new Red Cross pyjamas, as we celebrated our first working day in the new shop after our move by opening a Red Cross box of new pyjamas and one of convalescent gowns. Those had to move, as well as the shoes, and I packed them in two boxes for use in a future hospital—and still we had to have room, so burlap was spread on the floor behind the counter and in the back room, the annex, and the tops of the blanket bales were pressed into the service, and when I worked there for two or three days piling "small, medium and large long coats" and the same sizes of suits, it seemed so dull and shut in I called the bales "my Alpine heights." The one excitement was being buried under a heap when the pile toppled over, and I found I had to lay a more careful foundation unless my work was to be done over, and then, too, the thought of the final count haunted me, so I piled everything in fives one way and then five the opposite way. Our next overflow was gunny sacks and pillow cases of various kinds—and still we hadn't room. When our new shipment of ninety bales came September 8th, we had what seemed to us an unending supply of those wonderful Red Cross boxes of socks, mufflers, sweaters, wristlets, etc., and a few of miscellaneous articles that proved such a joy. It took us till September 18th to unpack and sort the one hundred and fifty bales. Then the outfits were made up and some of the earlier outfits were "cheered up" by adding a few extras. We put some of the boxes in the front room of the shop and we put twenty bales in the centre of the front room. This gave us table space, as one bale on top of another made it convenient height. Then with the wonderful sewing supplies in our miscellaneous Red Cross boxes—thread, buttons, needles, tape, etc., etc.—sewing classes were started in the orphanages, and that meant they could use odd scraps of material, etc., that came with the old clothes and that helped to relieve our congestion. With the supplies we brought three sewing rooms had been started to make clothes for the orphanages, but we had no buttons and had bought a few at great expense when one of our party went to Euvan in August. In our store we had no pins, no paper, no pencils, pens, wrapping paper or string; every bent pin taken from an old coat or dress was straightened and saved, and to find a safety pin was cause for a special jubilation. We knotted the pieces of string together with which the bales were sewed. One day a ball of unbleached muslin selvage came out of a bale.

As we went on and on unpacking it seemed to us as if all our needs were supplied. The safety pins were saved for the baby outfits, and before we were through I had more than five yards of them, plenty of other pins, so many pencils we could share with the orphans, supply the needs of the store and have some extra ones on hand. I am so glad our supplies did not come all at once, for our "miscellaneous boxes" produced safety pins and buttons in such numbers we never could have been as careful or as elated over "our finds" as we were.

The Following Letter Describes Difficulties Encountered by a Nurse in Traveling to Attend Influenza Cases

St. Huberts, Keene Valley, N. Y.
February 19, 1920.

Thinking that you would be interested to know how I found things here in Keene Valley, I am going to describe the situation a little.

I arrived in Plattsburg several hours late to learn that a blizzard had struck the country on Sunday, stopping all trains and practically closing all roads. I was 58 miles from my destination. No one could tell when the trains would run, one snow plow being in Canada and the other in Saranac Lake. I telephoned to Mr. ——, where I was going, for advice and to find out how urgent was the call. He said to come as quickly as possible. The only thing to do was to get a team. I finally found a man who agreed to carry me on to Keeneville, 17 miles distant, but he doubted if we could get there. He had a fine team and it took four hours to make it. Several times we left the road and went through fields. The snow was even with the top of the cutter. Four times he had to get out and shovel a way of 100 yards or so through a drift. At Keeneville no one would take me on further—I had still 41 miles before me. So I stopped there all night. In the morning a George Sweeney and another man ventured out to Ausable Forks with an empty coffin to fetch the body of his father. They took me with them, having no idea we could get there. We had to leave the road many times, going on the Ausable River for one and three-quarter miles and through the fields. Part of the time I drove the team while they cleared a way through the drifts. It was way below zero and a stiff wind was blowing. It took us six hours to go twelve miles. At Ausable I had lunch and after resting a half hour a fresh team took me fifteen miles to Keene Center. There another team took me on to Keene Valley, where I changed again to come on to St. Huberts. I arrived here at 5 P. M.

The house is three miles from the village and twenty-one miles from the nearest railroad. The entire second floor is turned into a hospital. The family consists of the father, mother and two daughters, 16 and 17 years old. All are ill and in bed. The father was up Tuesday night when I arrived and at 2 A. M. was taken sick with pneumonia. He had been up two days after the "flu." The mother has lobar pneumonia—the younger daughter was given up by the doctor when I arrived. She now has a normal temperature and is eating soft diet. The elder daughter has the "flu" with tuberculosis. There is no bath. A half-witted boy helps me all he can. The minister stays with me at night to keep the fires going. The neighbors are very kind —the women are terror stricken, but the men come in and do all they can for me—washing dishes, digging me out of the snows, which constantly drifts, and so on. The doctor comes once a day. I do all the cooking and washing. There is no help of any kind to be obtained.

We help out the neighbors who are sick and without nurses. People are dying all around, but not many new cases are developing. I go a quarter of a mile away to my meals. The walk does me good, and in that way I get the needed exercise. While I am away, John, the boy, a neighbor, or the minister, looks after my patients. I leave them comfortable and so far it has all worked out well. Everyone is wonderfully kind. I have never met so many nice people at one time.

So far I have kept well. Of course I get very little sleep at night and none during the day. Up till to-night two of my patients were irrational. To-night I've developed a sore throat and cold in my head, but hope it will be nothing.

The doctor is very much encouraged over the people and they seem to have taken a new lease on life. They were horribly discouraged when I got here.

This is a wonderful experience and one which I am not apt soon to forget. It is hard work, but there are good results.

OBITUARY

Whereas—In the recent death of Miss Sophia Palmer, Editor of the American Journal of Nursing since its inception, the entire nursing profession has suffered a distinct and incalculable loss, and

Whereas—Miss Palmer's marvelous vision of the future possibilities in our profession was the source from which sprang the original ideas which crystallized eventually into registration of nurses as it exists to-day, and

Whereas—Miss Palmer was one of the founders of the American Superintendents' Society (now known as The National League for Nursing Education), from which association have sprung all the educational benefits the trained nurses of to-day enjoy, be it

Resolved, that we, the Alumnæ Association of the Presbyterian Hospital Training School of Nursing, record our sincere sorrow over her loss, and pledge ourselves, as a tribute to her, to be, in every possible way, instrumental in all future dissemination of the principles and practices involved in the formation of our profession for which she stood unwaveringly.

A LETTER FROM MISS BRACKETT

Dear Fellow Alumnæ:

At the last meeting of the Executive Committee the activities of the Alumnæ Association were discussed and we felt that you might like to increase these activities.

Now that the Great War is over, some of you are wondering what to do next. Why not expend some of your energy and effort on your own Alumnæ Association and make it a real Order of Neighbors?

We cannot accomplish this without the suggestions and assistance of each one of you. Therefore, we are asking you to write a note to the Secretary, Miss Ruth Dean, 41 East 70th Street, New York Ctiy, and tell us what you would be interested in having your Association do, either in a social or educational way.

Would you like to have lectures, discussions or parties? We want your suggestions now, in order that the Committee may prepare something interesting for the coming fall and winter.

Remember that this is your Association, and that you will probably get just as much or as little out of it as you put into it.

Let us take our Association down from the top shelf of our cupboard, from among our other valuable and prized but seldom used articles, and place it among our "every-day things," which we can always find and are continually running across when looking for something else.

Let us all pull together for a gala year, those of us who are not actively engaged in our profession as well as those who are, for we all have something in common. Help us to find out how much. Send us your suggestions.

Yours sincerely,

ELIZABETH R. BRACKETT,

President.

TO THE ALUMNÆ

Regardless of the dissension among the Alumnæ Association as to just what the rules and regulations are to be governing the Pension Fund, they quite unanimously agree that there should and must be one. Unfortunately rules and laws cannot be made for individual cases, but must be made for the vast majority. Nothing is ever perfect and it is even less so in its initial stage. Each member has had an opportunity of expressing her views on the subject, and those who have not made the most of this opportunity are in no position now to complain of the action that has already been taken. It is now but a tentative plan for five years. In the meantime, if any member should have a golden inspiration on the subject, the Pension Fund Committee will receive it with open arms without a doubt, and in 1924 one and all of us will have an opportunity of discussing said inspiration ad lib.

Even with the generous gifts we have had so far, it is most imperative that steps be taken at once to increase our principal. Another opening for a golden inspiration! The increase in the annual dues is a help, but not sufficient unto the need thereof. What reader of this Quarterly has a golden inspiration? Even a silver one will help.

To the Secretary of the Alumnæ Association:

We have been asked by the Federal Public Health Service to get in touch with all nurses who have been in the army or navy service who may be in need of advice or care which the government is desirous of giving them. We have so far as possible communicated with the individual nurses as they have been brought to our attention, but we feel sure that many nurses who might be helped are not receiving any assistance, simply because we do not know just how to connect with them.

We are therefore taking the liberty of asking all alumnæ associations to find out if there are, among their members, any sick nurses or nurses who are in need of assistance in getting their War Risk, compensation, or re-education.

We have already been able to help a good many of the nurses by putting them in touch with the various offices to which they are obliged to apply. As I have been appointed by the Federal Public Health Service as Consultant Nurse for this part of the country, I am exceedingly anxious to be of as much help to the nurses as possible. If among your membership there are those whom we might be able to serve, will you be good enough to ask them to communicate directly with me and I shall be delighted to be of any service possible?

With sincere thanks for your assistance, I am,

Yours sincerely,

FLORENCE M. JOHNSON,

Consultant Nurse, U. S. Public Health Service.

COMMENCEMENT, MAY 13, 1920

The Twenty-sixth Annual Commencement of the Presbyterian Hospital Training School for Nurses was held at 8 o'clock, on the evening of May 13th, in the Madison Avenue Presbyterian Church. This is the first time that the exercises have been held outside Florence Nightingale Hall, and the innovation was most successful. In the past years the Hall has been so overcrowded that not more than half the guests could be seated comfortably. This year there was plenty of room for everyone, and the church looked most dignified and inspiring. The Probationers, School and Graduating Class (of which there are 59) walked from the Hall to the church on Seventy-fourth Street. It was a beautiful spring evening and the crisp blue and white uniforms with starched caps and aprons made a very attractive bit of color.

Upon reaching the church, the graduating class was presented with corsage bouquets of red roses, the gift of Mr. Sloane.

The exercises opened with the Star Spangled Banner. Then a prayer by Dr. Coffin, pastor of the church. The speech of the evening was by Rev. Dr. Kelman, late of St. George, Edinborough. His talk touched on the life, characteristics and privileges of a nurse. The three essentials dealt with were Love, Service and Courage. His talk was a real message and left us all with much to think about in regard to our future and profession.

Then came the awarding of the diplomas by Mr. Sloane and the pins by Mr. Sheffield. After the benediction, the School, led by the Graduating Class, marched from the church to the church house, where the reception took place. The reception hall was beautifully decorated with flowers, and here the refreshments were served, after which a dance was held in the gymnasium upstairs.

At first there was some regret among the students that commencement was not to be held in the Hall, due probably to sentiment connected with past years, however the exercises were such a success, and everyone enjoyed it so much, that the regrets were very short lived, and a commencement of the same kind is being anticipated for next spring.

AN EXPLANATION OF THE ASSOCIATION OF THE STUDENT BODY OF THE PRESBYTERIAN HOSPITAL

With the interest and encouragement of Miss Maxwell, and "in order to promote the well-being of our school and create further co-operation among its members," a mass meeting was called on the 5th of April. It was hoped that then we might speak out openly the murmurings of dissatisfaction and restlessness that could be heard of an evening up and down the corridors of the Hall, discuss them freely and decide on some constructive solution.

The "speakers" on the platform that evening were surprised, beyond their fondest hopes, at the number of students who found it possible to assemble "en masse." There were over eighty present, and the interest shown and the spirit in which constructive criticism was made was most impressive.

The committee had prepared some suggestions on the subjects of student government and social activities, all relating to "off duty" time. After an open discussion, a plan was evolved, not just what the committee had in mind, but one which was surely expressive of the wants of all. It was decided that the members of the School should organize as an association, and that the chairman, pro tem., should appoint a committee to draw up a constitution. This constitution was to provide for officers and a representative council, this latter to be the "mouthpiece" of the Association in any matter they wished to have heard. The general feeling was against the immediate assuming of the responsibilities of a student government. The meeting was adjourned after a motion was carried that a second mass meeting should be held to complete further plans.

The second meeting was held on the third of May, when we adopted our constitution, elected officers, and drew up a list of suggestions to Miss Maxwell for her approval.

The Association will meet as a whole four times during the year, and the Council every month. We hope that each nurse will show her interest by expressing her opinions to the Council, so that in this way the students may be brought closer together and a greater co-operation created between the student body and the Training School Office.

MARGARET W. GREEN.

Article III.

Section I. A two-thirds vote of the members of the Association is necessary to amend this constitution.

Done in a meeting of the student body on May 3, 1920.

At a meeting of the Board of Directors of the Henry Street Settlement, held a few days ago, it was unanimously voted that a message of appreciation be sent to the Nurses of the Presbyterian Hospital Alumnae for their services during the campaign to raise a million dollars for the Visiting Nursing Service. I feel quite inadequate to speak for all the officials, but I am quite sure that you will understand that individually and collectively we realize that you were working with us and for the community when you gave your services to the campaign.

There have been a great many wonderful and inspiring demonstrations of fellowship that are very helpful to us and to the splendid women on the nursing staff: for the best of us need assurance from time to time that the work we do is valued by our contemporaries. But a drive demands real sacrifices and we know that many who worked for the campaign, as well as many who gave to the fund, gladly made these sacrifices.

The other Directors join me in thanking you many times for the service that you have given to the cause. A statement of the results of the campaign is under preparation and will be sent to you.

Very sincerely yours,
LILLIAN D. WALD,
Chairman, Board of Directors.

SECOND PART OF A LETTER FROM MARY MAGOUN BROWN, '97

Karaklis, Caucasus, October 26, 1919.

I am ashamed to confess it, but when I was changed from the hospital and orphanage inspection work and detailed specially to "old clothes" for the refugees, my heart failed me a little, for after six hours' work with a break for lunch I couldn't tell "t'other from which," and the next day would find that a coat on the "small" pile was fit for a giantess. But with the added interest and making a game of it, it was possible to work an average of nearly eight hours a day and then ten and over—forty-nine bales a week is the largest number opened, and eleven bales in one day. I think almost every State in the Union has been represented, and I am sure every fashion for at least seventy-five years.

The wife of our District Commander has given a great deal of time to this work beside her many other duties, and has decided many vexed question and is "Chief of Staff" in the store. My position has been that of stock clerk (?). We feel that we have developed into a real department store like Wanamaker's, and we never forget that we owe it all to the Red Cross. I want to register my gratitude and appreciation of what they have done and are doing for us here. The sight of my own Red Cross brassard gives me courage and strength over and over again in this isolated place, and I am proud to be a member of their nursing staff and only long to be more worthy and able to do better work.

I must tell you some of our pet aversions, as well as some of our special joys. First, the aversions—a very stiff and thick, short jacket that will not fit any girl or woman in Armenia and is always put into an outfit with qualms of conscience; then, a beruffled skirt, so that whenever you take hold of it it isn't the right place to fold it and you never can find the waistband. The same is true of the all-in-one dress with thin sleeves that get lost and mixed up somewhere! And surely trying to one's patience, when you want to fold quickly and neatly, is a pair of canton flannel night-drawers large enough for our American small boys, that are pulled out of the bale so that they seem yards long. The baby rompers are just as bad for a small garment. I may remember some other aversion and put it in out of place, so will plead your forgiveness beforehand.

But the special joys come to mind so fast I cannot choose which to write and am leaving out many to save you from sheer exhaustion. The variety of the work saves the day, and you know it surely must have cost many struggles to part with some of the things that have been cherished through a long past. I have the dearest "old ladies' outfit" that seemed to belong together, though only a bonnet and cape were the beginning—now I have added a silk wrapper and a fur neckpiece, etc., and just the other day a quilted silk petticoat such as my grandmother wore. Then the lovely colors (especially the coat linings) are such a joy because they cheer one after the countless black coats, skirts and petticoats and even black children's clothes, and then you know the refugees will love them. I have been so glad the suits rarely come together because I have always put a colored skirt with a black coat and vice versa. Then the dainty things that you love to see. We had one set of straw colored linen and dimity dresses with bloomers to match and white dimity lace-edged guimpes, and there were extra bloomers and guimpes and they were so beautifully made and well supplied with snaps. They came most of them together and I found a lovely brown and yellow cap and scarf and embroidered flannel petticoats and a pair of white silk stockings and new shoes to go with them, and the other day a special orphan (cared for by the woman doctor here in her own home) was forthcoming, so I hunted for a brown broadcloth coat and some every-day dresses and stockings, and it was such a comfort to find a rightful owner. The baby clothes are always the most welcome, and I do not think Karaken ever fails to call to me if he finds a little quilt or blanket or bright striped afghan, and say "baby." When I can I make up the baby outfits on Sunday, when I work at least half a day, as the pressure before the cold comes is so great, and it is such a joy. The babies always have a complete change of clothes and a warm quilt or blanket, a third of a large cake of soap and a towel and a soft piece of cloth for a wash rag. Another of the "joys" are the funny things. I found one day a ladies' visiting card attached to a very small light colored silk scarf, the kind that fastens with one snap at your neck; another day a new black crepe bow and high collar in a white cardboard box. How is that for saving Armenia? Well, our laundress is a widow, so I took her the bow and found a turn-down white crepe collar so she could have a change! And I welcomed the box to keep my scraps of paper in.

Karaken is a thorough searcher of pockets, and produces anything and everything—American cents, a rubber stamp, stubs of theatre tickets, telephone and electric light bills, that seem like old intimate friends, here, scraps of lessons for school, and the other day a note from one friend in jail asking his friend to get him out on bail. I found a clean handkerchief in the pocket of a little boy's blouse with his name and address, and some day it will be a pleasant diversion to acknowledge anything sent with addresses. One shopping bag with spools of white cotton and black silk seemed such a treasure. This last week we had some feather-stitched baby sheets, and they made such a change with their bit of color. When I make up the baby outfits it is such fun to put a pink jacket with a pink blanket, though sometimes with the older children I match up all the colors I can to please the recipients. I still have a lovely blue outfit for a special baby and another pink one. I found on a very worn undershirt the owner's name written and welcomed it as something different. A tablecloth that came out of a bale that had been wet and was all mildewed seemed such a tragedy. I put it on the floor and piled great piles of warm coats on it. So often I have found the "pieces" in the pockets of the children's clothes, showing a mother's care, and I have always been so pleased to find pockets on little petticoats or bloomers. We have had bathing suits and linen riding skirts for use on a side saddle, and I was overjoyed to get a combination ballet skirt and bloomers such as the "lovely ladies" of my childhood days wore at the circus on horseback. I have made a specialty, next to the babies, of my "lady dowager outfits," for some of these tall old refugee women need remarkable things. I have found more wonderful underclothes as to sizes and shapes than you could imagine, and I have added crepe kimonos for color and because the refugee ladies can make Turkish trousers of them. And we have had such hoods as to size and color, and the best of the outfits has usually been the large warm coat. I have had pink corduroy, bright green felt and white eiderdown coats. It will be one of my great disappointments that when we were giving out the clothes the only request we had for Turkish trousers, made by an ancient refugee dame, I could not grant as the "dowager ladies" were all used up and I had not the presence of mind in the emergency to seize a pair of new Red Cross pyjamas from a box in our annex.

We believe that eventually "everything" comes out of the old clothes. We have had a parasol, furs, garters, and one day a canton flannel case for silver knives. At first we used the horses to hang muffs on, but soon gave it up and put our furs in gunny sacks just as we did our ladies' hats, compressed to queerer shapes than their original ones. Our motto has been to conserve everything, and we have had "sewing room" and teachers' bags and have put in hundreds of georgette waists of all sorts of lovely colors and sheer muslin dresses and thin underwear and lace ruffled petticoats, and as we found more and more things we have had special bags called "consideration" and into them we put plainer and more serviceable wash waists and dresses of all sizes, for some day we hope that every Karaklis orphan will have a best dress for use on Sunday and other festal occasions. "Consideration" has become a large department and numbers hundreds, and it is a joy to us all. Just once or twice in all these weeks I have detected a faint whiff of orris root that has outlived the time and distance and the compression in the bales. It has seemed to bring fragrant and refreshing memories. Of all the joys the baby things are the greatest, for the love with which they have been prepared and used carries over and goes out with them we hope to help and bless.

You are tired with this long story and will be glad to know the end is nearly reached. Some day I will send you the report giving the number of outfits given out, but it is not ready yet. I am sorry to tell you that the refugees don't like the cut and pattern of our clothes, for we have given to 1700 and more, and it was a wonderful sight to see the women open their bundles in the street, squatting down and spreading them out on a quilt if they had one, and, if not, on the road. The furs they disliked especially, and we still see their rags all about us and not any of our lovely bright satin linings, for I had hoped they would care to wear their coats inside out.

I forgot one of our joys, and that is the quantities of worsted that we have had and that we needed more than anything else, and such lovely patchwork quilts that have served as patterns in the orphanage sewing rooms—and yesterday a wreath of pink flowers to be worn in the hair, that reminded me of an orchid we found early in the time.

At first we had dress parades at home in the evening. I felt, as I couldn't have a "show window" (which is a much-neglected part of our work), that at least our party must get the fun out of the fashions. We are holding in reserve our dress suits and use the frock coats as overcoats.

We have at present several new departments—not long ago our small supply of drugs was moved from the medical storeroom, which is not in such a central location, and we have a drug corner with our supplies in alphabetical order. I feel as if the shelves that had held the old shoes were greatly promoted. And, by the way, the sixty-three sacks of old shoes have been turned over to the chief of the Karaklis refugees for distribution. I was so pleased to meet the chief "chebouk," and he looks his part. We counted the sacks as they were loaded on the ox carts, and each one I inspected. In one I found some soap and thread, etc. As we had several gunny sacks from the U. S. A., full of the closing out of Red Cross sewing rooms—a wonderful medley of thread, pins, buttons, etc., this must have been one of those bags. I presented the chief with a cake of soap and also his assistant, and they both saluted. It was quite an occasion. We hear the shoes are under lock and key, as the chief cannot agree as to their distribution in the neighboring districts. We would feel it more if they were really valuable and practical. We hope they can use the leather for children's shoes; we are making them slippers of felt hats. Then we have a real notion counter with a special corner for the orphan's sewing rooms, and from that counter I was able to get a corkscrew for the drug department. From our new stock of sewing materials we have supplied a small American committee shop, so that the more well-to-do villagers here can get fancy buttons, pins, thread, etc., and I have a list of what was sent out for that shop, which is run by one of the office force, a native, and is open two hours a day, if he has time. Our latest addition to it was a piece of lovely fine black voile, which is being sold at half price per archin, which is their measure. In that same shop new men's shoes are sold, and they are stored where our bales and boxes are stored.

Our last department is a shop at the house, or rather a storehouse, and it has two sections—one is the orphans' Christmas and the other supplies necessities and comforts to travellers and friends, and the Red Cross boxes are its source. In some of them we found comfort kits for the soldiers. We have dolls and the comfort kits taken apart will make many orphans happy. Think of the small combs and handkerchiefs and trench mirrors and sewing kits, etc., and you will know we are happy and hope to have one thousand gifts ready for the orphans. Some treasures we have added from a barrel sent by some sewing society. We have empty boxes one on top of the other for these stores, and the only supplies we have as yet not placed are a number of the "Speak French" books, though some have been distributed in our little village. We are still busy, for winter is coming and the days are so short we work by lantern light in the late afternoon, and we have on hand 237 new bales, of which 199 are still to be opened. Be sure we appreciate the "old clothes" and think it worth while to sort them. The good and valuable things far outweigh the worn out, and we are finding use for them all.

Oular, Kishla, March 26th, 1920.

One week ago today Miss King and I left Talas and came to the nearest railroad, which is a distance of one hundred and twenty miles. Here we found that no trains had run for some time. The French and the British each have torn up part of the railroad and the Turks have blown up one of the bridges.

We are traveling with a missionary who knows the language and country, so we are very fortunate. We are now thinking of going to Adana by automobile, then by train to Mersina and taking a boat to Beirut and then to Constantinople, or perhaps direct to America. If this is impossible we will return to Talas and wait until later in the summer. The doctor who was with us was relieved, but as yet no nurses have been sent to take our places. However, our native nurses are very capable, and the doctor thought that he could manage without us until some nurses are sent.

We are now living in a mud hut among the mountains and see no one except a few soldiers now and then, who come in for Turkish coffee.

Two of the American Transportation men are going to take our mail to the nearest seaport by auto, and we are hoping to receive some in return.

I am looking forward to seeing you very soon now.

BLANCHE S. EASTON.

EXTRACT FROM LETTER TO MISS MAXWELL

Since our return to France we have moved to Bordeaux. We found living conditions in Paris very trying. Such a change in the general spirit of the people—much idleness and unrest. The "eight hours a day law" has not so far been a success. Theatres, cinemas and dance halls refuse hundreds daily. There has never been such a thirst for pleasure among the working class. France, but more especially Paris, is passing through a difficult period of social and political readjustment painful to witness, so I am glad we are living in this comparatively quiet town.

I had not been here many days before I remembered about Doctor Hamilton and her wonderful work at Bordeaux. I was sorry I had not asked you for a letter of introduction before leaving New York, but I did not know then we were to live in Bordeaux. I went to the Maison de Santé Protestante and asked for an appointment with Doctor Hamilton, mentioning that I was one of your graduate nurses. I was received most kindly.

Mademoiselle Mignot, the "Cheftaine," invited my husband and me to a Concert, Lotery and Buffet the nurses were giving as a surprise to Doctor Hamilton for the benefit of the new hospital fund. I am enclosing a programme. It was a splendid demonstration of their resourcefulness. Floral decorations, handwork of all kinds for the Lotery, hundreds of cakes, coffee, tea, chocolate, ice cream, also poems, songs, costumes—everything was made by the nurses in their hours off duty. They realized the handsome sum of eight thousand francs, besides giving their friends a very pleasant afternoon.

The dialogues were exceptionally fine. They did good propaganda work, for they pointed out the danger of the old method of nursing which unfortunately still predominates in this country. The Ancient and Modern Nurse were most amusing and kept the spectators in a continuous uproar of laughter.

EXTRACT OF LETTER TO MISS MAXWELL

Perhaps you will be interested to hear that I have taken the position of first aid station nurse for the Foundation Construction Company which is building the large Dunlop American Rubber Plant on the River Road between Buffalo and Tonawanda. I am employed by the Employers' Mutual Insurance Company of New York.

The station is a temporary shack of two rooms, and as it has been running only about three weeks, it is still in a very unsettled state. There are from twelve to fifteen hundred workmen employed here to date and I am averaging over twenty cases a day.

The work is wonderfully interesting. It has been great fun helping the surgeon in charge to plan and arrange the equipment and it is delightful to find the officials of all three companies most eager to do everything to facilitate the running of the little "hospital" as everyone calls it.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS TO MISS MAXWELL FROM CUBA

March 21, 1920.

My work has just nicely begun; I did not get started at all until after March 1st. I have the teaching of practical nursing to the graduate nurses, about thirty in all, the majority from the two training schools in the city and some from other hospitals on the Island. I have classes in the Mercedes and Calixte Garcia hospitals, and in each I have one or two who can speak a little English. The text-book in Spanish is a life saver both for myself and the class. They are all so interested that I am enjoying it very much. I am struggling along with the Spanish started with the Berlitz School for want of something better, but now have a really splendid teacher and have a little more hope. However, living in an English family does not give one much chance for practice.

We are having very hot weather here now, regular July heat. One has not much desire to be on the street between nine in the morning and five in the evening as the sun's rays are so direct and hot and there is such a glare. All the buildings are light colored and there are very few trees to shade and soften the light. I am assured that it will not be much hotter in July, but I rather dread the long siege of heat.

I do hope that you are quite well again, dear Miss Maxwell.

Very sincerely yours,

GEORGIA A. MORRISON.

Miss Hibbard has been planning for the continuation of our work here next year. Last Saturday she had a conference with the Secretary of the Department, who is at present acting as President. The conference consisted of Miss Hibbard and her assistant, the two hospital superintendents, Miss Fitzsimons and myself. Needless to say, Miss Fitzsimons and I were silent members. Well the outcome was that the work is to be continued and Miss Fitzsimons and I have been asked to return in October for another year.

Provision is also made for a dietitian and for classes in English for the student nurses. Miss Hibbard was especially anxious to settle this, as there is apt to be a change of Government this autumn, an election being due in October.

Miss Hibbard's plans for next year are not completed, but she hopes to keep one nurse in Havana and send the other to the other hospitals on the island. There are six of these.

Our work finishes June 30th and we expect to go North early in July. I do wish it were not so hot here—I am afraid I am a real northerner.

Mrs. Jenkins was here for a few hours on her way to Mexico. We did enjoy seeing somebody from the Presbyterian Hospital.

G. A. MORRISON, '13.

IMPORTANT NOTICE

The National Board of the Y. W. C. A. is organizing a co-operative housing group. The group are purchasing four houses on East Fiftieth Street, between First and Second Avenues, which are to be remodeled in one, two and three apartments with bath and kitchenette. The houses will probably be available for occupancy December 1st. Applications for apartments should be made as early as possible. Full particulars may be had by applying to Miss Beatrice Stearns, 600 Lexington Avenue; Telephone Plaza 4700.

MISCELLANEOUS

Regular organized fire drills are being started at the P. H. for the first time in its history. Preliminary instruction and demonstration were given to the nurses in the Hospital court the end of May. We learned a great many things in those few minutes. The most unpardonable sin is to own or have in one's possession a chafing-dish. We must never run or scream if a fire is raging. We must never throw matches or other burning material from the hall windows, because of the awnings. Last, but not least, we learned that fire extinguishers last only half as long and shoot only half as far as they are guaranteed to . . .

P. S.: Who would ever notice any smoke in Florence Nightingale Hall, anyway? Or if some inconsiderate individual did, would the hose company work overtime with this popular eight-hour day on?

A kitchenette is at last on its way to Florence Nightingale Hall. The Senior Class was giving it to the School, but the Board of Managers have at last appreciated its necessity and are financing this new culinary department. One of those nice cozy little rooms between the bathrooms has been dedicated to this more fitting purpose. "A wise man never refuses anything to necessity." Last month the interior decorations of Room 519 were badly scorched, due to the poor manipulation of one of those forbidden chafing-dishes.

It is interesting to know that within the last few months the Johns Hopkins School of Nursing has been given permission to entertain the Hospital Staff openly and above board, ad lib as it were. The P. H. is not much behind them; all it lacks is the permission.

If some of the H. N.'s of the "Old School" could only come back now! Their flagrant autocracy of old has been superseded by socialism in the ranks. Times have changed It is no longer—"Miss A., why isn't your work finished?" but, "Miss A., do you think it will be a possible thing for you to finish your work when you return from your four hours off?" It used to be difficult to arrange for classes, but now it is even more difficult to arrange for engagements with father, sister, mother, brother or some ardent suitor (within or without the building?).

The tennis court (which has hitherto been open to men alone), through the persevering insistence of the last graduating class, has been bequeathed to the training school for the morning hours. No harm so far has come from this unprecedented break in technique save of an endemic infection of tennis in the school. Uniforms are not allowed on the court; knickers are still a question of debate.

Catering to the whims, fancies and idiosyncrasies of the attending staff now is even more complicated than of old, though it does not entail their little personal niceties as much. It is not so much a question of hot or cold water for their hands or of scented or unscented hand lotion any more, but their opinions still widely differ. Dr. Auchincloss says that nothing means as much to him as that one little heat unit, a calorie, while Dr. Hawkes says he never has known what a calorie is, he doesn't know now, and he hopes he never will.

Miss Delia Battles' contributions to the Quarterly have been made conspicuous by their absence in the last editions. All its readers extend thanks to Miss Battles for what has hitherto been untiring interest in her Alumnæ Quarterly. It is hoped that she will see fit to entertain them again in some of the future editions.

The enlargement of the Dispensary by utilization of the inner court makes all once hopeful nurses feel that the new Hospital is even further away than ever. It is a real myth now; even the plans have left Dr. Young's desk.

Dentistry is making its strides at the P. H. as well That handful of tooth scrapers and that one pair of extracting forceps of which the Hospital used to brag, and those bi-weekly dental clinics in the O. P. D. have been supplanted by a young army of Dental Hygienists under the supervision of Dr. Rosenoff. "Have your teeth attended to or go home," is the motto on every ward. Sometimes this motto is rather an embarrasing one to get around, when an interesting case refuses Dr. Rosenoff's dental service. It has been found necessary to give those few minutes assigned to the patients for quiet meditation between rounds, etc., to Dr. Rosenoff for her work. Never before have we realized what a strong etiological factor bad teeth play in nearly all diseases.

A very interesting and beautiful "Florence Nightingale Pageant," to which the nurses of our school were invited, was given June 9th on the grounds of Bloomingdale Hospital.

Quite recently a nurse, well known to most of the Alumnæ, when asked what constituted being professional (used in a Training School sense) replied, "Just being natural." I wonder how many graduates the P. H. would have, had all the Probationers gone through their first six months just being natural? She was born professional, but all of us were not.

Seeing the Doughnut and Seeing the Hole.

"And the three essentials dealt with by Dr. Kelman were Love, Service Courage." That is seeing the doughnut from the standpoint of an over-warm idealist. Dr. Kelman's address might be termed a eulogy on nurses in general and on overseas nurses in particular. His contact with the nurses overseas must have been unique. He viewed them as terrestrial angels, and set them upon a snowy white pedestal which the ethereal white wings themselves would have found difficult to be worthy of. He could not commend them too highly for their bravery and courage under fire, their cheerfulness in all adversity and their devotion to their work.

Many of those present who had seen service overseas were quite overpowered by the attributes thrust upon them, and were devoutly thankful that Dr. Kelman had seen only the doughnut and that he had never stumbled upon the hole.

SCANDALUM MAGNATUM

What is the meaning of "professional"? Mr. Noah Webster says, "pertaining to a profession." That sounds sensible, but I am afraid poor old Noah would get an awful jar if he could hear the training schools' elaboration on that word. What a heterogeneous mess they have made of it! Why girls leave home is usually because of a professional calling. Why girls leave training is for much the same reason—with a slangy interpretation of the "calling." Being professional is too often an excuse for arrogant authority and a poor camouflage for bad manners; that is, for those in authority. For the subordinate or undergraduate, if they react to what permeates the unhappy atmosphere, an obsequious piece of mechanism with a sea-level viewpoint results—that is, if the reaction is mild and they have no shoot of temperature.

However, through the process of evolution, involution is taking place, and poor Mr. Noah may have his way after all. Some day, some day soon, "professional" is going to cease being such a distorted word, and Mr. Noah's successor, under the definition of professional, may add, "N. B.—Used in the Nursing Profession it implies good manners and implicit obedience within reason."

THE "NOUVEAU RICHE"

The present spirit of unrest is not confined to the political and economic world, for our profession seems to have joined forces and added its bit to the pile of universal chaos. A sudden influx in "Father's Bank Account" has undoubtedly turned many a prospective nurse to a life less strenuous, and since the armistice the attraction of a dashing, overseas surgical career has vanished. This has more to do with the present quantity of nurses, but the present quality is of even greater interest. Our much lauded vocation of abnegation has become an avocation, a paroxysmal pastime, to be indulged in as long as everything is clear sailing and pleasant. How many take up nursing now as a temporary fad!

TO THE MORE RECENT GRADUATES

Do you remember the elevator in theHall? Surely you must remember the one or two occasions during your training that it was in working order and you got a lift? Well, the thing has been going from bad to worse. One day it would have a violent antipathy for the third floor, and the next day it would be the fifth. One never knew just what its plans were. During the past bitter winter it played express to the roof, and when warm weather came it camped in the basement. A few days ago it returned from this camping trip and with it came a new control. So far the control has not proved a misnomer. Nine hundred dollars (so we are told) well invested! Mamie, Alexander and all the rest of us are happy now.

THE HOSPITAL AND PROHIBITION

One always think of a hospital (particularly those who have had no close contact with one) as a home of temperance, a house of refuge, as it were. "When I am within Satan is behind me and I hold the vantage ground for he cannot push." Of course everyone had to grant that the morning after pay day was just an example of those good old sayings that "there are exceptions to all rules," or "the exception proves the rule." When Prohibition came and rudely thrust all Satan's subjects behind her without making any provision for their welfare, his subjects were like men without a country; they had no place to call their own. These people had to exist—they could not be washed from the earth with Prohibition going strong. So little by little these poor human depravities crept into places where they formerly had feared or hadn't cared to tread. One of the chosen nooks was the sphere hitherto monopolized by the hospital orderly. Though their salaries are but a mite, comparatively speaking, things still appear in trousers who dignify themselves with the title of orderly; for have they not always that hope that they may leave their work carrying 95% alcohol inside or out?

EDUCATION VS. COMMON SENSE

With the present scarcity of applicants for training schools and with no immediate outlook of the supply meeting the demand in the near future, it seems as though the training should be made as attractive as possible, and the entrance requirements made as simple and lenient as is consistent with maintaining nursing standards. How much education is necessary to make an intelligent, efficient nurse? Surely a B.A. or an M.A. does not necessarily make a good nurse. And yet who could ever truthfully belittle an education? A Ph.D. could be of value to a waiter if the Ph.D. were in the proper waiter's hands. The most intelligent and efficient nurses are by no means those of higher education. The present standards of nursing will suffer more from the present dearth of nurses than it would by lowering the entrance requirements and thus getting more nurses to do the work which at present is going undone.

ENFANS PERDUS

There's a rumor abroad,
  And it's stuck in our crop,
That Head Nurses' salaries
  May increase a lot.

There's room for this movement,
  Each one of us say,
We've expected this bonus
  On every pay day.

But the day days have come
  And the pay days have gone,
And our faces each time
  Grow a yard or two long—

"If wishes were horses,
  We beggars might ride"
On and off duty
  Each time the "lift" died.

ALUMNÆ ASSOCIATION MEETING

The Annual Meeting of the Alumnæ Association was held Friday, May 14th, at 3 P. M., at Florence Nightingale Hall. The regular meeting was preceded by an informal meeting in the morning, at which the report of the Ways and Means Committee of the Pension Fund was discussed. This meeting was followed by a buffet luncheon given in honor of the Graduating Class, who later were welcomed into the Association at the meeting.

Miss Sleicher, the chairman of the Committee on the Revision of the Constitution and By-laws, read her report and stated that she hoped to complete her work by the fall meeting. Due notice of the changes in the Constitution and By-laws will be sent each member.

The President, Miss Howes, who acted as our delegate to the Convention at Atlanta, read a very interesting report of the meetings, a copy of which appears elsewhere in this Quarterly.

The report of the Ways and Means Committee of the Pension Fund was accepted, and the following plan was adopted.

Restricted Plan for the Operation of the Pension Fund

Article I. Name and Duration: This plan shall be known as the "Restricted Plan" and shall be lawful for only a term of five (5) years beginning October 1st, 1921.

Article II. Eligibility: (a) Any member of the Alumnæ Association in good and regular standing, having reached the age of sixty (60) years, shall be eligible for a pension. (b) Graduates of classes prior to 1920 becoming members after that date, desiring to participate in the Pension Fund, may do so by payment of initiation fees and dues which would have accumulated in the years since graduation.

Article III. Arrears: Eligibility may be secured by those in arrears by paying same within two (2) years from beginning of this plan. (NOTE THIS CAREFULLY.) Eligibility may be lost by permitting dues to fall in arrears beyond period provided in the By-laws.

Article IV. Pensions: From each year's current income of the Pension Fund, pensions not to exceed $300.00 annually shall be paid in quarterly installments. Total amount of said pensions not to exceed nine-tenths of income, one-tenth to be returned to principal of Pension Fund and all unused income to be retained in "Income from Pension Fund Account."

Article V. Privileges: Because pensions will automatically become due, any member is privileged to return same to principal if she desires. No list of eligibles will be published, but all returning pensions will receive mention in the Alumnæ Quarterly unless otherwise indicated.

Article VI. Future of the Pension Fund: To provide in part for a steady increase of this fund and an opportunity for each alumnus to contribute regularly, the Alumnæ dues shall be increased to $10.00 a year, $3.00 of which shall be paid into the general fund, the balance to be applied to the principal of the Pension Fund. Upon becoming eligible for payment of pensions, members' dues shall automatically be decreased to the amount paid into the general fund (viz., $3.00); also the dues the first year of membership shall be covered by the initiation fee of $5.00.

Article VII. After expirition of five years: At its annual meeting in 1924, the Alumnæ Association shall set in motion measures to provide for this continuation of pensions after the expiration of five (5) years, viz., on October 1st, 1926.

It was earnestly recommended that measures be taken in the near future to add to the principal of the Pension Fund, and that a new Pension Fund Ways and Means Committee be appointed by the Executive Committee.

REPORT OF THE DELEGATE TO THE NATIONAL CONVENTION OF THE A. N. A.

From the thrilling experience of seeing a fairy teach the Public Health Primer story to some fifty small school children to the weighty problems of the training schools, large and small; from the breathless tale of the nurse who has made friends with the Indians under trying and dangerous circumstances in a field where the population numbers one and a half persons to the square mile, to the discussion of salaries; from the discussion of the university training schools for nurses with all their splendid equipment for higher education to some of the absurd inadequacies demonstrated by the results of the State Board examinations—these were some of the excursions of imagination through which we went in the Convention which met in Atlanta, Georgia, in April. It was a gathering marked with enthusiasm and a friendly spirit of competition and argument which gave to all who attended much to take away, upon which to meditate, and, it is hoped, much that will bear fruit for the good of the profession and the public, and that right soon.

As all the papers presented will appear in the nursing journals, and the proceedings will be reported in detail, I shall not undertake to give an abstract of them, but rather submit for your consideration some of the things which most impressed one delegate as being representative of the proceedings of the Convention.

Miss Maxwell's report of the Department of Nursing and Health at Teachers' College, covering briefly its growth in the twenty years of its existence, shows that students are remaining for much longer periods than in former years, many securing degrees where before they stayed only a few months. The students now represent many countries. A permanent historical library is being established there in Miss Nutting's name.

The Interstate Secretary reported much accomplished in organization throughout the country, and it is with great regret that for financial reasons her office must be abolished for the present, the Journal and the A. N. A. being unable to finance the position with the present H. C. L.

The joint sessions of the three organizations meeting for the afternoon sessions were preceded by community singing, led by Mr. Morse from Camp Gordon, well attended and greatly enjoyed by all, the leader especially. The A. N. A. raised about $7,000.00 for the fund for the Bordeaux Hospital, by popular subscription, hat collections and the pledges which some of the delegates came prepared to make, bringing the total up to $45,000.

The message of the Relief Fund of the A. N. A. was most interesting, not so well understood by Alumnæ Associations like our own as by nurses who have small or no alumnæ, to whom the small amounts given by the fund mean the difference between poverty and the possession of the bare necessities, some of the stories being almost beyond belief. The Robb Memorial Fund was reported as being used entirely for teachers since the Red Cross had provided the necessary scholarships for nurses desiring to do Public Health work.

A telegram was sent from the first joint session to the New York State Legislature, then in session, endorsing the Nurses' Bill, then under consideration.

An address on Malarial Fever, its symptoms and treatment, by Dr. James E. Paullon, of Atlanta, was presented, with instructive lantern slides. He claimed that malaria is absolutely curable, providing the quinine is continued long enough and in sufficient quantity, and that it will not be long until Malaria will be relegated to the group of medical curiosities, since it is a disease which is positively curable and preventable. The prevention consists in screening the homes and destroying the still pools wherever they exist. The cure consists in giving 30 gr. quinine daily for the first two weeks, 20 gr. daily for the second two weeks, and 10 gr. daily for the next two weeks, making six weeks in all for the treatment.

Pellagra was discussed by Dr. Stewart Roberts, also of Atlanta. It is not due, as is popularly supposed, to eating too much corn, but is probably a nutritional disease due to lack of balance in the food, the absence of milk, meat and eggs in the diet, and certain mineral substances. Its cure is a dietetic problem and experiments prove that it can be cured except when it has gone too far in the destruction of tissue through starvation. It occurs among people who depend very largely upon carbohydrates, syrup, and fat meat, and it attacks especially the cutaneous, digestive and nervous systems, producing an eruption which looks like a bad case of sunburn, and is mentally depressing to the point of suicide—a picture of mental inactivity and neurasthenia.

It is a disease as variable in its peculiarities as is syphilis, existing sometimes for a long time without being suspected. It is endemic, epidemic, and periodic, but not infectious.

The speakers on Mental Hygiene made a special plea for mental nursing to be included in the regular training of the nurse, and showed convincing arguments why it is necessary. Especially is it important for the school nurse to acquire skill in recognizing the potential mental defective or abnormal child in the schools and thereby help in the reduction of the 75,000 persons annually confined to asylums. The Cinderella of Mental Hygiene is being claimed by the Prince Publicity and will soon be transferred from her position of obscurity and total ignoring to the palace where Medicine and Surgery have been so elegantly housed these many long years. Nursing is not always just the making of beds and the administering of skilled bed-care. The trained mind is needed to work out the Mental Hygiene program by the careful observation of habits of thought and action, and the mentally ill must be transferred from custodial to the best trained nursing care.

At the first evening meeting, which was the formal opening of the Convention, the nurses were cordially welcomed to the city by the Mayor of Atlanta, to which welcome Miss Noyes replied most graciously before proceeding with her President's address. She dwelt chiefly on the problems which were before us because of the great wave of unrest which is assailing every group of people in this great land.

Miss Clayton, President of the League, dwelling naturally upon the educational problems, said that if the nurse is to be prepared for all the things which are now being demanded of her, the whole educational program for the nurses in training must be reorganized and her training put upon the same basis as that of any other professional preparation, a truly educational program, in which her bedside work enters as part of the class-room work and not as the chief part of her work, for the benefit of the hospital. Does it mean public funds for the education of these public servants, with central schools for the theoretical work?

Miss Tucker, President of the Public Health Nurses, laid much stress upon the preventive programs now under way, especially that particular one for prenatal care which has so much bearing on infant hygiene and the protection of the child, turning our attention from making the world safe for Democracy to making it safe for Health.

There were three members of the International Council on the platform at that first evening meeting, and Presbyterian nurses were very proud of the fact that two of the three were P. H. graduates. Miss Jean Gunn, Superintendent of the Toronto General Hospital, the first to speak, reported that the nursing problems in Canada are much the same as in the United States, big changes at hand in the education of the student nurse, one university affiliation already accomplished and preparation for Public Health Nursing greatly improved. Registration is progressing, and the Canadian nurses are looking to the United States nurses for guidance and assistance in their plans for progressive movements.

Miss Charlotte Munck, superintendent of a large hospital training school in Copenhagen, Denmark, also reported an onward march in nursing affairs in Denmark, a country not so much affected by the war as that of the Baroness Mannaheim, delegate from Finland. Her broken English was delightful, and her joy in being at this great American Nurses' Convention was very apparent. Her report of the condition of Finland was sad beyond description, and the problems which face that little northern country make ours shrink considerably in comparison.

The moving pictures which were taken at P. H. some time ago were shown, and we were quite excited at seeing a bit of home so far from New York. These pictures are being used in the publicity campaign which is going on to secure recruits for the training schools.

The American Journal of Nursing was reported to be in thrifty condition in spite of many and great difficulties, shortage of print paper, printers' strikes and other labor difficulties, etc., and while the subscription lists grow all the time, there are still a great many nurses in the country who do not subscribe for their official organ, full of instruction as well as news.

The reports of the various State Boards of Examiners brought out quite forcibly the great need for better teaching in the schools for nurses, and much emphasis was laid upon the State Boards as the medium through which greater uniformity of standards may be brought about and eventual reciprocity promoted.

The much discussed question of central headquarters for the three organizations was voted to be put through without the Red Cross figuring in it except in the matter of financial support. It was a hotly argued matter of business and the Board of Directors was finally empowered to appoint a committee to proceed with the organization of a central headquarters with the possibility of asking the already established Public Health Headquarters to assist in the matter of office room. It was demonstrated that Teachers' College and the various Red Cross headquarters are doing a large volume of business which should be done by a national headquarters of the A. N. A. The Red Cross will assist financially because it is a thing which will be of service to all nurses.

At the Red Cross meeting it was reported that approximately 20,000 nurses were in service during the war, of whom 800 are still in the army and 300 in the navy. 8,000 nurses have gone through the Red Cross Headquarters in New York, an office which has proved to be a real help to nurses returning from overseas. 1,800 applications were received from institutions and organizations for nurses to fill positions, of which 1300 were filled. 400 applications for the Army School of Nursing could not be accepted because of lack of vacancies, and these applicants were placed in other schools through this agency. There are approximately 37,000 nurses now enrolled in the Red Cross. Foreign assignments are still being made for reconstruction work and the organization of training schools in Europe. There are 2,000 nurses altogether in the Army, Navy and United States Public Health Service. 15,000 nurses were provided during the epidemic.

In the opinion of Dr. Farrand of the Red Cross one of the most important results of the war is the federal crusade against disease in an attempt to restore the vitality and improve the health of the nation. The campaign must be given the greatest publicity in order to secure the cooperation of the public. The value of the private enterprises engaged in Public Health work is to demonstrate to the public the need of the particular movement, but eventually the preventive program must be a federal program, with the government in control of Public Health. Furthermore, this campaign depends upon the nurse. All Public Health movements have depended upon the nurse to make the demonstration, rousing the community to the needs, and then putting the work in the hands of the community for it to conduct.

The Director of the Public Health Bureau of the Red Cross, Miss Elizabeth Fox, emphasized the importance of the preliminary work which can be done by the non-professional group in a given community, arousing interest and enthusiasm in the work of the Red Cross before the arrival of the nurse, and acquainting the community with the objects of the work. Then the committee, instead of retiring from the field, as so often happens, should keep at work to support her by maintaing that enthusiasm. The nurse and the committee should share together the responsibility, with the emphasis on THE COMMITTEE. There are now more than 3,000 chapters in the country representing citizen service. The test of a good Red Cross Committee is shown in its work being good, permanent and growing, together with a rural nurse possessed of grace, grit and gumption.

Miss Harriet Douglas, Director of the Bureau of Instruction, told about the enormous amount of work which has been accomplished by the instructors in Home Nursing and Hygiene, of which the following figures tell the story briefly. In 1914 there were 273 students in the Home Nursing course. In 1919, 42,072 students had graduated in the course. The Home Instruction extends to Alaska and the Philippines. It is a great Americanizing influence especially in the rural communities, and is serving as a means of recruiting for the training schools. She told this story: "Yous all gotta wait fo' yo' supper while I ster'lize the ice-pick. I done drop it on de flo' an' de Hygiene Teacher she say it gotta be boiled."

Miss Douglas spoke of the great danger and the possibility of commercializing this course.

At the close of the Red Cross session program an impressive service was held in memory of those who had made the supreme sacrifice, with especial remembrance of Miss Delano.

The Friday morning session was a joint meeting of the three organizations, with Miss Clayton, president of the League, in the chair. The general topic for discussion was the Introduction of Public Health Nursing into the Training of the Student Nurse. A plea was made for greater emphasis, during the training period, on the care of the well child, for better preparation in tenement house obstetrical work, for tuberculosis and mental nursing to be woven into the fabric of the nurse's training, instead of being applied as patches after the presumable completion of the fabric, an opportunity for every nurse to get the Public Health point of view as part of her preparation, not that we may have more Public Health nurses, but that every nurse shall be a Public Health nurse.

Miss Goddrich's paper was an exposition of the need of organized plans for the education of the nurse in order that she may be ready to take up her work at the end of her training without that old cry of "more experience." She gave as an example of the ideal medical community, Harvard Medical School, in Boston, with everything in the world for study of medicine except the educational attitude toward the student nurse. She also emphasized that the Public Health Nurse is no different from any other nurse, since the goal of all the practise of medicine today is the healthy individual, with whom we begin before birth to direct into the health road. We from Presbyterian Hospital were more than proud of the tribute paid to Miss Cadmus for her conviction and courage in establishing an outdoor service for the nurses who have their maternity training at Manhattan Maternity Hospital.

A motion was made and carried to ask the women of Massachusetts to take steps to see what might be done about opening the doors of Harvard University to student nurses, this resolution carrying the endorsement of the three national nursing organizations.

The relation of the Y. W. C. A. to the nursing profession was ably presented by Miss Agnes Sharp, Secretary for Professional Students of the National Board, New York City. She submitted that the student nurse is a student just the same as in any other branch of education, 71 student nurses having been present at the Student Volunteer Convention in Des Moines, Iowa, last fall. They represented 34 training schools, and took their part on equal terms with the 8,000 delegates present. In other words, they must be considered students during their training school days, and the Y. W. C. A. wants to look after them just the same as it does all other students.

The subject of student government followed quite naturally, and we listened with great interest to Miss Gunn's account of the success of the student government in the Toronto General Hospital Training School, in operation since 1917. The organization is as follows: the superintendent of the training school is the honorary president. A member of the senior class is elected president, the vice-president also being a senior. The secretary-treasurer is a member of any class, all elected by the student body. Each section of each class has a member in the Student Council, same being a class officer. There is a Convener of the Social Committee, which committee takes charge of all social functions. There is a Committee of Appeal composed of the assistant superintendent of the training school and three head nurses who are appointed by the graduate staff. The Student Council governs the residence life and is responsible for the enforcement of routine discipline. A class officer is Proctor and she appoints two Monitors, once a month, who are directly responsible for the enforcement of rules. The council meets once a month. The whole student body meets once in three months or oftener if necessary.

The difficulties of such a plan have proved to be: the indifferent students present greater difficulties than those who put up real opposition; it is difficult to secure the co-operation of the older graduate nurses who still feel that the old regime is plenty good enough, and their assistance is quite necessary to make the plan work; the problem of making the students take responsibility.

No student is permitted to refuse an assignment. Sometimes it is hard for the student to enforce rules and one good example is sometimes essential, as in the following case. The pupil was refused membership in the student association, thereby removing some of the privileges, when she went under the old ruling of the training school office. Miss Gunn's observations of the results of student government show that a more active sense of honor is fostered, initiative, executive abiltiy, poise and self-confidence are developed, together with a better understanding between the students and the graduate staff. Free discussion of student difficulties is encouraged, with the result that there is better discipline throughout the school. The sense of responsibility to the school officers is better, and many of the small annoyances have disappeared. The training in parliamentary procedure with actual practice is not the least of the good results.

The students themselves have developed and make active use of a good library. There is a committee appointed to find out what books would be good to have, and they themselves purchase them. They requested that the Y. W. C. A. have a branch in the school for the development of religious activities. The further success of the movement depends upon the giving of the whole responsibility to the students without any strings attached to the training school office. They will not put their whole interest in it unless they have full power, and this requires a decided change in the point of view of most superintendents of nurses, but it is surely a step in the direction of the trend of the times, and the better preparation of the student for her work in future responsibilities, particularly along executive lines.

Miss Stimson's report on the Army School of Nursing shows 4 camps being retained as permanent training schools for nurses, in which are 568 students at the time of the report, about half of whom were in 31 different affiliated schools, that number to be ready for graduation in July. Forty-five of these nurses are definitely prepared and ready for Public Health work, this special preparation to be a permanent feature. Some difficulties have been presented by the civilian status of the pupil nurses, and it is hoped to overcome them by making them cadets in the Army Nurse Corps. It has been decided to keep the training schools as part of the program to make the army an educational center, the resources for teaching being practically unlimited and the opportunities for demonstrating model schools for nurses unmeasured.

Dr. C. G. Parnell, Superintendent of the University Hospital, Ann Arbor, Michigan, presented a paper on the National Problem of Demand and Supply of Nursing Service, and it was indeed refreshing to have a member of the medical profession make a strong stand against the lowering of standards and the shortening of the course. He advocated the raising of standards so that nursing should stand alongside other advanced schools of learning, and said that there is no more reason for having an inferior class of nurses than of doctors, or lawyers, or clergymen, for the time is soon coming when the well-trained nurse will supplant in certain ways the family doctor, not giving her whole time tc one family any more than does the doctor. He advocated legislation to protect the word "nurse" and to raise the standards, and submitted that the trained attendant would in no way take the place of the nurse, except in the capacity of an assistant for her.

A resolution was offered to send word to Congress that the convention of the three organizations urged the support of the bill for increased pay for army nurses. Mrs. Helen Hoy Greeley, who so ably fostered the bill for rank for nurses, was present at this session, and she spoke on behalf of the motion, saying that she thought the voice of the 50,000 nurses represented at that meeting, backed as it would be now in so many cases with a vote, would receive considerable attention.

Methods of recruiting nurses were discussed most attractively by Miss Olmsted of Chicago. She divided the self-supporting women into two groups, those who have commercial motives and those who wish higher education in order to secure greater opportunities for service, the group which we wish to reach for the training schools. Publicity is the first requirement in the recruiting campaign, and the news value of the short course is compared with the news value of the things that are being done in the best training schools, in meeting women's clubs, men's clubs, parents' associations, high school groups, etc. Attractive pamphlets should be prepared, such as women's colleges and preparatory schools have, and the training schools pictured and made so attractive that young women will want to go and live in them. Make the hours such that parents will be willing to have their girls go to the training schools, the same as they would wish to have them go to any school of higher education. The home life must appeal to the sane parent as a reasonable existence. Graduate nurses themselves are responsible for a lot that is told that is not favorable to the training school. Let them make it a point to tell the joyful things and not the grewsome tales which many, perhaps most, are wont to recount. The bugbear of hard work and drudgery must be overcome. Most of us have been asked if it was really true that we had to scrub floors when we were in the training school! A plan for working out publicity agencies by dividing the states into their congressional districts and getting interested people to help, might be feasible. Every effort should be made to keep standards high and either force every training school to meet the requirements or give up the training school, and great emphasis may be put upon the co-operation of the lay members of the community for help in the publicity campaigns.

We heard with much interest of the University School which is to be established in connection with the University of Georgia, the curriculum being held in a tentative state until after this National Convention. Dr. Morril, superintendent, suggested that the way to get the instituions of higher education interested in the needs of the training school is to present them to the trustees of the instituions, approaching the subject entirely from the standpoint of higher education. The only field of activity overcrowded at the present time is that where young people are getting more education. Colleges all over the country are turning away candidats for lack of room. Is it not possible to turn this to account in the matter of our training schools for nurses?

Miss Nutting submitted that some eighteen or twenty universities had, within the last ten years, opened their doors to the pupil nurse, and she was quite sure that a college status for the pupil nurse might bring about that thing which is so essential for the nursing profession today, a more normal relation with the rest of the world, so that she will not leave the profession after her highly specialized training, and so that the schools will again be filled to capacity.

Mrs. Greeley told some very entertaining tales connected with the passage of the bill for rank for nurses. She said it was brought about as a direct result of the fireworks methods employed by the organized nurses throughout the country, as well as of other bodies of women who had become aroused to the real need of this measure.

The Health Officer of Atlanta gave a very brief outline on hookworm disease which appears to be somewhat like typhoid, in that it is transmitted through the soil from the body discharges, and that carriers are frequently wholly unsuspected. The sandy soil, the barefoot child, the entrance of the germs into the lymph channels by way of the skin, and the poor sanitation, tell briefly the story of this dread disease which dwarfs the bodies and minds of the children of the South.

The committee on arrangements of the Georgia nurses surely had their hands full, for, in the first place, there were not enough hotel beds to be had for all the delegates and visitors, so that the generous public was called upon to open spare rooms in private homes where many were most comfortably cared for. There was a Bureau of Information at the railroad station, where Boy Scouts were on duty most of the time until the rush of incoming visitors was over, the boys acting as guides and messengers for both committee and visitors.

The Information Bureau at the Hotel Headquarters provided guides for all the church services on Sunday, and over a thousand nurses were taken for automobile rides by the generous public who loaned their cars for the purpose on Sunday afternoon. As it was a lovely day, this was indeed a happy introduction to the heavy labors of the coming week. The nurses were most graciously entertained at tea from 4 to 6 at the home of one of Atlanta's leading citizens that same afternoon. The Convention meetings were held in the Baptist Tabernacle, a good-sized auditorium, with several small rooms available for conferences and round tables. At the Y. M. C. A., just across the street, a group of women from one of the churches served a cafeteria luncheon from 11 A. M. to 3 P. M. daily, making it easy to get lunch, excellent food, moderate prices, and the added satisfaction of helping the women to swell the organ fund of their church.

The evening sessions at the Armory were preceded in each instance by a short musical program, excellent talent, and a delightful break in the day's program. The last evening the music was rendered by a quartette which sang a group of Southern melodies which will long be remembered by a great many of us. Friday afternoon the citizens of the city were again requested to loan their cars to take the delegates out to Fort MacPherson, a permanent fort, much enlarged for use during the war and now being used as a reconstruction camp. Tea was served, a program provided, and the work the soldiers are doing in occupational therapy was on exhibition, also illustrations of some of the other methods of treatment.

There were over 2,000 delegates registered early in the week, and it was estimated that there were about 3,000 people in Atlanta for the Convention. The people of the city were most kind, public officials always ready to render any service needed, and everyone apparently quite interested in seeing to it that the nurses were well cared for. The cordiality more than made up for some of the difficulties which confronted some of us in the matter of rooms. The railroad strike was not the least of the annoyances, but in due time all were comfortably cared for, and it seemed to be the unanimous opinion that the Convention was one of the most interesting and certainly one of the most important ever held. After the reading of reams of invitations for the next Convention, and a most exciting discussion, it was voted to hold the 1922 Convention in Seattle. Great attractions are offered by the City of Seattle. It will be quite worth while to go there.

There are a few things which must have impressed every nurse present with more than usual force. The enormous growth of the young Organization for Public Health Nursing, the persistent plea of that organization for the more adequate preparation of the pupil nurse for Public Health work, the unanimity of the opinion as to the remedy for the shortage of student nurses, that the time is at hand at this moment when nursing must be put on the plane of higher education for which colleges and universities must make room, that nurses may be better prepared for the constantly increasing responsibilities which are being put upon them, and that every nurse be a Public Health nurse in the trutest sense.

Miss Noyes was re-elected President of the American Nurses' Association.

The following recommendations were made by the Committee on Revision and endorsed by the A. N. A.

1. That the time limit for State Associations to complete reorganization be made February 1, 1921.

2. That each State Association appoint a committee to secure copies of constitution and by-laws of all alumnæ associations within the state to determine whether or not revision of classification of membership has been made to conform to the requirements of the American Nurses' Association. Wherever a committee on revision has been retained by the State Association this duty may be assigned to it.

3. That official transfer cards be used within the state, if the state so desires, and that the transfer be made by the secretary of one district to the secretary of the district to which the member goes.

4. That the By-laws of the A. N. A. be amended by adding to Article VII. a new section to define the duties of the Revision Committee to read:

> Sec. 8. The Committee on Revision shall receive all proposed amendments to the By-laws of the A. N. A. and submit them for action at the biennial conventions.

This committee shall also advise State Associations concerning proposed amendments to their constitution and by-laws, for the purpose of keeping them in harmony with the Articles of Incorporation and By-laws of the A. N. A.

5. Add two new sections to read:

Amend By-laws, Article VIII., Dues, by substituting for Sec. 2 the following:

"All dues shall be paid in advance not later than December 31st, for the following calendar year."

Sec. 4. State Associations whose dues have not been paid by December 31st, shall be notified by the Treasurer and those not paying by March 1st shall forfeit membership.

Sec. 5. State Associations having forfeited their membership may be reinstated upon the payment of dues.

6. Amend Article IX. by adding as Sec. 2:

The order of exercises at each biennial convention of this Association shall be in accordance with a program adopted at the beginning of the Convention and shall include:

Annual reports of all officers,
Annual reports of all sections,
Annual reports of all standing committees,
Address of the President,
Miscellaneous business,
Election of officers and Reading of minutes.

7. Insert as Article XIV. (new):

Duties of State Associations

It shall be the duty of each State Association:

Sec. 1. To send to the President and to the Secretary of this Association the names and addresses of all officers immediately after their election or appointment.

Sec. 2. To confer with the Committee on Revision before adopting any proposed amendments to their constitution and by-laws.

Sec. 3. To report to the Board of Directors of this Association as may be required.

Respectfully submitted,

Committee on Revision:

Agnes G. Deans,
Katherine De Witt,
Helen F. Greaney,
Sarah E. Sly, Chairman.

Your delegate appreciates this opportunity to thank the Alumnæ Association for the privilege of attending this Convention as its representative, and respectfully submits this report of its proceedings.

OBITUARY

It is with highest appreciation of her character and professional ability, that the Alumnae take this opportunity of expressing their deepest regret for the loss of Mrs. Oliver (Claudia O'Neill, '11), who died August 30, 1920, at the Presbyterian Hospital.

COMMITTAL SERVICE OF MISS JANE A. DELANO

On the afternoon of September 18th, 1920—a warm sunny autumn afternoon—the last lines of a useful life were written when the committal services for the remains of Miss Jane A. Delano were held at Arlington Cemetery, Washington. The peaceful knoll dotted with headstones marking the graves of Army nurses, the broad Potomac in the distance, Washington's monument and the Capitol glistening against a blue sky, the quiet group of mourners, the detachment of soldiers and nurses—all seemed in harmony with the still, flag-draped coffin.

A large Red Cross banner was carried at the head of the grave by a group of nurses in white uniforms and Red Cross capes. Grouped on either side were the Army and Navy nurses in dark blue street uniforms, while the long line of soldiers completed the circle. Delegates representing the various interests of Miss Delano's life comprised the group of mourners.

The detachment of soldiers arrived promptly at two-thirty, and the simple military services followed. "Taps" and the measured tramp of the retiring soldiers signified to the quiet group another life of service was completed.

Surgeon General Ireland and Miss Julia Stimson represented the War Department; Admiral Braisted and Mrs Higbie, the Navy; Surgeon General Cummings and Miss Minnegeroad, the U. S. Public Health Service; Colonel Joyce and Mr. Hughes, the Red Cross; Mrs. W. K. Draper, War Council; Miss Francis, the National Nursing Committee; Miss Butler, Nursing Service of Red Cross; Miss Bamber, Jane Delano Post, American Legion; Mrs. Humphries, Bellevue Alumnae; Miss A. Ward, N. Y. State and County; Miss C. Nuno, Atlantic Division; Miss A. MacLellan, Central Club for Nurses, New York City; Miss I. L. Evans, Local Committee, New York Chapter; Miss Young, Presbyterian Alumnae, New York; Misses Lawler, Duncan, Kennedy, Nevin, Kerr, Walter Reed Hospital; Navy nurses from N. S. Naval Hospital at Washington.

NATIONAL COMMITTEE TO SECURE MILITARY RANK FOR ARMY NURSES

Dear Fellow Worker for Rank:

Here at last is the Victory Bulletin for which you have watched. It has been held till now, partly because immediately upon the passage of our bill I was obliged to give almost entire attention to another matter to which I was pledged, and partly because I wished, if possible, to include in it announcement as to the regulations, which the new law required to set forth the rights and privileges conferred by Relative Rank and by which the War Department was to administer the law.

These regulations have fortunately just come through and it is now possible for me to send you the glad tidings that Rank for Nurses has this last week been brought to a completely successful conclusion. Not only has our bill been passed intact, but the General Staff, headed by our old enemy, General March, after one final convulsive effort to escape the bitter dose, has taken its medicine manfully and given its approval to regulations which are highly satisfactory and which should give easy effect to our victory.

As I send you this, the last official bulletin on Rank for Nurses, I want you to know of the very deep sense of obligation we of the National Committee feel toward you and every other friend on our mailing list for your indispensable co-operation. God giveth the increase, but only after Paul has planted and Apollos watered. Without your unfailing response to innumerable appeals in season and out of season, no success whatever could have been achieved. We are gladly conscious of this fact, proud of the idealism whose urge you felt.

I wish also personally to thank you for your wholehearted trust in your counsel. Without the full confidence of one's co-workers one makes but a poor servant, but I think it is given to few to enjoy a richer measure of faith than you have given me. Always it has been an inspiration to better endeavor. Always the recollection of it will be one of my chief treasures. It is proper, is it not, for me to tell you so?

There is not room in this bulletin even to mention the names of the hundreds who have furthered Rank, much less recount their signal services. Yet there is one to whom in tribute I know you will all wish to join, for to her we owed at a time of financial stress the very life and continuance of our work. To her service on our finance committee, whose chairmanship no other would accept, we are indebted for a freedom from anxiety as to funds without which we could not well have gone forward. Of the total sum raised and expended for Rank, almost a third was obtained by your dearly beloved Anna C. Maxwell of New York. For this superb assistance should we not all pay her endless thanks, forever associating her devotion with the achievement of the dignity of Rank for Nurses?

Rank for Nurses is here and we rejoice. Since its achievement was at all times inevitable, we are tempted to regret, almost with bitterness, that in addition to the incalculable difficulties of their task, the noble army of nurses who fought in the Great War should have had to suffer and endure so much that Rank would have made impossible. But the blood and tears of their tribulations were the seed of the new dignity for all to come. In that knowledge philosophy bids us be thankful and content.

Again for the Committee and myself, I thank you for your co-operation in a noble cause and congratulate you on your part in its success.

Faithfully yours,
HELEN HOY GREELEY, Counsel.

LICENSING OF NURSES

THE UNIVERSITY OF THE STATE OF NEW YORK

State Board of Nurse Examiners Albany

IMPORTANT NOTICE

To all nurses practicing in the State of New York:

The Board of Nurse Examiners desires to call the attention of all nurses to the fact that, according to the amendment to the nurse practice act which became a law on May 12, 1920, all persons practising in the State as trained, graduate, certified or registered nurses must be registered and licensed so to practise by the Regents of the University of the State of New York.

Other persons using these titles will be in violation of the law.

A clause in the act provides for this registration and licensing of nurses under a waiver of examination and other conditions heretofore required.

This waiver expires January 1, 1921.

Nurses already registered in the State are required to register with the secretary of the Board of Nurse Examiners prior to December 1, 1920.

Nurses who are NOT REGISTERED IN THE STATE at present should, in making application for registration, give the name and location of the school of nursing by which they were graduated.

Provision is also made for non-graduates of long experience under this act and for those who are qualified to act as trained attendants.

We urge all nurses to attend to this matter at once.

Inquiries and application should be addressed to the Secretary, Board of Nurse Examiners, State Department of Education, Albany, N. Y.

Very truly yours,
ELIZABETH C. BURGESS,
Secretary.

IMPORTANT NOTICE

Nurses who have lost their original registration number may obtain same by writing Mr. Hamilton, State Education Department, Examiners' Division, Albany, N. Y.

§ 4. Section two hundred and fifty-one of such chapter is hereby amended to read as follows:

§ 251. Board of examiners; rules; fees. The New York State Nurses' Association at each annual meeting shall nominate for examiners two of their members, each of whom shall be a registered nurse and have had not less than five years' experience in their profession. Upon the expiration of the term of office of any examiner now in office the regents of the University of the State of New York may from the candidates so nominated or from the registered nurses in the state fill the vacancy for a term of five years and until his or her successor is chosen. An unexpired term of an examiner caused by death, resignation or otherwise, shall be filled by the regents in the same manner as an original appointment is made. Any examiner may be removed by the regents for misconduct, incapacity or neglect of duty. The regents may appoint and at pleasure remove a registered nurse as secretary to the said board of examiners who shall not be a member of such board, and such registered nurse inspectors as are necessary for the purposes of this article to be paid from the funds received by the regents under the provisions of this article at such salaries as they may determine. The said regents shall make rules for the examination and licensing of registered nurses, and trained attendants applying for certification under this article, and shall charge for examination and for certification and license a fee of ten dollars for nurses and five dollars for trained attendants to meet the actual expenses, and shall report annually their receipts and expenditures under the provisions of this article, to the state comptroller, and pay the balance of receipts over expenditures to the state treasurer. The said regents may revoke any such certificate for sufficient cause after written notice to the holder thereof and hearing thereon.

No person shall thereafter practice as a trained, certified, graduate or registered nurse or a trained attendant under any such revoked certificate.

§ 5. Such chapter is hereby amended by inserting after section two hundred and fifty-one a new section, to be section two hundred and fifty-one-a, to read as follows:

§ 251-a. Examinations; licenses, registration. 1. The regents shall admit to examination for registration, and shall license to practice nursing as a registered nurse, any candidate who shall pay the fee of ten dollars and submit satisfactory evidence, verified by oath if required, that he or she:

b. Has a preliminary education of not less than one year of high school or its equivalent; such educational requirement not to be increased before the year nineteen hundred and thirty.

c. Holds a diploma showing graduation from a course of at least two years given by a training school for nurses connected with a hospital or sanitarium approved and registered by the regents of the University of the State of New York.

2. 3. The regents shall admit to examination for registration and shall license to care for the sick as a trained attendant, any candidate who shall pay the fee of five dollars and submit satisfactory evidence verified by oath if required that he or she:

a. Is more than nineteen years of age and of good moral character;

b. Has a preliminary education of at least the completion of the eighth grade in a grammar school or its equivalent.

c. Holds a certificate showing graduation from a course of at least nine months' training given by a school, association, hospital or sanitarium approved and registered by the regents of the University of the State of New York;

d. Passes the examination for trained attendants.

4. A candidate may be licensed by the regents as a trained attendant, provided application is made before the first day of January, nineteen hundred and twenty-one, who

a. Pays a fee of five dollars;

b. Submits satisfactory evidence that he or she is more than nineteen years of age and of good moral character;

c. Submits satisfactory evidence that he or she has had two years' experience in the care of the sick;

d. Whose qualifications to practice as a trained attendant are certified to by three licensed physicians who have personal knowledge of the applicant's qualifications;

e. Passes the examination for trained attendants.

5. On receiving from the board of examiners an official report that an applicant has successfully passed the examination, and is recommended for license, the regents shall issue to him or her a license to practice according to the qualifications of the applicant as hereinbefore provided.

Every license shall be issued by the regents under seal and shall be signed by the commissioner of education of the state of New York and by the secretary to the board of examiners.

Before any license is issued it shall be numbered and properly recorded and its number shall be noted in the license. The regents may revoke any license for sufficient cause after written notice to the holder thereof and hearing thereon.

Applicants examined and registered by examining boards of other states registered by the regents as maintaining standards not lower than those provided by this article may without further examination on payment of ten dollars to the regents and on submitting such evidence as the board of regents may require receive from them an indorsement of their certificates or licenses conferring all rights and privileges of a regents' certificate and license after examination.

6. Every licensee to practice as a registered nurse or a trained attendant shall before the licensee begins to practice thereunder, register in the office of the clerk of the county where such practice is to be carried on, in a book kept by the clerk for such purpose, his or her name, residence, place and date of birth, date and number of his or her license and date of such registration, which registration he or she shall be entitled to make only upon exhibiting to the county clerk his or her license, or a duly authenticated copy thereof, and making affidavit stating the above facts and also that he or she is the identical person named in the license and had before receiving the same complied with all the requirements of this article and the rules of the regents preliminary to the conferment of such license; and that no money other than the fees prescribed by this article was paid directly or indirectly for such license; and that no fraud, misrepresentation or mistake in a material regard was employed or occurred in order that such license should be conferred. The county clerk shall preserve such affidavit in a bound volume and shall issue to every licentiate duly registered and making such affidavit a certificate of registration in his county, which shall include a transcript of the registration. Such transcript and the license may be offered as presumptive evidence in all courts of the facts stated therein. The county clerk's total fee for such registration, affidavit and certificate shall be one dollar.

7. A county clerk having properly issued a certificate of registration to a licensed registered nurse or trained attendant, shall forward a duly attested copy of the same and a copy of the affidavit and evidence upon which said certificate was issued, to the secretary of the board of examiners within thirty days of such initial registration. On or before the first day of May of each year the secretary of the board shall mail to every registered nurse and trained attendant registered in the state of New York a blank application for re-registration, addressing the same in accordance with the post-office address given at the last previous registration. Upon receipt of such application blank, which shall contain space for the insertion of his or her name, office and post-office address, date and number of his or her license, and such other information as the regents deem necessary, and he or she shall sign and swear to the accuracy of the same before a notary public, after which he or she shall forward such sworn statement and application for renewal of his or her registration certificate to the secretary of the board, together with the fee of one dollar for registered nurses and fifty cents for trained attendants. Upon receipt of such application and fee and having verified the accuracy of the same by comparison with the applicant's initial registration statements the secretary of the board shall issue a certificate of registration which shall render the holder thereof a legally qualified registered nurse or trained attendant as the case may be for the ensuing year. These certificates of registration shall all bear date of September first of the year of issue and shall expire on the thirty-first day of August in the year following. On the first day of January of each year or within ten days thereafter, the secretary of the board shall publish and mail to every registered nurse and trained attendant in the state of New York, a printed list of the legally registered nurses and trained attendants within the state. Should any registered nurse or trained attendant continue to practice nursing and care of the sick beyond the first day of January despite the fact that his or her name does not appear in the register, he or she shall be counted as an illegal practitioner and his or her license may be suspended or revoked by the regents in accordance with the provisions therefor of this article. All nurses already registered in this state at the time of the passage of this act shall make application to the secretary of the board for the re-registration blank upon receipt of which he or she shall in like manner already described make application for re-registration, forwarding to the secretary of the board the re-registration blank properly filled in and accompanied by the fee of one dollar. Said application and fee must reach the secretary on or before the first day of December following the adoption of this statute; failing which the delinquent shall be dealt with as outlined in section two hundred and fifty-three and in this section in relation to the suspension or revocation of said license.

§ 6. Section two hundred and fifty-two of such chapter, as amended by chapter three hundred and ninety of the laws of nineteen hundred and thirteen, is hereby amended to read as follows:

§ 252. Waiver of examination for nurses. The regents of the University of the State of New York may upon the recommendation of said board of examiners, or upon evidence satisfactory to said regents, waive the examination of any persons possessing the qualifications mentioned in section two hundred and fifty, who shall have been graduated before, or who were in training on the twenty-fourth day of April, nineteen hundred and twenty, and shall thereafter be graduated, and of such persons now engaged in the practice of nursing and who have had three year's experience in the practice of nursing, two of which have been spent in practice in a hospital prior to nineteen hundred and twenty, or an equivalent for such hospital experience, such equivalent to be determined by the state department of education and the state commissioner of health, who make application in writing for such certificate prior to January first, nineteen hundred and twenty-one.

§ 7. Such chapter is hereby amended by inserting therein, after section two hundred and fifty-two, three new sections, to be sections two hundred and fifty-two-a, two hundred and fifty-two-b and two hundred and fifty-two-c, to read, respectively, as follows:

§ 252-a. Waiver of examination for attendants. The regents of the University of the State of New York may upon evidence satisfactory to said regents waive the examination of any persons possessing the qualifications mentioned in section two hunded and fifty-a of this article who shall have been graduated before or who were in training on the twenty-fourth day of April, nineteen hundred and twenty, and shall thereafter be graduated, and of such persons now engaged in caring for the sick and who have had at least two years' experience in caring for the sick prior to nineteen hundred and twenty and of such persons having less than two years' experience prior to nineteen hundred and twenty, who shall submit to a practical examination given by the board of examiners to demonstrate his or her fitness to care for the sick as a trained attendant, and who make application in writing for certificate to practice as a trained attendant prior to July first, nineteen hundred and twenty. Every such application shall be accompanied by a written certification by three licensed physicians and one registered nurse acquainted with the applicant, of the facts in respect to applicant's experience and qualifications to practice as a trained attendant.

§ 252-b. Saving clause. Nothing contained herein shall prevent any person from engaging in nursing, provided, however, that he or she shall not assume the title of trained, certified, graduate or registered nurse or trained attendant, without complying with the provisions of this article.

§252-c. Nurses in state institutions. The regents of the University of the State of New York shall license as trained nurses graduates of training schools for nursing in state institutions, or institutions under the visitation of the state hospital commission, registered with the regents and maintaining a three years' course for such training under such rules as the regents have prescribed.

§ 252-d. Schools for trained attendants. Any general hospital maintaining a nurse training school registered by the regents of the University of the State of New York also may, with the approval of the regents, conduct a school maintaining proper standards for the training of trained attendants, and on application and satisfactory evidence that such proper standards are being maintained, may receive a certificate of registration of such training school for trained attendants.

§ 8. Section two hundred and fifty-three of such chapter is hereby amended to read as follows:

§ 253. Violations of this article. A person who violates any provisions of this article shall forfeit to the state twenty-five dollars for a first offense, and fifty dollars for each subsequent offense. All fines imposed or forfeiture incurred hereunder may be sued for and collected by the attorney-general and the amounts thereof recovered, or received in any way by any one, shall be paid by the regents of the university for use and disposition as provided for in section two hundred and fifty-one of this article for the fees received from examinations.

§ 9. Such chapter is hereby amended by inserting therein, after section two hundred and fifty-three, a new section, to be section two hundred and fifty-four, to read as follows:

§ 254. Advisory council. An advisory council shall be appointed by the regents of the University of the State of New York. Such advisory council shall consist of three nurses, three physicians and three representatives of incorporated hospitals, and members of each of these three groups shall be appointed for terms of one, two and three years, respectively. Nominations to membership upon this council in twice the number of the vacancies to be filled shall annually be made to the regents of the University of the State of New York by the New York State Nurses Association and the New York State League of Nursing Education, in agreement between these associations upon the nominees; by the Medical Society of the State of New York, and by the Hospital Conference of New York city or the State Hospital Association, or both. It shall be the duty of the advisory council to organize by the election of a president, vice-president and secretary, and to advise the regents as to courses to be pursued and standards to be maintained in training schools for nurses and for trained attendants, and also as to the rules for the examination of nurses and trained attendants applying for certification, and from time to time to make such recommendations to the regents as it shall deem proper for the right enforcement of this article. The said council shall meet upon the call of the president of the university or at the request of any five members.

§ 10. This act shall take effect immediately.

TO THE ALUMNAE ASSOCIATION

The question arises—what is to become of "The Quarterly"? The cost of the editions has increased from $90 to $318. The increase is largely due to the present H. C. L., but the steady increase in the names and addresses will necessarily mean a yearly increase in the size of the editions. What is to be done? Would you suggest eliminating the names and addresses? Or making the edition biannual? Or charging subscription?

Yes, you are all saying, "That Alumnae Association has more money than it knows what to do with, and it has only just increased our fees." Say what you like, the plain, unadulterated truth is that it is poor to the extent that it can't pay $300 four times a year for "The Quarterly."

LETTER FROM MISS SALLING ON HER WAY TO TASMANIA

Not for anything would I have missed this trip; so far it has been lovely. The trip from Chicago was lovely—but terribly dirty. Through Indiana and Nebraska they burned soft coal, but when we got to Wyoming they burned oil, which was much nicer. Besides there was less dirt, as nearly all of it is rock formation and sage brush and only one narrow river runs through it, which is called Green River, because, naturally, it has grass and a few trees growing on its edge.

One city is called Green River, on account of the river running through it, and there actually was a lawn near the station. They were sprinkling it when we stopped there. They said the temperature was about 100 F. It certainly felt like it. Although we were up about five thousand feet, we were in the valley. The high mountains around us made it warmer. There also were a few trees near some of the best houses. It is strange to see herds of cattle wandering around, also horses and some sheep, and no houses anywhere near them. They are branded and turned loose and then rounded up perhaps every six months.

From there we went over Salt Lake. (In the night we reached Cheyenne and passed over the desert, and therefore did not see it.) In the morning we passed over Salt Lake, Utah, over a trestle, something like the trestle at Rockaway Beach, and the strip of semi-land parted the lake, so in winter one side never freezes while the western part does; it runs into fresh water and mixes with it. On the other side the water is so salt no fishes live in it, nor can one sink or drown in it. The beach is white from the dried salt.

From there we went on to the California mountains, which were a sight for the gods, so handsome were they and majestic; they are grander than the Swiss mountains. We ran through snowsheds; on the prettiest part of them we passed the camp where the Forty-niners were snowed under and where thirty-four of them died of starvation, and a large cross is erected to commemorate them. We peered out through the cracks in the partly open sheds to see the fine sights. There is a very fine blue lake up about eight or nine thousand feet. When we got up and out of the sheds, we went out on the platform to drink the "best water in the world," so we were told. We also went out to see the "American River." It was a magnificent sight. Getting into Oakland our train ran on the "largest ferry-boat in the world"! From Oakland we went on the ferry to Frisco. There we were met by the busses from the hotels. I went to the Stewart, which is a very nice hotel, and the food is excellent and well served.

I had no trouble at the Custom House. The chief there was an elderly man, and when I told him I was a worn-out nurse, he said I needed all the consideration and kindness anyone could show me, and shook my hand warmly and sent me to another place where they signed another paper, making me free and clear, which they took on going aboard the steamer.

I went to do a little shopping Monday afternoon and missed Miss Cameron, who called at the hotel, but next morning we had a very nice chat on the phone. She was quite disappointed at missing me.

My baggage came as I sent it from New York. They had taken good care of it, so I was relieved when I saw it on the pier at Frisco. Everyone has been so kind and good to me—the good Lord is taking good care of me.

We are having a wonderful trip. The boat is small and the staterooms are the smallest I ever have seen, but she is well balanced and rolls very little, and the Pacific Ocean is as smooth as a mill pond. This is Saturday and we expect to get on to Honolulu Monday morning, where I will mail my letters. We are going ashore and see the place. They say the Aquarium is wonderful and we must not miss it.

Kind regards to all from

CAMILLE SALLING.

AMERICANS SAVE SICK IN NEAR-EAST HOSPITAL FIRE

The Near-East Relief Hospital at Talas, Anatolia, has been destroyed by fire, according to a cablegram from Constantinople received here at the organization's headquarters. All American workers, patients and a third of the provisions and instruments were saved.

Workers who moved the patients to safety, the cable said, were Dr. and Mrs. C. R. Ganaway, of Medford, Ore.; Miss Blanche Easton, of Ridgewood, N. J., and Miss Rachel King, of Little Britain, N. Y.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER FROM ALICE BLISS, '19

Oh you perfect dears to have written me those letters which arrived in a bunch yesterday. They were my very first from you and told me just what I wanted to know. Two weeks ago we had a blizzard and thirteen centimeters of snow fell, an absolutely unheard-of occurrence here. It almost broke up housekeeping, everyone was so excited. I didn't buckle down to work until nine o'clock, and periodically throughout the day I was in and out having fights. In the middle of the afternoon Meg came over with Anne and two of the men, and we had a "real" time. I almost got my face washed. Needless to say, I was rather wet and bedraggled, and my legs were almost frozen, my cap dirty and the bottom of my uniform dripping, but it was so exciting. Think of it, the first snow ever known in Beirût! I took about two dozen pictures, but haven't seen them yet. However, I hear they came out fairly well. When can I show them to you? You'd better come out here soon and see me.

Hop heard from me sort of often on the trip, but if she'll forgive me, I'll tell you a bit about it. There were about eighteen first class people, but nine or ten were Greeks and kept their own counsel. In our party were Douglas and Amy Forman with their two children, Peggy and Douglas, three and a half and one and a half. Then there were Miss Wilson, Miss d'Olier (R. C. nurse), Mildred Fredericks and myself. In addition there was a Greek couple, he was forty-three and she was twenty-five. I told Hop about the funny Jewish American furrier, Mr. Benjamin Klein. He was quite the spirit of the crowd. The first few days out it was a bit rough, but except for that short spell we had almost mill-pond weather. We had a day and a half at Gibraltar, where we saw all the sights. Our next stop was Palermo, where four of us almost lost the boat. We miscalculated on time and got aboard as the anchor chain was being pulled up! At Patras we had only about an hour to walk around, but it was plenty of time to see the small rather uninteresting town. Dear old Trieste was our destination, and we pulled in on Christmas Eve, just three weeks after we left New York. We arranged for our passage on and got everything in order, and two days before New Year's, Douglas, Mildred, Miss Wilson and I went to Venice. In spite of the mist and, later, rain, we enjoyed our eighteen hours to the full. We went by train and returned by boat. On our way to Venice we passed sure-enough battlefields and ruined villages and trenches. The desolation was frightful. We were told that the boat for Alexandria would sail at 10 on January 1st, so we were aboard in plenty of time, only to be told it wouldn't sail until Friday. We never learned the real reason, but decided the deck hands wouldn't leave home on New Year's Day. Do you blame them? On the way to Alexandria we stopped four hours in Brindisi, where the mud was so thick you almost drowned, and about six hours in Taranto, where we had a lovely walk.

As we pulled into Alexandria, on a clear, hot Wednesday morning, I saw a Messagerie Maritime Company boat with the Blue Peter flying. I rushed up to an official and asked him what hour the boat was sailing and where it was bound for. It was then eleven in the morning and the soldier said it was sailing at three in the afternoon for Beirût. Did you ever know of such luck? Douglas and I rushed around Alexandria at a great rate and made all arrangements and got aboard the "Lotus" at two-thirty! Pretty speedy, eh, what? We left Alexandria, Wednesday, January 7th, arrived and left Port Said the 8th, arrived and left Jaffa the 9th, and arrived Beirût the 10th. Our telegram from Alexandria hadn't reached Beirût, so no one met us. At first I was terribly disappointed, but then I thought of the fun of surprising everyone up here, and when, about 11 o'clock, I walked in on Aunt Mary, she got up and with a very formal smile said, "Miss Davidson, I believe." Whereupon I said, "No, my name is Miss Bliss." She certainly was surprised, and it was heaps of fun all around. She and I went over to Margnaud House and fell upon dear, unsuspecting Meg, who was cleaning and dusting.

You can't imagine how lovely and wonderful it is to be back in Beirût. And now dear Meg has sailed for America. She sailed last Tuesday and hopes to reach Boston about the 20th of March, where she will see Leslie for the first time in about eight months.

(I am just continuing this without any excuse about being delayed.) Everybody here is so cordial and you can't imagine the joy of really being home again.

I have just gotten back from bandage class, where we have tried every conceivable combination. One of the nurses had to be excused for a delivery, so you see we have our emergencies, too. And about a week ago we had a stat operation, intestinal obstruction. The poor man died the next day in spite of hypodermoclysis and all kinds of hypos.

The work is fascinating indeed! The daily round of duties might interest you. We have breakfast at seven: Aunt Mary, Superintendent of Hospital; Miss Van Zandt, Superintendent of Training School; Miss Eddy, in charge of Women's Pairlion; Mildred Fredericks, in charge of Eye and Medical Pairlion; Miss Jessup (Theo's aunt), assistant to Aunt Mary, and yours truly, who is not helping in the Training School office, but is in charge of the Children's Pairlion, which includes also Men's Surgical. We finish breakfast at half past seven, when we all scatter. I make rounds and see what has happened during the night, and make out the time slip. By that time it is eight o'clock and Miss Jessup comes over to prayers. All the nurses in our building attend and as many patients as are able and care to come. We sing an Arabic hymn, Miss Jessup reads from the Arabic Bible and then prays in Arabic, followed by the Lord's Prayer in Arabic. The Arabic is for the benefit of the patients, as all nurses here must know English. After prayers I potter around seeing that charts are up to date and overseeing in general. If there are operations, they begin about nine. Monday we seldom operate, and Saturday Dr. Dorman usually plasters, but other days we operate often until two o'clock in the afternoon.

All the buildings are stone, so those cold days we almost froze. There is no heat in the Operating Room, so we had to postpone some of our operations. I don't see why we didn't freeze, but it was glorious. Lunch comes at about twelve forty-five and lasts till almost one-thirty. I'm very apt to knock around my room after lunch until tea time at three-thirty. I make rounds again at five-thirty, and write the night report before our six-thirty supper, only we call them "night orders." Preparation for operation and post operative care is very much like Presbyterian Hospital and everything is very shipshape. All our sterilizers are built for gas, so that now that there is no gas, we depend entirely on kerosene. We use a kind of stove called a "puffer," whereby the kerosene is allowed to escape through a small hole in a gaseous form. The disinfectants here are carbolic and bichloride. The students give the anaesthetics, and fairly well, although they are stupid at times. I've given only one anaesthetic, and that was during mid-year examinations holiday, when no students were available. So much for hospital. It is great and I love every minute of it. The doctors, Dr. Dorman and Dr. Ward, are fine to work with, and the new doctor, Dr. Cruikshank, is expected daily with his bride.

The social life of the community far exceeds that of any other community I know. There is always something going on. Before Meg left, a number of parties were given in her honor. May Dorman (my cousin) and I gave her a surprise party at "our" home, and thirty young people must have been there. We played games like musical chairs, charades, still pond, no more money, and after refreshments we turned out all the lights and played hide and seek all over the house, only the way we played was very novel. I went and hid, and at a given signal everyone came to look for me, calling out each others names in so doing. As a person would find me, he or she would stop answering to his name when it was called out. It was a wonderful game and lots of fun. The last person to find the crowd was "it" for the next game. After playing two rounds of this game, we sang popular songs until quarter to one of a Sunday morning! Another night Dora Close gave Meg a shower and that was heaps of fun. At refreshment time we had a real bride's cake full of a thimble and heart and wishbone, etc., and all the unmarried girls partook of it. I got "nothing," but then that doesn't necessarily signify anything.

Today was tennis club tea, but I went calling instead. Had a much better time, too.

A week from Saturday, Mrs. Hoskins, one of the leading women among the missionary community, is giving a large reception for Consul and Mrs. Tuabenshue, the new United States Consul and his wife. Over two hundred are coming and there will be only English and Americans. So you see what a community we are.

Flue is going the rounds here, following measles in a number of cases. Fortunately I have had neither so far, and don't very much intend getting them.

Katherine Twidale is down in Sidon, running a little twenty-bed hospital. They say it is a miniature of the Presbyterian Hospital. She is a peach, and I wish she would come here, but she feels she must go home as soon as Sidon is closed, which will be in a few months.

I have rambled on in a very "hit or miss" way, but this letter carries heaps of love not only to you four, but to all your families. Always your same old

THE REPORT OF A MEDICAL MISSIONARY

A few meetings ago Dr. Van Buskirk gave the plan and general lay-out of Severance Hospital and told what the doctors were doing in the management of the institution. I will try to tell something of the part we nurses play in the work. Last fall we divided the work among the three foreign nurses, Miss Esteb taking charge of the training school, Miss Reiner the hospital, while I took the college building and dispensary. Our division of labor worked very well until Miss Reiner's health began to break. It was hard for us who had worked with her so long, and loved her, to see her daily going under. Although it was hard for her to give up, we were glad when the decision was finally made that she return to America on health leave. Miss Reiners' leaving in April meant another division, this time in two. The training school had to run on as best it could, while Miss Esteb took charge of the hospital and nurses' home, and the dispensary, isolation building and foreign nurses' home fell on me. Having the housekeeping is just one of my side lines, but it is no joke, for it does not only mean providing for us two, but for at least five, for all foreign patients' food goes out from our kitchen. Sometimes there are foreign patients in the isolation ward besides, and it happens sometimes that when the hospital beds are full patients stay in our home, and there have been times when six and seven trays were served every meal from our kitchen.

I have enjoyed so much working this year in an organized training school. It has been a pleasure to watch the girls develop in the knowledge of nursing. They have not done perfect work, the fact is we haven't even taught perfect work; it nearly breaks our hearts when we realize that we have not lived up to our ideals. But, after all, the women of Korea, with our imperfect teaching, know so much more than they did about caring for their sick, that we live in the hopes that perhaps the next generation of medical missionaries will be able to teach ideal nursing. We have thirty-five nurses in the home, and I have come in contact with practically all of them, as they come (seven at a time) to the dispensary for two months for their clinic work training. These nurses prepare the dressings and sterile supplies and assist with the dressings and treatment of a daily clinic of about two hundred patients. Every day the dispensary is full and most interesting, for such a variety of cases appear and practically every disease common to man is treated.

There has been a special pleasure in the work this year, because I took up the teaching of nursing without an interpreter. With my imperfect language I wondered how I dared do it, and sometimes I was led to doubt whether they were taking in very much, but the way they responded to questions, put things on the blackboard and answered in their examinations inspired me some. Anyway it helped my language, brought me closer to the nurses and gave me a great deal of joy in the work.

In a professional way my mission work has been most interesting. I have been through epidemics of influenza, typhus, cholera and smallpox. I never saw a case of smallpox at home, and this past winter I came in direct contact with about twenty cases. This is not counting the children we see running about the street in various stages of the disease.

Last year, because of the political condition, there were no graduation exercises for nurses held, so this spring our 1919 and 1920 classes graduated together, and it was an impressive sight indeed, to see sixteen attractive girls stand up and receive their diplomas. My heart swelled with a special pride because the head of the class was a girl I started training in Haiju. And I can tell you, if there are hard things in the work, and I don't say we should not have them, for they are what help to make us, but for these hard things there is always a compensation—to think that I was privileged, before going home, to sign that girl's diploma, and pin on her graduation pin—God is good, that's all. Out of the sixteen nurses, nine went up for their government examination, and I was reminded how very human these girls are, as I watched them and thought of my own training days. They were so excited and keyed up before they went, and after, when it was over and word came that they had all passed, oh! there was such singing, shouting and shrieking as you never heard.

Hugh Cynn, in his book, "The Rebirth of Korea," tells how medical work was the wedge that gained entrance for the Christian work in Korea, and I believe it still plays a great part in bringing the people to Christ. It has been said that medical work is Christianity in action, and I am so glad that I am connected with this phase of Mission work, for it cheers me a bit when I grope in vain to find what I have accomplished in five years.

EXTRACT OF LETTER FROM GEORGE M. TAYLOR, '20

I am having a most interesting time this month. One of our County Units, which consists of an all-time health officer, a public health nurse, a laboratory expert, and four or five sanitary inspectors, an office and two cars—all suddenly fell down on the work. It was impossible to get another doctor until September, so as a last resort the State Health Officer decided to use me. I rather like being here in so many capacities, as my activities may take a very wide range and I shall be rather loath to give the work up when the time comes. I am carrying on a program for the eradication of hookworm, as that is the most urgent health work needed in this county—this one leads the state in that particular. I send word to some community—they are very small—that I am coming, and the next day I go armed with my microscope, slides and medicine, and "movies," which I can show from my car. I examined all who come to the church (I have found they will come there best), then I give the treatment with directions to all those whose house and lot is sanitary, and when I go back for a second visit I find much improvement and give the rest of the treatments which are needed. If you could see some of these boys and girls, and indeed grown people too, stunted in mind and body, with their tallow colored faces, and then see the improvement in only a few weeks, then the energy, and perhaps some would say the sacrifice you have made, would be more than repaid.

The Florence Nightingale Centenary Dinner, May 12th, which marked the opening of a year's campaign to recruit students for nurses' training school, was a huge success, more than four hundred being present. Miss Etta Pearce, a graduate of the Presbyterian Hospital, is to carry on the recruiting campaign in New York City, with headquarters in this office.

The Army Reorganization Bill, which, among other provisions, confers rank on Army nurses, was passed May 12th, on the hundred anniversary of Florence Nightingale's birth. —Chapter News, June, 1920, page 7.

COMMEND HOME NURSING TEACHERS

"Letters from the principals of the three high schools in which the Teaching Center has been conducting classes in Home Nursing, witness the satisfaction which these classes have given and the effectiveness of the women who have been in charge of them.

"Principal Rowe of the Wadleigh High School, in a letter to the Director of the Teaching Center, expresses his appreciation of the work of Mrs. Trotter and states that he believes it to be 'of great value to the girls. . . . I don't know of anything which appeals to me as more practical and more helpful to these girls for the time spent than that given to the work in Home Nursing.'

" 'The work of Miss Harriet McArthur,' says Principal Zabriskie of the Washington Irving High School, 'has been so superior and so valuable to teachers and students alike that I desire urgently to request the continuance of her services during the subsequent term. I wish that every high school in the city might have the privilege of receiving similar co-operation from the Red Cross.'

"The record of Mrs. Lillian Montells in the Julia Richman High School is no less commendable in the opinion of Principal Lucey, who writes: 'Mrs. Montells is an excellent teacher. She secures the interest and co-operation of all of her students. We feel that they have profited greatly by her instruction.' "

Miss Catherine Clement, ex '21, has left our ranks but not our hearts. She is now Mrs. Francis N. Bangs, 31 West 11th Street, New York City.

Miss Frances Waters, '20, is school nurse in one of the public schools of Hartford, Conn. We hear she keeps the good old tongue depressors very busy.

We are delighted to hear that Miss Madeline Waterbury, '22, is well again and enjoying life. Rumor has it that she has gained back many pounds this summer. We are looking forward to having her with us soon.

It will interest a great many to know that Mrs. Edward Streeter, who was Miss Charlotte Warren, ex '21, has a little daughter, born August 29, 1920.

Miss Margaret Cooper, '20, was married to Harry Dwight of Cambridge, Mass., on August 17th.

Miss Catherine Weiser, '20, left last month for France, where she is to have charge of the reconstruction work in a French village. Holyoke, Mass., Miss Weiser's home town, has undertaken the responsibility for the welfare of this village and is sending Miss Weiser and a social worker for this work.

Miss Laura Hershoff has just returned from a trip to the Far East, including Japan, China and the Philippine Islands.

Miss Susan W. Belden, '20, has come back to P. H. for the Tuberculosis work.

We are delighted to have Miss Whipple, '20, in charge of Wards IX and XI, and are sure of her success.

It was very hard to see Miss Piper leave, and we will certainly think of her in her new work and miss her in ours. We truly appreciate what she has done for us and trust that she will not forget us.

About twenty-six Presbyterian nurses answered the emergency call of the Red Cross on Thursday, September 16, 1920, to aid in the care of the victims of the Wall Street explosion.

Last, but not least, is the September section of 1923. They are thirty-two strong, or were when this was written, and we hope they will still be thirty-two strong when they graduate. We trust they appreciate the "Eight Hour Day," the Student Association and "our" tennis courts.

LETTER FROM FLORENCE SHIBLEY

Yale Mission, Changsha, Hunan Province, China.

Dear Miss Maxwell:

Having been nearly a year in China, I think it is quite time I wrote to you and told you something of our lives here and the work that is being done at Yale. Also (and by far the most important piece of news) of the arrival of Miss Elizabeth Armstrong Shibley on June 30th of this year. (May I ask you to pass that along to the "Quarterly"?) She is, of course, much the sweetest baby that ever lived, and I consider myself quite a capable judge after having taken care of so many at Nursery and Childs!

I'll go back many months to our arrival in China last October, after a wonderful trip through the Canadian Rockies and across the Pacific. Our stay in Japan was short, but after the neatness and beauty of the country there I was disappointed in my first glimpses of China as we came up the Yangtze River. The cities have very narrow streets, with mud houses crowded together, and swarms of children, dogs, chickens and pigs all growing up together in the same rooms! The "spicy aromas" of the Orient that one reads of in novels are present with a vengeance, but not quite as pleasant as they might seem, and the dirt and noise are appalling. The Chinese have the unique idea that noise keeps away all evil spirits, and they live up to their beliefs to the extent that, when anyone is sick, the devoted family and friends gather outside of the room and shoot off firecrackers and sing and bang away at musical instruments to help the patient recover. The sicker he is, the louder the noise.

We found the Yale campus was outside of the city of Changsha, and it gets lots of good fresh air, which was a great relief after the cities. There are splendid brick buildings and homes, the latter mostly of the bungalow type, and the hospital is very fine indeed—a large building and well arranged, with big airy wards, rather like those at Presbyterian.

We have a small bungalow, with electricity and heated by stoves. All the water is carried by coolies, and has to be boiled. We were busy for months gathering together furniture for our house, as we brought nothing that would not go in trunks. The Chinese make very good wicker and rugs, and can copy anything just by looking at a picture.

My greatest struggle was with the Chinese servants (whose wages are from six to eight dollars per month!), but now, with their few words of English and my limited Chinese, we get along famously. I gave up the picture idea after drawing one of mushrooms to show the cook what I wanted him to buy, and he served cauliflower instead. My self-esteem as an artist went rapidly down.

Doctor Shibley taught Therapeutics, Clinical Medicine, and Nervous and Mental Diseases, and found the Chinese students very bright and interested. That and his work in the hospital kept him very busy all term. I did what work I could, but I was not well most of the time. I had some classes in charting, in which I endeavored to explain to the little Chinese nurses the meaning of words like "diaphoresis" and "anorexia." I had some funny times trying to understand each other. I doubt if I was very successful, for at the end of the year they still did not seem to know the difference between "retained" and "returned."

But what they lack in the knowledge of English they make up for in Chinese, and when I was a patient in the hospital in June I was filled with admiration at their cleverness.

The Training School is run by Miss Gage, a Roosevelt graduate who had charge of the Vassar classes during the war. With the exception of those two years, she has been with Yale in China for eleven years, and has accomplished wonders. She has had only one other European nurse to assist her. There are about fifty nurses in the Training School, half of that number being men, for it is not the custom in China for women nurses to care for men patients. They have the eight-hour schedule and are on probation for six months. You would be amused by the uniform of the women probationers. After the Chinese style for ladies, they wear black trousers and coats, and knee-length white aprons. When they get their caps, they progress to skirts.

I had a perfectly splendid day nurse, and feel that she could compare favorably with any European nurse. She did her work beautifully, with good technique and neatness, and beside these virtues she had wonderful intuition, and always seemed to know what I wanted before I knew myself. It was a pleasure to be taken care of by her. The others were good also. Their chief delights were to squeeze out by tooth paste on the brush for me, and to comb my hair. I suppose they enjoyed working over hair that wasn't black, like theirs, and rather than deprive them of the pleasure, I suffered the agony of having it combed for about ten minutes at a time, and braided in the tightest of Chinese pigtails, which I promptly undid the minute I was left alone! They were devoted to the baby, but were inclined to spoil her a bit, for Chinese women always pick up their babies if they cry, and they thought I was terribly cruel not to do so.

About the middle of June, just two weeks before the baby was born, we went through a revolution! Hunan had been a northern province, and the South wanted control of it, so, as the Southern army advanced on Changsha (the capital), hundreds of refugees came into our campus for protection from the retreating Northern army. Chinese solders, most of them, are cowards, and their warfare is like that of the Huns. They put up very slight resistance at Changsha, and evacuated the city after burning some of the government buildings. As Yale campus was in direct line of retreat, we came in for some of the firing, the greatest danger being from the wild shooting, for the Chinese seldom hit what they aim at. One battle even took place directly behind our bungalow, and when that happened I picked up a few choice possessions and betook myself to one of the more substantial houses! Doctor Shibley was busy all day with the wounded, but after about twenty hours of fighting, the city was quiet, and we settled down to routine again. At Yochow, north of us, there was much more looting and burning, and one missionary was killed.

That brings us up to the present, so I have no more news to tell you. Ruth Williams, 1917, came out to visit her brother, who is with Yale in China, and it was good indeed to see her and learn some of the "P. H." news. I wish she were to be stationed nearer us, she and the Meleneys. I was sorry to hear that you had been ill during the winter,.

I can't tell you how I enjoy the "Quarterly." Please don't ever forget to send it! I must pay my Alumnae dues, but just now I can't secure any gold currency, so will have to wait until I return from the mountains, where I am at present.

Please give Doctor Shibley's and my kindest regards to the office staff, with best wishes to yourself.

Very sincerely,

September fourth. FLORENCE SHIBLEY.

EXTRACT OF LETTER FROM ELIZABETH CHAPMAN

It is with great regret that I have to ask another favor of you, but I have to have a letter from you as supervisor of my training school, for the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company. I am to have charge of the Metropolitan Nursing Service in this part of the country as well as the district nursing.

After coming to look over the ground in June, I have just returned in October to take up the work, and it is already developing into a most interesting and complicated problem.

The population of the town is over 6,000, mostly French Canadians, and the majority of them are employed in the lumber industry by the Brown Corporation, who are instrumental in establishing this movement and have given me a free hand in the health situation.

We began with a publicity campaign, the French priest and the English rector giving the notice out to their congregations. The French priest controls his people hand and foot, and since he has been won over to our cause, we feel most encouraged, for he has insisted upon his people having us. Besides this, we have a slide with a picture of the nurse in the home, which is being shown every night at the "movie" theatre. We have had a conference of the doctors, one English, three French, and I was shocked at their indifference and ignorance.

I have an office, where we expect to have our baby clinic and school examinations later. Then, in the mill, they are putting in a wonderfully equipped first aid room, and a nurse is to be there for a part of each morning for dressings. But the most absorbing work is going to be the Child Welfare. The Metropolitan Insurance had just been here and was appalled at the infant mortality. In August, 27 babies were born, 22 died. Every month tells practically the same story. This month so far, 26 births, 14 deaths.

The inspector left immediately for New York, to talk conditions over with Dr. Frankel of the Metropolitan, and we are hoping the outcome will be the establishment of a milk station, in which case the company will probably start a model farm.

I am to have more nurses when necessary, but for the present the development is slow and I am trying to get a foothold. Already I have had some interesting results in the French homes and find the people lovable and responsive.

I hope I have not bored you with all this, Miss Maxwell, but I feel I have gotten a great deal of inspiration from you and only hope that I can give out something to the people which I got while in training at the Presbyterian.

EXTRACT FROM A LETTER FROM DELIA BATTLES, SEOUL, KOREA

It seems almost too good to be true that I am coming home. My furlough is now due, and I am sailing from here November 12, traveling by India, Suez and Europe, arriving in New York perhaps the middle of January. Through the Quarterly I have been able to follow the doings of P. H., but shall be oh so glad to be back with you all again. I trust you are all well.

EXTRACT OF LETTER FROM ALICE J. LILES, '06

Have just received the Quarterly, which came to my old address. I always enjoy getting it, but missed this time the list of graduates with their addresses. That was one way I had of keeping in touch with those I knew.

Last year I took the course in public health nursing and am doing that work for the Red Cross at Watsonville, Cal.

It is so interesting, and seems very worth while. I have never enjoyed any work more. Have a little new Ford coupe, a nice office downtown, and do mostly school work. I have a large territory, as I am supposed to cover the Red Cross district, which is very large. I have about twenty country schools, some way up in the mountains, besides about 1,000 pupils here in town.

The work is entirely new here, but I am finding splendid co-operation and very fine people to work with. California is making rapid strides in public health work now.

CHARLOTTE SIMON, R.N., '19, TO WHOM THE RED CROSS HAS AWARDED A SCHOLARSHIP IN THE COURSE OF PUBLIC HEALTH NURSING AT KING'S COLLEGE FOR WOMEN, LONDON.

EXTRACT OF LETTER FROM MISS SIMON

I must tell you about a conversation I had with an English nurse. When she discovered I was from America, she said, "Oh, you are from America; that is the country where they take short-cuts, isn't it?" I was very much amazed and said I did not quite know what she meant. Then she said, "Aren't most of your training courses only two years?" When I assured her to the contrary, she asked me whether, if I were to be perfectly true to myself, I would admit that Registration had raised our standards as we expected it to do. When I answered this question, we proceeded to discuss the qualifications for the school-nurse. When I described the ideal that has been held up to me (I tried to be modest about it), she said it would be many a day before that type of woman would do school-nursing in England. When I said it was entirely a matter of standard and education, she seemed incredulous. Do you really think she felt this? Secretly I felt that she was testing me, but in any case, the answer was the same. You know the story and how nurses are fighting for high standards and how much argument there is. I remember so well, when we were Seniors, you told us something of what it had meant to raise the standard of hospitals and training and to get registration. I thought I appreciated it then, but I think I appreciate it more now. We owe much to you and other women who worked for the nurses of America, and I am convinced more and more every day that the standard can never be too high.

But this is quite apart from the "International Public Health Course" at King's College for Women.

Nineteen women, representing the nursing profession of eighteen different countries, are in the group. Some of them are trained nurses and some only nurses of war experience, but in all cases they represent the highest development of nursing in their various countries, and in almost every case are excellent types and of superior education. Miss Fitzgerald, the director of Public Health Nursing, in the League of Red Cross Societies, was here when we arrived. She explained more fully the object of the course, which is to standardize Public Health Nursing throughout the world if possible. As a means to this end, England was selected as the most central and the most practical place, especially for the European countries. A special course has been planned to suit the needs of most of these women who have been sent on scholarships, ten of which the League has given and the rest of which have been given by the Red Cross societies of some of the countries. America gave four scholarships, sending two nurses from the States and one from France and one from Italy. Besides these countries, Roumania, Greece, Czecho-Slovakia, Poland, Venezuela, Peru, Serbia, Portugal, Russia, Denmark, Sweden, Canada, England and Belgium are represented. The course consists of Elementary Science, Psysiology, Hygiene, Bacteriology and Household Work. Besides these lectures, excursions to various points and institutions of interest, practical work is done in Infant Welfare stations. Tuberculosis clinics and observation in Child Welfare and School Work, both in London and rural districts, are planned.

Special work in Economics and extensive excursions have been arranged for the American and Canadian nurses. We are taking the course in Hygiene, Sanitary Law and Infant Welfare. It would be useless to repeat the other courses, and the dean has planned for us to use this time in seeing the work in other cities and the rural districts. After Christmas we start on a little tour to various places in England where the work is well organized, and will not be in London for about two months. I am finding the work very interesting and feel that the experience will be very valuable in future Publci Health work, whether at home or abroad. Contact with these intelligent women from so many other countries is going to be a very broadening influence also. One learns things from them that are not written in books.

We are trying to conserve light and heat on account of the strike. While the unemployment problem is worse than ever on account of it, most people feel that there will be some adjustment before things get too serious.

FROM ST. LUKE'S ALUMNAE BULLETIN

Letter from an Alumna in the Navy

We are indebted to Miss S. V. Kiel, who is stationed at the San Francisco Navy Yard, for the letter from Miss M. E. Hume, '05, another of our alumnae, in the navy. Miss Hume, in a letter dated September 10, writes from Guam, M. I., where she is now stationed:

"Here we are in Guam at last, and I am wondering if I am really I. It is all so strange. Years and years ago a little girl studied in her geography of tropical islands and bread-fruit and she sat there wishing with all her heart that she could see one of these queer islands and its inhabitants and some of that fairy-story bread, and—well, she is seeing now and has tasted the bread and found it very good when cooked.

"Good weather favored our arrival here. Small boats came out to the Madewaska, anchored some distance from shore, and brought passengers for Manila, then took us off and we left with real regret, though eager to see our new home. It was a pleasant company of fellow-passengers, and indeed if all their good wishes come to us we will have a happy stay here.

"I shall never forget that first ride in Guam. We are located in Ajana (pronounced Ayanya), a town of eight thousand, and we are about five miles from Piti, where we landed; we rode along a really, truly tropical country road, cocoanut palms were everywhere and we passed through a couple of little villages—just a street of small, one-room houses perched up on stilts or a partial foundation and having palm-leaf roofs. There were numbers of little kiddies, nice and brown and scant of clothing. The families range from six to fifteen and even twenty in some—not much race suicide here. On the way we passed a couple of little Guam carts, crude affairs with two solid wooden wheels and drawn by oxen. It was just my little geography picture coming to life; even the bread-fruit trees with big, odd-shaped leaves. One can't fail to recognize them once they have been pointed out. It was all so interesting.

"Two days after we arrived, rain and wind came on furiously. It was the tail-end of the typhoon that did so much damage in Manila. How it rained! It poured all night and the wind blew terrifically, and after two in the morning the bugles blew to arouse the inhabitants and warn them, for disaster was feared, but by daylight the barometer began to rise and gradually the storm ceased. We have had very little rain since, though this is near the rainy season.

"It is hard to realize that this is a U. S. Naval Hospital, except that there are corps-men on two of the wards; one ward for native men—about half the patients being boys—and the other ward for our own lads—nearly all marines.

"There is also a native-women's ward, and many children are there always. There is not the usual S. O. Q., but a pavilion called the Susana Hospital, where officers and their families come, also others who wish to pay $1.25 per day. It is usually full.

"Miss Bowles is very nice and quite a detail she has here; works harder than any of the nurses. I have the diet kitchen at present and a lively time I am having brushing up my old knowledge of cooking. I'm ashamed to say that I had 'done gone' forgotten all about it, but so far no one has departed from indigestion, so I have hopes.

"We live in very nice rooms over a Japanese store about a 'block' from the Plaza. There is a band-stand there, and every evening from seven to eight there is a band concert—a good one—not the popular jazz music, but well selected and from the best composers. The leader is an Italian. The Government House faces one side of the Plaza and the Cathedral another side; beyond that is the hospital. Cocoa-nut palms are on all sides. They look so pretty, outlined against the sky especially at sunset time. We enjoy that wonderful picture each evening from our balcony, where we spend most of our time off duty. It is very attractive and the coolest spot to be found. It runs around two sides of our apartment and has a cement flooring and a cement enclosure about two feet high, broad at the top and on that are many pretty plants.

"Many of the homes on Ajana are of the old Spanish type, white cement with green trimmings and little green balconies on the upper stories and red tiled roofs; but the majority are Guam architecture—on 'stilts' with palm-leaf thatched roofs. It is a picturesque combination. The streets are hard, sort of coral cement and narrow—no sidewalks—autos have right of way with no delay, and everywhere are little brown babies—babies and cocoanuts will be my most lasting memory of Guam, I am sure."

DEATH OF MISS BRINK, SUPERINTENDING NURSE AT BELLEVUE HOSPITAL, NEW YORK CITY

(From New York World, December 13, 1920)

"No tribute that tongue can utter, that pen can write, that artist can depict, that music can express, would be too good for her."

So declared Dr. George O'Hanlon, Medical Superintendent of Bellevue Hospital, as he stood by the flowers from the midst of which looked out the face of Miss Carrie J. Brink, calm in death. Miss Brink, who dropped dead Friday, was the superintending nurse at Bellevue, and her connection with the hospital dates back to October 20, 1891, more than twenty-nine years.

"Her death is like taking away from Bellevue its soul," was the tribute of Dr. Michael J. Thornton, resident psychopathic physician.

"The Florence Nightingale of Bellevue," Dr. John J. Hill called her.

Dr. George D. Stewart dismissed his clinic Saturday, after delivering a eulogy upon the dead nurse. "I do not know what her religion was, but she lived it every day of her life," was one of the things he said.

Bellevue is not a cheerful place at best. The great hospital shelters, cares for and dismisses to health or the morgue its thousands monthly. Its habitants are inured to death and they accept it philosophically. But when, all unexpected and unguarded against, it struck the life of Miss Brink, Bellevue felt the blow in its heart.

"In her years with us," Dr. O'Hanlon said, "she had mothered 20,000 nurses. She had an acute sense of responsibility, not only as to her duty to our patients, but to the nurses as well. She felt that the mothers of these nurses, in sending their daughters to Bellevue, had put the moral welfare of their daughters in her hands, and in the enforcement of discipline she always tried to act exactly as she believed the mother of each nurse would act. It was the same with the patients. Every day she visited every patient in every ward in this hospital. To those who could talk, she always spoke. To those who could not, she would straighten out the pillows."

One of these sent a telegram in which he said: "In that gentle lady in white, who wore the white cap with the velvet band, the crown queens of mercy wear, the unfortunate in health of this city lost a nurse who was the embodiment of gentleness, mercy and compassion, and heaven gained an angel."

The respect and affection of the medical staff is more than equalled by that of the nurses. They came from all over the city yesterday to pay their last tribute, and there was not a dry eye among them.

She was in her uniform. "When I die," she had said, "I want to be buried in the uniform in which I spent the best and happiest years of my life."

At the head and foot of the bed of flowers in which the coffin lay stood an honor guard of uniformed nurses, three at each end.

The funeral service was held last night. The body will be buried today in Binghamton, the place of her birth.

CALENDAR

Executive Committee—First Monday of every month at 8 P. M. at 41 East 70th Street.

SCHOOL NOTES

Miss Marjery Lewis, one of our graduates, is in charge of the Industrial Nursing work at Kenyon Clothing Manufacturers, Brooklyn. Several of our pupil nurses have visited Miss Lewis's work and have seen how interesting it is and what a broad field it embraces.

Miss Elizabeth Ashmun, '20, is at present assisting Dr. Philip Potter in the Surgical Department of Vanderbilt Clinic.

If we have been very dull lately, we cannot lay it to the old adage of "all work and no play," for we have had two dances recently, one given last month by the officers and head nurses of the School to the post graduates and seniors, and the other, a Hallowe'en party given by the seniors to the School. Everyone seemed to agree that they were delightful and they did us lots of good.

On Monday, December 13th, a much-talked-of thing was begun—the carpenters were summoned and sent to Room 515. And do you know why? They are starting the new kitchenette, which will be a great joy to all of us, and where we can practice our culinary arts!

At our last Student Association meeting, Miss Goodrich of the Henry Street Settlement gave us a most helpful and interesting talk. Afterwards, when the Association was having its business meeting, she spoke to some of the head nurses and graduates informally and of something none of us must ever forget—that while student government is of great value in a training school for nurses, and while we may expect to gain much by it, it is essential to remember that in this kind of a school, different as it is in this respect from other schools, there are those for whom our consideration must always come first and above all—our patients. If we always keep in our minds that our patients are to be foremost, and that their welfare is at the bottom of every new thought of ours, then all the advantages which modern ideas bring to us as a School of Nursing will reflect their good results, not just in ourselves, but on those who are in our care and for whom we are trying to attain the best.

Miss Elizabeth McKenzie, '20, has recently accepted a position as nurse in a mining camp in Alabama.

ALUMNAE NOTES

Louise M. Clark is spending the winter in Constantinople, studying Turkish, after an exciting year in the midst of the Armenian difficulties at Aintab.

The death of Guy H. Scull took place in November at St. Luke's Hospital, New York City, after a brief illness. The deepest sympathy of the Alumnae Association is extended to Mrs. Scull (Nancy Whitman, '13) and her two young sons in their bereavement.

Rosena White, '16, was married to Mr. Emil Spurny, on Friday, November 26, 1920.

Christmas was observed at the Presbyterian Hospital with the usual happy holiday spirit. The Dispensary Christmas Tree, the distribution of baskets to the families of the out-patients department, the decorating of the wards, the carols on Christmas Eve, the Children's Ward Tree on Christmas morning, the dance the following week—all took place in the accepted order. The rhymes on the Christmas Tree were interesting to those present, being highly local in color. However, the one presented to Dr. Von Glahn, the medical pathologist and the doctor in charge of the autopsy room is readable even for an alumna.

DR. VON GLAHN'S WARD

There are no dirty beds to scrub,
There are no aching backs to rub,
The patients do not need a tub,
On Von Glahn's Ward.

There are no temperatures to take,
There are no poultices to make,
There are no joints to bake,
On Von Glahn's Ward.

O why can not the T. S. O.
See our wish and let us go
To nurse at least for a month or so
On Von Glahn's Ward?

Because they tell me there are curses
That would shock the toughest nurses
And not fit to put in verses
On Von Glahn's Ward.

Presbyterian Nurses—Members of the Vassar Training Camp for Nurses—Who Were Present at the Reunion

Lois Barrington, Priscilla Barrows, Margaret Conrad, Frances Fargo, Margaret Hutchinson, Eleanor Lee, Helen Martin, Florence West, Ellen Wheeler, Marjorie Wright, Janet Doe and Mercer Kendig, two of those who had to leave training but were back.

On November 26th-28th, the Training Camp for Nurses held at Vassar College the summer of 1918 held a reunion at the place of its birth. Presbyterian Hospital received twenty-one from the camp in October, 1918. Of these, six dropped out, fifteen have already or are almost finished and ten were able to return to reunion. And they were a proud band indeed, for Miss Mawell accompanied them, was present at all the conferences and receptions and joined in the spirit of the affair quite unreservedly. Miss Mary Johnson, who had so much to do with the early training of all the Presbyterian representatives and of many others present that summer at Vassar, was also there.

This reunion was an entirely unique experiment, for it provided an opportunity for nurses just graduated or not quite finished in training to exchange their entirely one-sided point of view with women who have long been leaders in the profession, but with whom the undergraduate nurse so seldom comes into direct contact. Some fifteen superintendents of Schools of Nursing or executors in this field were present, so that the opinion represented was the most expert of its kind. The surprising thing to the younger nurses was the frankness in replying with which their questions were received, for they had just come from the atmosphere of the average school where a nurse is not taken into the confidence of the office in any way.

So this open discussion of some of the more pressing problems in nursing education today resulted in real benefit to the two sides represented; it showed the younger nurses that these problems were really being struggled with long before they ever thought of nursing, that there are enormous difficultes which had never been revealed to them before, preventing a speedy solution of the problem, and the kind of work that is to be expected of them in the future to advance the cause of nursing; on the other hand, it gave a fresh impetus and something of a new angle to the old problems to those who have long been working in the field.

Although no formal conclusions were drawn up at the end of the conference, it might be well to mention two very definite points which came out again and again and cannot be emphasized too often. First, that in order to fill her position adequately, a superintendent of a school of nursing must have representation on the hospital board of managers; second, that in order to be able to treat the nurse as a student, nursing schools must be divorced from the hospital and therefore must have separate financial support.

Sunday morning of the Reunion, Miss Perkins, who graduated from Presbyterian not long ago and is now school nurse in Poughkeepsie, N. Y., gave a breakfast party for all of the P. H. group still remaining. Miss Maxwell and Miss Johnson and six others had the good fortune to be at this very congenial affair.

MISCELLANEOUS

English as the Dispensary Patients Write It

"I wish you see my little girl because she have pain in the stomago since she was little and see her colord she is to pearl I wish you give me a good medicine."

(N. B.: The Editor most reluctantly inserts the above contribution. Mastering the English language, especially the spelling, is too serious a matter to her to be a fit topic for humor."

Typically American

Once a year, sometimes more often, a new regime is started, at least attempted, by the Attending Staff and House Staff at the P. H. Sometimes it is a regime in name only; sometimes the little typewritten slips are temporarily carried out. The only constant factor on the medical and surgical sides seems to be a yearly desire for a theoretical change. The time, paper and words wasted each year on a new routine, if estimated by dollars and cents, would build, equip with elaborate refrigerating plant, and endow a metabolism ward.

The Bolsheviki

Well, the Vassar Section has left the training school, save for a straggling few who were unfortunate enough to have time to make up. The time these lost through sickness —and perhaps occasional social engagement—might have been offset by those of the Vassar group and others who had to remain overtime to get their special duties.

Poor dears! They had no easy time of it. It is rather tough luck for a small group of college women to be planted among a non-cordial mass of women who will probably never have anything but R.N. after their names. It is tougher luck, though, to be a member of the non-scholastic mass. They got away with an awful lot, even to popularity and a good reputation when they left. Tomahawk was buried long before they left, and the atmosphere was no longer blue save for the smoke from the peace pipe.

From a Lost Soul

Have you ever lived through three years
Of training with its joys and tears?
Have you ever lived three years more
In the same old spot you trained before?
Have you ever stewed, fussed and growled,
For little work and more pay howled?
Have you ever been down and out
From institution's daily bout,
When all the racket seemed to be
Momentous to the last degree,
And yet when all was said and done
'Twas but a paltry skirmish won?
Perhaps some old scientific bug
Had lost some c. c.'s from his jug.
Perhaps some wash cloth while en route
To laundry lost its way about,
But finally destination met
By crawling in with serviette.
But oh, those hours of sleuthing spent
To find by whom the cloth was sent!
And then you found that it just went:
By no one had the cloth been sent.
Perhaps some non-caloric soul
Had eaten of a breakfast roll.
Perhaps some stomach X-Ray had Instead of bismuth eaten shad.
Perhaps a Sippy did rebel
And cursed the nurses into Hell.
Perhaps saliva had been sent To Lab for stat experiment,
And from the mouse they did obtain
An enzyme—no pneumonic strains.
Perhaps a House or Resident
Just fresh from College had been sent To oversee the maimed and halt
And found it all the H. N.'s fault
That all his orders in detail
Had proved to him of no avail.
Perhaps some dapper youth appears
To take a place among his peers,
In Joseph Weil's most perfect act,
Importance oozing with each strut.

He finds so many things undone—
"He finishes what he's begun!"
Perhaps his Senior, by a year,
Less dapper and with cringing fear,
Suggests that rounds he'd like to make
But not for worlds would he take
The H. N. from her chair of state—
His "Fairy" whispers, "Better wait!"
Perhaps relief for P. M. rounds
Has given out and you're aground,
With lagging feet and strength most spent
From breaking for "His Omniscient."
Perhaps with slow but steady course,
And like that River lacking force,
Mrs. Sippy that same day
Had whiled the morning hours away.

Ye Gods! It was a life to curse,
You wondered what in Hell was worse.
You longed for peace and quietude,
For people with an attitude
Conforming more to Nature's laws,
Respectors of effect and cause.
With outward joy you take that step,
You leave the ginger and the pep,
But 10 to 1 you're betting on
That "awful life" against the calm.

That atmosphere of "Go-between"
Where "bucks are passed" as day's routine;
Where you're the goat for what takes place,
'Tis you who must the music face;
Where justice and good sense are swamped
In autocratic, empty pomp;
Where get away with all you can
In principle of every plan;
Where principles are unconstrued—
Do as I say, not as I do;
Where blame is twisted, turned about,
So even God you're wont to doubt:
That atmosphere is so entwined,
Your natural self so undermined,
That you must needs be born anew
To leave that life for something new.

In looking back you find one thing
That look you just as if on wing
Above, away from daily strife
To minutes, hours of happy life—
The nurses on your ward did more
To lift you from that deadly bore
And keep you happy and content
Than other joys could e'er have sent.
My Heaven, be it up or down,
With pupil nurses must abound!

There is one new department at the P. H. which surpasses the most optimistic hopes that have ever been entertained for any department, old or new. The Department of Dentistry in all respects has proved a great success. The nurses are particularly enthusiastic about the Dental Clinic, for all their prophylactic dentistry may be done if their appointments are made through the proper channels.

On November 30th a dance was given by the Head Nurses at Florence Nightingale Hall. The united efforts of the Head Nurses made the evening a great success.

The Need of Immigrants

Recruit for your training school! You have all heard that before in the last two years. The necessity for "Join the training school," becomes more imperative each day. Perhaps the opportunity of travel (unlike the navy) is lacking, but the scope for learning foreign languages by the conversational method, the popular method, is becoming more varied as time goes on. The sudden influx of foreigners at Ellis Island has nothing on your Training School. Do you realize that it could not carry on without the P. G. foreigners? But what would the P. H. do without them? What will happen now that the much-talked-of ban on immigration is to become a reality?

A Wasted Week

The necessity for absolute quiet for Student Rounds on the Medical side assumes greater magnitude each year. If this multiplication containues what will be the state of the sound waves on the Medical Wards in the years to come? Probably some unknown, interesting condition will evolve that is just one step more than absolute quiet.

Once again the rule has been made that no treatments, X-Rays, or work of any sort shall be carried on during the sacred hours. That means two days a week—Tuesday and Friday—there are Student Rounds; one day a week—Wednesday—Grand Rounds. Saturday the laboratories will do little or no work, Sundays none at all, and, on Mondays they set up a pitiful howl at the deluge of work they have to do. Sunday the staff is much depleted; Monday their minds are a blank, for Sunday has been their day off, or they were on and did everybody else's work but their own. But Thursday hasn't been accounted for. Who would want to be a patient, nurse or doctor on Thursday! Probably Thursday is Dr. Hart's day for rounds, so once again all activities would be held up.

"When I ope my lips, let no dog bark," so all the House Staff must make themselves scarce during the quiet hours except for he who acts the part of silent chaperone to Dr. Longcope. In consideration of what nurses are taught about the need of "quiet in the sick room," one would rather expect the patients to enjoy those quiet hours, but it is interesting to note that those quiet hours are the least appreciated of any in the twenty-four. And the nurses? They try to do the things that seem of vital necessity and get the reverse of thanks for their trouble.

Have You a Dimple?

The "Beauty Parlors" are not only great repair shops for those of more mature years, but they cover up an awful lot of sloppy work that the Almighty was responsible for many years before. Then, too, by artificial devices they accentuate the beauty of those naturally richly endowed. None of them yet have adopted Dr. Rosenau's suggestion (in his argument for vaccination on the arm) that the vaccination scar should not be regarded as a deformity but as a "sanitary dimple."

THE MEETING OF THE NEW YORK STATE NURSES' ASSOCIATION

The following is a condensed report of the annual convention of the New York State Nurses' Association, held in Albany, New York, October 28th and 29th, 1920:

Welcome was written on every door-mat, even that of the Capitol itself, where a huge electric sign read, "Welcome, New York State Nurses." President Finley, of the University, who made it possible to hold the meetings in Chancellor's Hall, the Mayor of the city, the staff of the headquarters hotel, all did everything possible to make the convention a happy and successful one.

From the reports of committees we learned that District No. 13 (New York City), with 33 Alumnae Associations, had only one Alumnae Association whose revision and reorganization was complete, so far as known. The report on legislation was a very cheerful occasion, in view of the accomplishments of that committee during the past year, and Miss Gilman, the chairman, was given a rising vote of thanks with much applause, for her splendid work in getting the new Nurses' Bill through the Legislature.

Miss Maxwell suggested that it would be very fitting to give to Mrs. Helen Hoy Greeley, to whose untiring devotion is due the success of the bill for Rank for Nurses, some tangible evidence of our gratitude to her, and delegates were instructed to return this message to their respctive Alumnae Associations. A purse was suggested as the most appropriate gift. A rising vote of thanks was given, in connection with the report on Rank for Nurses, to Miss Maxwell for her ceaseless effort in behalf of this bill.

During all the convention proceedings the absence of Miss Palmer was keenly felt, and there was hardly a speaker who did not pay respect to her memory. After the reading of the resolutions adopted by the Board of Directors of the New York State Nurses' Association, the members stood for a moment of unbroken silence, in respect to her memory.

The Bordeaux Hospital Fund lacked about $1,000, and a hat collection was taken, which netted $466.00. Pledges for the Relief Fund were taken to the amount of $392.00, and delegates were instructed to ask their Alumnae Associations to consider making a special contribution to this fund, through the State Association, as a memorial to Miss Palmer. The same pathetic and courageous stories of the nurses who are being aided by this fund were told as have been told before, and the pathos of a mere $25.00 a month for a helpless sister emphasized once more the need of hearty support of the Relief Fund of the American Nurses' Association.

Mrs. Twiss was absent for the first time in twelve years, on account of the serious illness of her husband (who died within a few days of this convention).

Dr. Downing was elected an honorary member of the State Association, a mark of esteem which he seemed to appreciate to the point of obvious emotion. He said that the reorganization of the training schools must begin with the revision of the old idea that the hospitals are charitable institutions. They must be put in the same class as public schools, supported by public taxation the same as the schools, and then the training school will naturally fall into its rightful place as an educational institution, a place where health will be taught to the public, instead of the most expedient means of providing nursing care for the patients.

Miss Goodrich further emphasized this same point in her address, in which she said that the slogan of the future must be co-operation, in contrast to the slogan competition of the past few years, including the great war, and that co-operation means conservation. Conservation of Public Health means that the nurse must be educated for her work as a health teacher along the same scientific line that any other teacher is prepared.

Much was said in various ways about the responsibility of the Alumnae Association in preparing nurses to meet their greater responsibilities in the larger organizations, and in training her for citizenship, with renewed emphasis on the ideals of the alumnae associations, mutual benefit in nearly every instance. Student government was urged as a way of making pupil nurses more responsible while in the training schools, and thereby educating them for their graduate responsibilities. Sending pupil nurses to the nursing conventions was suggested as a good way to lead them gradually into an understanding of what their profession stands for. The practical examinations of the nurses show startling deficiencies in the comprehension of many in such subjects as the Red Cross and Florence Nightingale.

That the instruction of the student nurses must undergo great and immediate revision is shown by such facts as were embodied in the report of the Board of Nurse Examiners. One pupil replied in answer to the question, "What is pasteurized milk?" that it was milk from a herd of cows that had been put out to pasture. Of the 706 nurses who took the examination in January, 1920, 132 failed in Obstetrics, 127 in Anatomy, 33 in Practical Nursing, etc., etc. 173 nurses took the examinations in June, all eligible under the waiver, but evidently preferring to be able to say that they were registered by examination. Among the 4,500 nurses who graduated in 1920, 26 were college graduates, 11 part college, and 482 high school graduates.

A campaign to recruit student nurses is being carried on by one of our own graduates, Miss E. E. Pearce, and a report of this work was given, with the pictures that are used in schools and camps, to interest young women in the life of the nurse, several of the pictures showing our own P. H. and some of our well-known friends therein. Mrs. Byington, also of P. H., read an excellent paper further emphasizing the appeal of the whole convention—for a renewal of the spirit of service, and suppression of the spirit of commercialism.

Miss Maxwell delighted all, and amazed many of her listeners, when she told in a paper entitled "The Struggles of the Pioneers," some of the incongruities of training schools as she first knew them and her difficulties in striving to overcome many of the inconsistencies as she saw them in her early experience as a head nurse and a superintendent.

The possibility and the probability of the near future of the nurse attending two or three patients at a time, as a sort of visiting private duty nurse, was discussed, with its advantages of decreased expense to the patient and increased compensation to the nurse, and her greater independence.

The banquet was one of the most delightful affairs of its kind ever attended, according to the comments heard on every side. A very live leader conducted the community singing during the pauses, with great skill in entertaining, and the speakers were excellent. Much credit was due to Miss Littlefield, who was chairman of the Committee on Arrangements, both for the banquet and for all the other thousand and one details which go to make up a successful convention.

Miss Alice Shepard Gilman, lately chairman of the Legislative Committee, was elected president for the coming year, with a very large vote.

This is not at all a comprehensive report of a convention that was filled to overflowing with good things. It has been made brief by much pruning. It was a privilege to attend this meeting, and for this opportunity your delegate is most appreciative. This report is respectfully submitted, concluding with the verses which were composed by Dr. Finley on May 12th, 1920, the occasion of the signing of the bill, by Gov. Smith, and likewise the birthday of Florence Nightingale, dedicated to the nurses of New York State:

FLORENCE NIGHTINGALE

I

I saw the miles of beds of agony
From Belgium all the way to Scutari—
The sick and wounded everywhere;

II

And through each war-filled ward by day or night
Moved in their suffering midst, a Thing of Light,
As 'twere the Lamp she used to bear;

III

Straightway their murm'ring ceased, their cries were stilled,
As if some sweet, benignant force had willed
Its way, or made a potent prayer.

IV

So does the Lamp still shine, and on the walls
Of myriad wards the soothing shadow falls,—
The Nurse she trained is passing there.

QUARTERLY MEETING OF P. H. A. A.

The regular quarterly meeting of the P. H. A. A. was held November 1st at 37 East 71st Street, at 8:15. The president, Miss Brackett, presided, forty-six members being present. After the various reports were read, the main business of the meeting was discussed, which consisted of amending varous by-laws according to the State Supervistors' advice.

Miss Howes, delegate to the Annual Convention of New York State Nurses' Association, gave a very interesting report of the meetings.

New business consisted of "Motion made and seconded to reduce the cost of the Quarterly by having the names and addresses left out of three quarterlies and published in one."

"Annual contribution to the relief fund of American Nurse Association is to be left over to the first of the year, when the treasurer's report is complete."

This finished the business meeting.

Miss Eldridge, secretary of the American Journal of Nursing, gave an interesting talk on the origin of the American Journal of Nursing and its future.

This was followed by an illustrated lecture on Korea by Dr. Achison. Dr. Achison made this field of work seem most interesting.

The meeting then adjourned for refreshments.

The Pension Fund Ways and Means Committee are planning to give a fair the afternoon of March 30th, followed by a light supper and dancing in the evening.

There will be six booths—Candy, Cake, Toy, Miscellaneous, Flower and Delicatessen—and every alumna is expected to contribute at least three articles.

It is hoped that everyone will do their utmost to make this affair a success.

IN MEMORIAM

Mary Anna Johnson

In the death of Mary Anna Johnson, Class 1911, on Tuesday, February 1, 1921, the Alumnae Association of the Presbyterian Hospital School of Nursing has lost a loyal and faithful member, who has always taken a deep interest in the work of the Association and who has given the value of her presence and judgment in the counsels of the Association. Therefore, be it

RESOLVED, That this Association enter upon its minutes this record of its esteem and appreciation of her personal service, and the sense of loss to the work of the Association caused by her death, and be it further

RESOLVED, That the Association extend to her family their earnest and heartfelt sympathy.

IN MEMORIAM
Mary Anna Johnson

Fineness of nature and beauty of character are not accidents—they are the products of ancestry and of environment. It was the good fortune of Mary Anna Johnson to have had the benefit of both. On the maternal side she was of the ninth generation in direct line from that Moses Cleveland of Ipswich, Suffolk, England, who settled in Woburn, Massachusetts in 1635, and one of whose descendants, General Moses Cleveland, went to Ohio on behalf of the Connecticut Land Company in 1796 to found the city of Cleveland.

The "Western Reserve" of Ohio, by reason of its wonderful agricultural possibilities, made a strong appeal to the self-reliant, adventurous men of New England, the latter being to many of them but a place of temporary sojourn in their progress westward to more fertile fields. To this alluring land of great promise came Oren Cleveland, Anna's great grandfather, in 1839, who, in company with other migrants from Connecticut, settled in Geauga County. Among his children was Edward Hooker Cleveland, who was to become her grandfather. He marreid Mary Ann Broughton, also of good English stock, whose name was to be handed down to the daughter of her daughter, Mary Lydia Cleveland, who married Charles Samuel Johnson of Sunneby, Sweden, a man of excellent family, high standards and determined purpose.

Such were the immediate antecedents of Mary Anna Johnson, who was born at Munson, Geauga County, Ohio, not far from the shores of Lake Erie, on March 25, 1878, and they account, in so far as heredity can, for many of her admirable traits. From her New England ancestry came that rare gift of "faculty" and the charm born of gentleness and human sympathy, while from her father's side undoubtedly she received that tenacity of purpose and thoroughness in execution which characterized all her efforts.

On the other hand, environment soon began to play its important part. Her father, trained as an expert miller in Sweden, engaged in this business in Munson, Ohio, and the mysteries and activities of the mill were not only much to the little girl's liking, but were among the pleasantest recollections of her early childhood.

Her father was a versatile, resourceful man, to whom milling, making wonderful Christmas toys for his children, or following agricultural pursuits were equally attractive. Urged by his physician to abandon mill work on account of his health, he moved to Mentor, Ohio, where he engaged in farming during the remainder of his days, and thus gave to his family the benefit of out-door life.

It was here that Anna encountered her first real sorrow in the death of her mother, with whom she was very sympathetic and to whom she was deeply attached. Although but twelve years of age at this time, the affairs of life began to press. The family had grown to seven children—five girls and two boys. Anna came about midway in the line, and she must have been a child of unusual poise, for her brothers and sisters bear witness that while she was the favorite of them all, there was no jealousy or resentment on the part of anyone.

The following five years slipped by uneventfully at Mentor, which, having known the thrill of a Presidential nomination, had sunk again into that somnolence which is characteristic of the little villages of Northern Ohio. This period was devoted by Anna to an educational course, which terminated with graduation from the high school, to meeting the ever-increasing demands of her father's household and to acquiring, as a pastime after school hours, the art of dressmaking.

Then came her first adventure in the great world, through winter life in Washington, as a member of the writer's family. The summers were spent at "Mentor Farm," a short walk from her father's home. To the three little children entrusted to her care, she quickly became not only teacher, guide and friend, but a beloved elder sister, affection for whom grew stronger with each of the twenty-five years of close, unbroken comradeship.

She responded at once to this broader, more stimulating life at the Capital. A wider acquaintance followed, new vistas were opened up, and later there came opportunities for travel through her new family relationship. Two winters were spent at Pasadena, California, and many points of interest visited in the West when en route to and from the Pacific Coast. The life she now led was educational and inspiring.

In 1902 she entered on such new experiences as were to be obtained from that great metropolitan center, New York City, whither the family went in that year. Actual residence was at beautiful Cold Spring Harbor, Long Island, less than an hour's distance by train, and in this case it could truly be said that the most satisfactory way to enjoy the city was from the country. There was ample opportunity to take advantage of what a large city had to offer. At "Laurel Brake," the name of the country home, six busy and invigorating years were spent among charming surroundings of rugged landscape, sea views, woods and mountain laurel, and in the enjoyment of charming walks, winter sports, real log fires and those luxuries which can only come to those who live on the land. A procession of friends came and went continually, and the fireside was never without guests, none of whom failed to succumb to the graciousness of the adopted daughter of the family.

The passing years brought changes; the children departed for preparatory school and college, and the problem of her own future career called for solution. Many were the consultations held and much advice was sought and taken, with the result that, on March 2, 1908, under the friendly guidance of Miss Anna C. Maxwell, Director of the School of Nursing of the Presbyterian Hospital, Anna entered the training school of that institution.

In this exacting field all the experiences of her former life proved invaluable—heredity and environment both played their parts, and she graduated third in a class of twenty-five members. The "Presbyterian" became to her an Alma Mater with which her future career was at all times closely linked, and her loyalty and devotion to it never wavered. Here, as in every other relation of life, she endeared herself to everyone with whom she came in contact, and made a recognized place for herself by self-reliance and uniform kindness and helpfulness.

After graduation and a long summer's rest at the Cold Spring Harbor home, she decided to enlarge her experience by accepting an appointment for a year of institutional work at the Presbyterian Hospital. This was followed by a period of private nursing to secure a fuller experience in that field, which resulted, among other things, in a delightful winter in France. On her return she accepted the position of Assistant Superintendent of the New Rochelle Hospital, to obtain a closer acquaintance with hospital administration. During this period her health gave way, and on the advice of physicians she spent six months at Saranac, in the Adirondacks, where the care of a patient later on gave her another winter.

When the great World Conflict came, she desired ardently to engage in war work overseas. For reasons of health her friends induced her to abandon this purpose and to compromise by accepting a position as one of the instructors in the Vassar Camp held at Vassar College in the summer of 1918. Her modesty was so great as almost to verge on self-depreciation, but in spite of fears and forebodings, confided to those who knew her best, her work as an instructor was brilliantly successful, and here again she displayed unconsciously her remarkable ability to influence and stimulate those with whom she came in contact. Many of the Vassar graduates who attended the summer classes, came to the Presbyterian School of Nursing in the fall to complete their training, and the members of this group turned to her at all times for advice and guidance. Their loyalty and devotion to their former teacher was so strong that no party was deemed complete without "Johnny."

During all of her professional career and largely through the influence of Miss Maxwell, between whom and herself there had grown up a strong bond of understanding and affection, she had kept in mind the desirability of thoroughly qualifying herself for the teaching of nursing in order that she might aid in meeting the rapidly developing demand that this profession should be placed on an increasingly high plane. She therefore decided to enter Teacher's College, Columbia University, in the fall of 1918 with a view to securing the degree of Bachelor of Science.

She was well on her way in this new educational field, when her collegiate career was interrupted by a second breakdown in health, which caused the loss of six months.

In the fall of 1919 her studies at Columbia were resumed once more, and coincidently she became matron at the Nurses' Annex of the Presbyterian School of Nursing, at 825 Madison Avenue, New York, at the same time teaching the pupil nurses bandaging, chemistry and hygiene.

In 1920 she made one of a group of eighteen who spent part of the summer months on a ranch in Wyoming. This novel experience gave her great happiness, and she returned in apparently splendid health and poise. With high hopes she entered the last year of her course at Teacher's College, continuing as before her duties as matron and also as instructor of nursing at the School. Her work was arduous, but she carried it so steadily that it did not seem unduly hard. Never had she outwardly appeared so well, so full of the joy of living and working. Possessed of a happy home, surrounded by a wide circle of loving friends, and with a highly creditable college career drawing to a close, the future seemed to hold everything for her. She had just completed the necessary financial arrangements with the University for the last semester, which was to begin on the following day, and was within four months of her eagerly coveted degree, when, from out his tent "the dark Ferrash" struck without warning in the quiet of the night, and on February 1, 1921, there was suddenly ended a beautiful life and a career which gave brilliant promise of exceptional and increasing usefulness in a field where the help not only of trained, but understanding, minds is so urgently needed. Henceforth she was to be to those who loved her a dear and cherished memory.

Gaiety of heart and a tender kindliness she had for others, but for herself a stern and resolute purposefulness. When she determined upon a task, she strained every energy until the work was accomplished faultlessly. Her performance of every detail was trim and square. Her father's motto she made a living creed: "Always do a little more than is expected of you."

She had an air of competence and bright neatness which brought relief and content whenever she appeared; deftness amounting to genius made her services as a nurse exceptional; exquisite tact and a rare personality ensured her welcome everywhere. These qualities she possessed and used royally for the benefit of all.

Others she saved, herself
She could not save.

STRUGGLES OF THE PIONEERS

By Anna C. Maxwell

(Reprint from American Journal of Nursing.)

The events of the late nineteenth and earlier twentieth centuries have wrought many wonderful changes; probably none of greater moment to the human race than the advance made in Medicine, Surgery, Bacteriology and Nursing. In the past forty-seven years, since the Bellevue Hospital of New York, the Massachusetts General of Boston, the State Hospital at New Haven, Connecticut, opened their doors to the establishment of the Nightingale System for the Scientific Training of the Nurse, there have been many years of waiting adequate means for instruction, for better conditions of living, shorter hours and recognition as a profession.

The Pioneers of Nursing had to have courage, patience and perseverance of rare quality. They had to convince the medical profession, the hospital management and the public of the value of instructed nurses, of the interdependence between medicine and nursing, and to gain the moral and financial support of our best people. It was no simple task to parry their questionings; to give convincing proof of the importance of what was then looked upon as "menial service"; to gain co-operation from the unbelieving, and to storm the doors of legislation to secure State Registration for Nurses and the proper recognition of our Army Corps. I have been privileged to see many of these changes and to participate in some of the royal battles that have brought us by determination and faith in our ideals to the present status as a recognized profession. Possibly a few of the details of our beginnings may help to inspire our successors to less complaint of their hardships, taking them in a sporting spirit, learning to play the game, leading to a higher conception of the Spirit of Service.

Florence Nightingale has said that our aim should be "health" nursing instead of "sick" nursing. Can a higher service be rendered mankind than is in our power to give?

Part of my training was taken in a woman's hospital. The wards were arranged for four beds. Between each two wards there was a nurses' room, used by day for convenience of ward work, and occupied by the nurses for sleeping at night. A supervisor made rounds on the wards at night, and when the patients required any attention more than she could give as she passed, the day nurse was called. If the nurse proved to be a light sleeper, with keen interest in her patients, she knew much of what happened during the night, and was often called upon to help out. If beds were full, each nurse gave semi-private care to eight patients, keeping the ward bathroom clean, dusting, and so forth. Twelve-hour service was required, with one afternoon off duty each week. There was no elevator, and when new patients arrived or operation cases had to be carried, the nurses were pressed into service. Instead of a stretcher, as we know it, a six-foot wicker basket, with three handles on each side, was used, and we had to stiffen our spines in order to reach the third story with one hundred and eighty pounds weight aboard. We learned much of good bedside nursing when a good superintendent was in charge, but they were ever changing, and the doctors did not approve of our knowing the object of treatment or the contents of the medicine given. In explanation they said that nurses would imagine results if they knew what was expected. In the maternity department, we had charge of six women and six babies; they had to be ready for "rounds" at eight-thirty in the morning, babies bathed, womens' beds made, and binders fresh, pinned one inch apart. We went on duty at five in the morning, breakfasted at seven-thirty, and had an hour off, sometimes! All diapers were washed out by the nurses, and there were douches galore. Digital examinations were forbidden. We were to judge when to summon the doctors by the cries of the patients. Lectures were good, but irregularly given, and there was no time for class work or quizzes. At a later date and under the guidance of Linda Richards, the first American graduate, a woman of rare intelligence with a vision of the future of Nursing ever before her, I was to learn the elements of scientific training.

The probation term was one month; the course two years, two weeks holiday each year. On entrance to the school, I was escorted to a small room off a woman's ward, containing four beds, two bureaus, two chairs, pegs on the wall for costumes, and the use of a lavatory and bathroom shared with the ward. When we retired, we pushed the beds apart to get in, and sometimes entertained a stray night nurse who occupied the bed by day.

My first ward was men's surgical, thirty-two beds, staffed by a head nurse, Bellevue graduate, one pupil nurse, one probationer, a day and night orderly. We swept the floors, dusted the wards, kept the bathroom and lavatory clean, listed the laundry, served the meals, washed the dishes, cleaned the ice-box. A ward maid was added later. When the beds were full, we each cared as we might for sixteen patients. Many of them recovered, despite our ignorance and the crude attention our limited time made possible. The service was active and there were few fractures or wounds that did not come before our observation. While dressing wounds on this ward, we were taught to recognize laudable pus, and we went from one poisoned wound to another without cleaning our hands. We aided the surgeon in packing fracture boxes, using means to prevent pressure sores. Here, we also learned how to make plaster bandages and to apply plaster casts in such a way so as to prevent sloughing, which we frequently saw when such bandages were removed.

Schools were established rapidly after the first five years of trial. Hospital authorities had found out how cheaply and effectively they could get their work done. This naturally created a consequent shortage of graduates to take up the ward teaching of the pupils as head nurses. To fill this gap, pupil nurses, after a few months' training, were put forward as heads of wards, and it fell to my lot to take charge of a large women's medical ward of thirty beds; staff, two assistant nurses of the old type, a pupil night nurse. These "ladies" changed their dresses at the noon recess and attempted to occupy rocking chairs most of the afternoon. The condition of the patients was unspeakable; bed sores, tangled hair, unclean hands and bodies. As an example: I asked one women to remove a bandana handkerchief which I noted she had worn continuously. After much expostulation, this was accomplished, when lo! the scalp with only a few hairs was black with pediculi. Fortunately, two pupil nurses willing to work took the places of the "ladies of leisure," and better conditions were established. There was an infinite variety of things to learn, as the service was divided between three sets of attending physicians. When on "rounds" the third day, in answer to the attending physician's questions, I said (being truthful), "I don't know," he looked severely over his glasses and remarked, "Who should know if the head nurse doesn't?" I then realized that the head nurse must have a marvelous memory, unlimited intuition, and that she must be vigilant and omnipresent! The field of instruction could not be covered at once, and we simply had to take up many things as the devil did sinning. Crude carbolic crystals were sent for use in the wards, and one of my classmates had her face disfigured for life while melting them into solution, as she did not know that carbolic acid destroys tissue. Temperature charts were in use, but bedside notes were unknown. We were expected to have the mental equipment to carry all details in our heads. My first head nurse impressed upon me the fact that it was a sin to forget anything connected with the sick. We were taught to catheterize by touch under the bedclothes without cleansing the parts, with resulting cystitis. Enemata were given with bulb syringe with a four-inch hard rubber nozzle. Starch enema given in cases of dysentery was administered with hard rubber piston syringe with a ten-inch point, which we tried to insert without causing a fissure of the rectum. Stomach content was evacuated when poisons had been taken by tickling the back of the throat with a feather or finger.

The hospital beds were eighteen inches from the floor. In the typhoid season, sponges for reduction of temperature were ordered every two hours when temperature rose above 103. These sponge baths had to be given kneeling to save strain on the nurses' backs; result, housemaid's knee. When the number of typhoids in my ward reached seventeen with temperatures soaring high, I remonstrated at the school office and was told I'd have to get on with the present staff (two pupils). I burst out with the remark, "You are killing one set of women to make well another!" I wasn't dismissed for my impertinence, although I expected to be, and one ceased to care what happened when overwhelmed with such heavy responsibilities. Next day, another pupil was sent as an extra for the typhoids, and she proved to be a treasure, giving me a new lease on life. In those days, the public had a horror of hospitals, and the typhoids came too late for effective treatment. The Brandt bath was just being introduced into this country. The patient was transferred on his bed to the bathroom every three hours for this bath. As many of them were almost moribund on admission, we did not see a single recovery from this treatment. Prejudice against the method followed, and the use of the tub bath in the treatment of typhoid did not become popular till ten years later. Transferred to the charge of a gynecological ward, mixed cases with private rooms and an operating room attached, many things happened to remove any lingering traces of conceit I might have had.

Malingering was common in city hospitals. Mercury in the thermometer was often shaken up or raised by the heat of a hot water bag when our backs were turned. Blood sucked from the gums was swallowed and vomited up, and we found difficulty in believing any of the reported symptoms not visible to our eyes. A patient too weak to leave her bed got out of a third story window in a fit of delirium and crawled along a gutter and fell to her death. No windows were barred. Bars were only used for the detention of prisoners and the insane, and many lives were sacrificed before intelligent managers were willing to place such safeguards upon hospital windows. Imagine the responsibility of the nurses.

Later I was given charge of a large men's surgical ward, where I saw the first attempts at the introduction of the antiseptic or Lister Method of dressing wounds. (When in London in the summer of 1876, I had read the famous articles by Lord Lister upholding the germ theory, describing the new method of preventing introduction of germs into wounds—in short, the method that revolutionized modern surgery!) In the operating room, a carbolic spray from an atomizer holding two quarts and weighing several hundred pounds was put into our hands, and orders given that we were to keep our eyes on the field of operation and see that it was constantly sprayed. The safety pin was carbolized and instruments dipped in carbolic, but the finger nails and hands of the operator were never made clean. Gauze charged with carbolic and some form of wax baked in a special oven were used as dressing for the wounds. Under this method, in my nine months' experience in this surgical ward, I saw one wound heal by primary union; the wound was sutured and dressed by the same hand and no infection introduced. The Lister Method emboldened surgeons to undertake abdominal surgery, but I saw, before graduation in 1880, only one operation for ovarian cyst. When sudden emergencies arose in the hospital, we considered it an honor to be called upon for special duty in tracheotomy or other severe cases where a life was in danger, and night work was often undertaken after a strenuous day.

As for class work, lectures and examinations were held regularly, although all lectures were given in the evening. As a special privilege two of my class were taught massage by Dr. Douglas Graham, and we gave lessons at night to the other pupils during the remainder of our course.

The attending staff were generally appreciative, although some of them objected to waiting for screens, and there was little thought for preserving the modesty of the sick. The House Staff was quizzical. Why had we chosen such disagreeable work? Did we ever expect to be received by our social friends after taking such a radical step? We did not feel resentful of necessary criticism, but found many unnecessary things humiliating. A notice appeared on our bulletin boards one day stating that employees and nurses must enter and leave the building by the basement door. This because the porter complained that he had to clean the dust too frequently from the upper corridors. But for the high regard in which we held the superintendent of our school, I think the whole body of students would have left.

On graduation, I hastened to accept an appointment to establish a training school in a distant city. There I found everything bending to the will of the attending staff; hospital funds were taken to purchase champagne to be used in building up reserve forces of patients to be operated upon, while ragged ticks filled with straw were the only beds provided for patients, and a basket full of straw could be swept up after students' rounds. The laundry was inadequate. Damp linen was sent to the wards to be hung as decorations (?) upon any available space until dry enough to use. The hospital was crowded and there was no division of the services. Available beds were used for surgical or medical cases as they were admitted, with the result that the lungs of a suffering T.B. patient were often filled with smoke from his neighbor's pipe, the neighbor being a strong, lusty man with a fractured femur.

An attempt had been made to remedy defective ventilation by bringing air into the wards through large pipes a foot in diameter. These pipes were fitted with dampers. The dampers had apparently been closed for years, for pailsfull of dust fell when I opened the dampers.

Examination of urine was carried on in the wards. Specimens were placed on a table, and each student examined at will from one to three days later. Add to this the fact that all lavatory utensils were opaque china filled with sediment of long standing, and you can imagine the resulting odor. After much persuasion, the attending staff decided to establish a laboratory, and I had one fitted up in the hospital. When the college opened in the autumn, however, the request came to return to the old method, as the student must have the specimen to examine at the bedside of the patient.

Bedside notes were unknown. In a few instances, I induced the nurses to keep records of serious cases. Presently the doctors began to ask to see them, and later they were introduced. The surgeons criticized our counting sponges in cases of abdominal section, but later adopted the method after several lives were lost from sponges being left in the wound.

Plaster casts and bandages were made one and one-half to two inches in thickness, with strips of iron on either side to keep them from breaking, with the result that the patients were unable to carry them about on leaving their beds.

The nurses were sleeping in cubicles built into an old ward, and after a stormy night, their beds were often festooned with snow. No sitting room was provided. The dining room was presided over by an autocrat who required each nurse to take her food from a side table, washing her own dishes and placing them in the cupboard after the meal. There was small inducement for women of refined type to enter the school, and only four really suitable candidates offered, and the trustees decided to defer the plan. Ten years passed before a school was made possible through necessary reforms.

Later, on my return from an inspection of English hospital, I was asked to take charge of a school at one of the oldest, most conservative and richly endowed hospitals in our country. The school had been organized by a committee of intelligent men and women interested in improved methods of caring for the sick, and who had gained the consent of the trustees to introduce the Nightingale system of training nurses. The applicants to this school were interviewed and selected by the committee and handed over to the superintendent for training. The apprenticeship method was in full sway, although education of the nurses was supposed to be one of the first considerations. Probationers came in, one by one, as the need presented itself, and were initiated at once into ward work. Mopping the floors of the wards was the first lesson; the second, cleaning the ice-box. Never have I seen floors so clean or ice-boxes so immaculate. For two years I taught every probationer, on entering, these duties. Fortunately there were graduate head nurses in charge of the wards, and a ward maid was provided for each two wards. When, after many struggles, the superintendent of the hospital was converted to higher ideals, he offered two maids, costing the hospital just $240 a year, with board.

There was a splendid service. Graduate specials were unknown, and the pupils had the experience of fine exacting bedside nursing. Eleven hour duty with a p. m. and sometimes two hours on Sunday was the arrangement for off time.

The operating room was presided over by a male nurse who had served in the Civil War. When I mentioned the introducing of pupil nurses into the operating room, he told the surgeons it would be accomplished only over his dead body. Six years later this was done, and he survived! The operating room in those days was interesting. Two red plush cushions furnished with every kind of needle threaded with suture silk were hung on the pillars on either side of the ampitheatre. From these the surgeon made his selection. In conversation, one day, with a surgeon of world-wide reputation, he remarked with pride that he had operated in this double-breasted broadcloth coat for twenty-five years! The first operating gown introduced by a member of the house staff was a sheet folded over a string and tied around the neck. Later, the attending surgeons became interested in this protection, and sterilized operating coats and gowns were provided.

About this time, the sea sponge was superseded by the gauze or woolen sponge, which was sterilized. (Some of you may recall that in the preparation of the sea sponge, from fifteen to twenty waters had to be used, and every part of the sponge carefully examined by the fingers.) Endless time was consumed in this way. Crocks filled with carbolic were marked for each day of the week, so that the sponges used on Saturday were not to be used again until the following Saturday.

In each men's ward a tray for catheters with a cup in the center to hold a glass of oil was kept on the table. The oil was changed weekly and unsterilized catheters were used. Some patients, allowed to catheterize themselves, kept the catheter in the commode at the bedside. Reform was brought about by a member of the staff who learned from the records of previous cases that numbers of operations were complicated by cystitis.

The instruction had to be covered largely by the superintendent of the school, who undertook all class work. Twelve lessons in cooking were given at an outside school; twelve lectures and the examinations were given by the attending staff. The house staff gave a few lectures by request, and many a member of our older group will recall with gratitude the invaluable bedside instruction given by these men.

With the advance of medicine through bacteriology and research, our responsibilities became greater, and strict accuracy was required. As the hospital expanded, the nurses' residence grew smaller, and it was difficult to convince the trustees that more and better living facilities must be guaranteed for the school. A crisis was reached when it was discovered that ten night nursese were sleeping in day nurses' beds. On presenting the facts, I learned that no additions would be made to our dormitory during the ensuing year, so I asked the trustees to make a personal inspection, with the result that two stories were added to the residence at once.

At another hospital where a school had recently been established, I found the pupils collecting and bringing up all supplies of drugs and laundry. Never shall I forget seeing a frail nurse tumble over the stairs and roll down with one of the huge bags of soiled linen rolling after. In this hospital, marbles were coated with sediment beyond recognition; ward chimneys were filled with dust; tuberculous patients were allowed to expectorate into sawdust tubs that were seldom emptied. Handkerchiefs used by tuberculous patients were kept dry a whole week to be washed on a special day. Stuffed chairs of ancient and venerable design and covering decorated the wards. Nurses had to measure endless doses of medicine with a flickering gas burner high above their heads, in rooms with no windows. Small wonder that some lost their health as well as their courage.

Many brave souls, however, withstood these vicissitudes and reaped a rich reward in seeing the eyes of the blind opened to the importance of thorough nursing education and every human being's right to health.

I could tell you further how a committee of nurses was hurriedly formed in the state to present the claims of our profession for state recognition. A disastrous bill brought before the legislature by a supposed friend of our cause had to be vigorously combatted. The influence of the State Medical Society had to be secured and an attorney engaged, money raised for these expenses and many days spent in your city ere we secured registration. On one occasion, a conference lasted until three in the morning, weighing the different points and arranging compromises and holding the president of the Medical Society and our lawyer up to their promises. The battle was won, and although we did not gain all we desired, it was a triumph to have the measure put through during one session. The medical profession secured registration only after twenty-five years of effort. You know the history of recent registration and are aware of the continued effort of our State Society of the last fourteen years in making the law mandatory.

In conclusion, let us urge upon our splendid corps of young nurses the necessity of differentiation between the important and unimportant, making light of the things that cannot be remedied, and counting it a good sporting chance to build up a splendid and lasting work upon a slender or discouraging foundation. To keep a true sense of proportion amid conflictnig interests; to see the ebb and flow of events demolish our cherished hopes, or to wait years for results and then begin over again—these require undaunted courage. A high privilege of service has been opened to the nursing profession. Let us prove worthy of the trust.

I want to thank you for your letter of January 12th, also for the one you sent Miss Bond.

I have six classes of fifteen women each, in a mining town of about two thousand inhabitants. We have our classes in a large office in the new city hall. The women seem earnest and enthusiastic, and I find the work very interesting.

LETTER FROM EMELIE M. PERKINS

63 South Clinton Street,
Poughkeepsie, New York.
January 26, 1921.

Miss Anna C. Maxwell,
Presbyterian Hospital,
New York City.

Dear Miss Maxwell:

I am sending an account of my work as Public Health Nurse of Poughkeepsie Town, as you asked me to do. Please do not hesitate to leave out anything you wish if it is too long.

Poughkeepsie Town lies in a crescent around Poughkeepsie City. It includes about fifty square miles, and thirteen schools, varying in size from ten to three hundred pupils. There are two distinct elements—the farming population and the quarrying and manufacturing population. There are a great many Italians, and one very nice settlement of English people.

I am, first of all, School Nurse. I assist the medical inspectors with the routine examinations of the school children, then follow up the doctors' notices to the parents with calls. Generally the mother is willing to have the defect remedied, and generally the father objects. The children themselves love it. It is really pathetic to see how disappointed the physically perfect child is because he cannot have his tonsils removed, nor go to the dentist with the nurse!

Since April we have had a Township Dental Clinic for school children, and the children "cry for it" like castoria. Over one hundred children have been treated, and we have paid the dentist two hundred and fifty dollars. We still owe him considerable. The nurse's part is obscure but very important. She takes the children, after the parents have signified their desire, and she collects the money. The dentist charges about one dollar for cleaning and about one dollar for each filling, and most of the children pay for their own work. The local school boards pay when they consider the parents really unable to do so.

Medical facilities are excellent in Poughkeepsie, and the doctors and Vassar Brothers Hospital are very good in cooperating with the Public Health Nurses. We also have a Tuberculosis Hospital with a Preventorium and a Free Clinic, besides the medical, surgical, eye, ear, nose and throat clinics at Vassar Brothers Hospital.

Colgate's advertisements (he has wonderful ones in "John Martin's Book") and songs to the tune of "Yankee Doodle," "Tramp, Tramp, Tramp," etc., which urge the use of "Powder, brush and paste, There's no time to lose or waste," are a wonderful help in teaching health habits, and so is the Modern Health Crusade. Sometimes, very often in fact, it seems as if the school nurse was wasting time and breath, but there do come occasional testimonials to her work, as when a mother told me that her daughter burst into tears when she started to school in September, because, she said, "Miss Perkins will be there, and I have not been to the dentist!" That may not speak well for my disposition, but I think it does for my efficiency. One day I gave a small boy a lift (all school children think the nurse's car is their property, and it is embarrasing when twenty think so at once). The boy rode in silence until we reached his house. As he got out he beamed and said, "Miss Perkins, I washed my head!"

Primarily I am school nurse for the eight hundred school children of my town. My spare time I spend calling on babies, making nursing calls (I know what the Augean Stables must have been since I spent two days trying to clean up one small kitchen for a mother who was dying of tuberculosis), and teaching Little Mothers' Leagues and Home Nursing Classes, and instructing tubercular patients. I give some material relief, although theoretically I believe the nurse should not give relief. Actually it becomes so entangled with her work, as a nurse, that unless there is some organization to attend to it, she really must do it herself.

We have a small community house in Arlington, the largest village in the township. There I have office hours every morning. We also have classes in sewing and cooking, clubs for boys and girls, all directed by the Vassar College students, and a continuous sale of worn clothing. The money received from this sale is spent by the Relief Committee, a part of the Public Health Committee, for material relief, and also for glasses, dental care, etc., for school children from the few districts which do not pay for their own work. Because of the very moderate price charged for the clothes, the sale is of benefit to the poor families, and the money received helps the Relief Committe.

It is all fascinating work, this Public Health nursing, and it is especially interesting because it is so new as yet. It seems as if the most obscure rural nurse may be working out principles and methods which can influence the growth and development of the work all over the country.

Yours sincerely,

EMELIE M. PERKINS.

Who Was Selected as One of the Red Cross Scholarship Students to Take the Public Health Course of King's College, London, England.

This is such an active life that I can only try in a feeble way to do the many things I want to do.

The excellent work done here to improve midwifery has interested me greatly. Since the passing of the Midwives Act of 1902 the standard of midwifery has been raised and a much higher type of woman is qualifying for this work.

We met a Miss Lowe, who has organized the work of "Health Visitors" in Warwickshire. She is quite a wonderful woman and has been in Warwickshire for seventeen years and has done an excellent piece of work.

EXTRACT FROM LETTER FROM VIRGINIA HARRELL

January, 1921.

From far China I send you heartiest greetings for a very happy New Year.

Within our walls, Christmas has seemed just as jolly as any American Yuletide. The same Christmas trees, carols, red candies, turkey and plum pudding, gifts, parties, snow, and even mistletoe, but with red berries.

Without the compound, impressions are vastly different. One sees the most distressing poverty—hordes of beggars and famine refugees, showing all too plainly the ravages of cold, hunger and disease.

But this only seems to accentuate Peking as a city of barbaric splendor. There are the walls, two hundred feet high and as broad as Fifth Avenue. The canals with marble bridges—the palaces that are great splashes of vermilion, green and blue with white marble terraces—the broad streets with amazing crowds—people of all Eastern countries in native dress; street vendors, selling everything from jewels to feather dusters (Grand Street pushcart market offers no comparison); gigantic white mules, splendid in red and silver harness with many bells, drawing a two-wheel "Peking cart," the chariot of the gorgeously dressed, much bejewelled Manchu lady; and, most picturesque of all, the caravans of camels that bring in from the country loads of silks, rugs, uncut stones, jade and turquoise—even coal.

China is indeed a most wonderful country. I am very happy to be in such an interesting place at such an interesting time. It is the day of changes. The Chinese gentleman still clings to his bright colored silk garments, and still takes his pet bird for an airing—but he goes in a Packard car, and oftentimes his going is by his wrist watch.

Such a jumble of first impressions!

Tomorrow the first patient will be admitted to our wonderful new hospital. The private pavilion, a building of thirty rooms, really a hospital complete in itself, will be opened. We hope that June will see the entire group of fourteen buildings ready for work.

It gives one a sensation of awe to come in from the street, crowded with hordes of unwashed Chinese, so distracted by poverty and disease, into the quiet of the compound and beauty of the white stone, green tile roofed hospital.

Within, the contrast is even greater. Here one finds the most modern of equipment—built-in medicine cases that contain hot and cold water, electric light and gas-burner. Oxygen and nitrous oxide are piped into each ward and operating rooms, and are available by the turn of a faucet. Refrigerating system replaces old-fashioned ice-boxes. Bed pans are sterilized in a steam sterilizer built for the purpose. There will be two hundred and fifty beds and out-patient clinics.

The training school equipment is just as modern as the hospital. Three large rooms are devoted to demonstration and there is a well-equipped lab.

The training school plans are most ambitious—a four-year course with rigid entrance requirements. The medical students and nurses pursue the same course for the first year. At present, we have two pupil nurses of this class. A training school for social workers is also to be established.

The whole is a great vision, which, when realized, will give to the East, men and women well equipped to meet all hospital problems. The medical college has full enrollment of students from all parts of China. We hope the training school will prove as attractive to Chinese women.

Peking is most delightful—a city of color, splendor and contrasts. I have indeed fallen a victim to the lure of the East. New York, with its incessant rush, seems very far away. All the foreigners enjoy a very delightful life—there is so much of interest and time for everything. Ruth Williams and the two Melleney families and myself, all of P. H., quite agree that both Peking and its people are splendid.

May we not hope for a visit from you some day? I am sure you would find the country and its people perfectly fascinating. It would be such a joy to have you come.

May I thank you again for three very happy years spent in your school. I feel especially grateful now, as it has enabled me to be a small part of the great scheme of things here.

My love to you, Miss Maxwell, and best wishes for a very happy 1921.

LETTER FROM K. G. TSILKA

It is twenty years now since I first left America. There must be many great changes in the hospital. I wonder if you yourself are there. I am writing this letter just for the sake of finding who is there. Kindly send me a catalogue of the hospital. I suppose catalogues and magazines are being sent to me at my old address at Vrotcha.

On account of the war and the terrible battles, we were stranded in Bulgaria and are still here, because it is not allowed yet to travel to Albania. I hear that all we had in the way of household furniture is lost. No wonder, so many hostile armies passing. Well, Mrs. Christie, I have lost the best I had in this world—my husband. He died in four days from the Spanish fever, raging so much among the soldiers. I have four children, two girls and two boys.

Ellenbe is in college at Constantinople; has two more years to graduate. Has grown into a sweet young woman. It is a very hard life, I mean, but are we the only ones? I am trying to get away from Bulgaria, but it takes too long to get a passport. The country is in a terrible condition; everything is confusion.

Five months after the death of my husband I had a serious operation. Expected to die, but here I am quite well again and eager to be active. The only thing worth while in this world is to help humanity and serve God.

I wonder how and where dear Miss Maxwell is. Please be kind enough to drop me a few lines. Address me care of American Mission, Samokov, Bulgaria, Europe. With best wishes to all who may remember me."

EXTRACT FROM LETTER FROM LILLIE A. LINDSEY, B.A., OF THE CLASS OF 1920

I have just accepted a position as County Nurse in Baker, Oregon, and expect to go out there next week, so that will be my address.

While I have been in Portland I have met Miss Helena Hughes and we have had some very pleasant times discussing the Hospital and the ideals and inspirations one carries away from there.

LETTER FROM "THE RED CROSS NURSE" AT ELIZABETHTOWN, N. J.

January, 1921.

I think all would be interested in just what has been accomplished with a glimpse of the kind of people back of the work. At the end of the first month, the Executive Committee of the Red Cross were convinced that a car was essential for efficient work. They voted to buy a car, and the Board of Health decided to take the work over at the end of the second month. The appropriation has been made, and these things have come to pass. Meantime, classes in Home Hygeine and Care of the Sick were organized and special consent was granted by the School Board, giving us the use of a large room. It now looks almost like the Demonstration Room well known to certain probationers, even to the large Chase doll. All of the equipment was secured to make the classes complete, and the enrollment had to be cut down to save the life of the nurse.

Our next undertaking was the provision of hot school lunches, or at least a hot drink to be served to the large group of children who bring their lunches (cold), starting from home at 7:30 in the morning with the temperature 10 to 20 degrees below. It was decided that $200 would be needed to start the work, the tickets were to be sold weekly to the children for a small amount. A member of the committee (a business man) volunteered to raise the money by subscription, so enthusiastic was he. We wanted a paid worker to carry the main part of the work and be responsible. At first, none could be had, but the committee carried the whole thing, and we have been feeding from 60 to 65 children daily, and the town is brimful of enthusiasm about what it is doing to the children. Our paid worker has also been found, but we have two volunteers a day. The nurse only took an active part the first two days—she is too busy running "Henry" from patient to patient. The Committee realize she must be doing the other school work. We have weight charts in all the school rooms, and monthly weighing, with inspection and special talks to the schools. There are four district schools to be visited and worked over, not to mention the new babies coming.

Another important item is that the one doctor, who is the Health Officer also, is very co-operative. He came to take the retiring doctor's place, and as the nurse had the field ahead of him, she really had the advantage, but he is up-to-date and sees the value of a nurse, uses her even in giving assistance in anaesthetics. He even said when Miss Lewis, the supervisor, said that there was more bedside nursing done in Elizabethtown than in any of her other communities, "But there isn't anybody else to do it—not even to turn a patient in bed in some cases."

But this sounds like all work, and there is so much to say for the other side of the life here. There is splendid skating, coasting, skiing and snowshoeing. My class gave me a pair of snowshoes for Christmas. Then the people are most cordial and hospitable. There are a number of interesting city people besides the unusually fine type of natives (not aborigines). When I came, someone visiting here pitied me for the long, lonesome evenings ahead. Sometimes I wish I could find a long, lonesome evening, thought I am happy, but I can't keep up with the reading I had planned.

MISSIONARY NURSING

Severance Hospital, Seoul, Korea

Delia May Battles, 1920

ASPIRATIONS

"Here am I, Lord, send me!" Shall we ever forget how with enthusiastic joy we sang, "Where He leads me I will follow." How thrilled we were in those days of consecration, and what joy there was in knowing that we were doing the Lord's will. We counted everything as nothing compared to the fulfilling of our calling, and were even given strength to tear ourselves away from the arms of our weeping mothers, to start off without fear, for a strange and heathen country. Finding our work, we shouldered it with all courage, glad of the opportunity of working in so needy a land, and nothing daunted us. When we landed in our new country we received a most hearty welcome from the older missionaries, and we were at once made to feel at home. And when we saw the smile of welcome on the faces of the Koreans who came out long distances to meet us, we were glad of our new life, glad for the privilege of living, glad of our special call to service.

Beginner's Problems

Something happened; what it was, we could not tell. Where it came from we did not know. However, we caught to this, that there was a great barrier between us and the people we had come to serve. We did not know their language. They could not understand us, they could only misunderstand us. It is true a group of faithful Christians constantly surrounded us, but of course they did not make up the mass of people. When we went on the street a staring crowd followed us, we were ever the object of curiosity. We were surrounded by obscene and heathen sights, and even breathed heathen atmosphere, and when we realized we could not carry out our work as we had hoped, we were overcome and fell into such an attack of homesickness as cannot be described. We emerged from this in due time, determined to conquer ourselves, and if not able to do our best, to do our next best. It sounds strange to be willing to drop in ones ideals, but if we should say we would do our best or nothing, we would soon see that we had nothing to do. For it wouldn't take anyone long to find that there are no ideal conditions to work under in Korea. So with struggling with the language, that seemed to come so slowly; trying to understand the people, a thing that seemed almost impossible, for their thoughts are just opposite from ours, sometimes questioning our faith, for we no longer knew ourselves, we gave up the idea of doing something great for a needy people and took up the daily grind of routine work.

The daily routine work in a hospital is familiar to all, listening to the aches and pains of suffering humanity, trying to revive those who attempt to put an end to their troubles, turning away others who have let their diseases run until it was too late and there was no help for them; giving advice to ignorant and superstitious mothers, who pay no attention to what you say; ready to assist with the many accident cases, spending hours in the operating room and comforting the sick and dying during the long night watches.

After four years of experience, I have come to my last year before going on furlough, and this last year has been richer and fuller because of the experiences already gained, and because of the better knowledge of the language and people.

Working with the Korean Nurses

Last Fall, when I entered Severance Hospital, the work was divided among three nurses. Miss Esteb taking charge of the Training School, Miss Reiner the main hospital, while I took the college building and dispensary. Our division of labor worked very well until Miss Reiner's health began to break, and when she left in April on health leave, we made another division, this time in two. Miss Esteb took charge of the hospital and Korean nurses' home; the dispensary, isolation building and Foreign Nurses' Home fell to me. Keeping house in our own home is no small job, for it does not only mean providing for us two, but for at least five, for all the food for our Occidental patients is sent out from our kitchen, and sometimes, when the hospital is full, patients stay in our home, and there have been times when six and seven trays have gone out every meal from our kitchen.

I have enjoyed so much working this year in an organized training school. It has been a pleasure to watch the girls develop in the knowledge of nursing. They have not done perfect work, the fact is we have not taught perfect work; and it nearly breaks our hearts when we realize that we have not lived up to our ideals. But after all, some of the women of Korea, with our imperfect teaching, know so much more than they did about caring for the sick, that we live in the hopes that the next generation of medical missionaries, profiting by the progress we have made, will be able to teach ideal nursing.

We have thirty-five nurses in the home, and I have come in contact with practically all of them, as they come (seven at a time) to the dispensary for two months for their clinic work training. These nurses prepare the dressings and sterile supplies and assist in the dressings and treatment of a daily clinic of about two hundred patients. Every day the dispensary is full and most interesting, for such a variety of cases appear, and practically every disease under the sun common to man is treated.

There has been a special pleasure in the work this year, because I took up the teaching of nursing without an interpreter. With my imperfect language I wondered many times how I dared to do it, and sometimes I was led to doubt whether they were taking in very much, but the way they responded to questions, wrote lessons on the blackboard, and answered in their examinations inspired me some. Anyway it helped my language, brought me closer to the nurses and gave me a great deal of joy in the work.

In a professional way, my Mission work has been most interesting. I have seen diseases in such stages as I never saw them at home, and I have been through epidemics of influenza, typhus, cholera and smallpox.

Last year, because of the political conditions, there were no graduation exercises for nurses, so this Spring our 1919 and 1920 classes graduated together. We had a very appropriate exercise, which was attended by many friends, both Korean and American. The nurses were dressed in white, and it was an impressive sight, indeed, to see sixteen attractive Korean girls stand up and receive their diplomas and pins. Out of the sixteen nurses nine went up for their Government examinations. I was reminded how very human these Korean girls are, as I watched them and thought of my own training days. They were so excited and keyed up before they went, and after, when it was over and word came that they had all passed, oh! there was such singing, shouting and shrieking as you have never heard.

Work Affected by Political Condition

The political condition of the country has affected the work in our hospital. At the time of the demonstrations there was the inrush of patients, that made the congestion almost beyond control. Cot beds were put in every available place, even the halls were filled. The local American Red Cross helped to meet the situation by providing bedding for forty emergency beds. The abnormal inrush subsided in due time, but the hospital has continued to remain in a congested condition. Our hospital, that was built to accommodate thirty-five patients, now cares for one hundred and ten in-patients. The Superintendent of Nurses' desk stands in the hall, while her office is turned into a small ward for patients, and the basement rooms are now free wards.

While the independence movement was at its height, our nurses felt they must also take an active part in showing the world their desire for freedom of their country, and, unknown to us, slippd out on the street and shouted with the others, "Long Live Korea!" Nine of our nurses were arrested, four were let out after three days, and five received sentences. A few weeks before their six months of imprisonment was finished, on the day of the Korean Prince's wedding, when the Government released hundreds of prisoners throughout the country, four of our girls were set free.

Miss Esteb spent considerable time throughout the year with nurses who were arrested, going with them to give moral support when they were called to the court house, visiting the nurses in prison, seeing that they had food and clothing, and sending in such books as the officials would allow.

Our nurses returned from prison with their faces and hands scarred as the result of frostbites obtained in the unheated prisons during an unusually cold winter. They were able also to tell tales of torture and discomforts. They were weak and nervous and covered with itch after their long confinement. After a few days treatment they were sent to their homes, where, we hope, after they have been given rest and plenty of good food, they will be able to return to complete their course of nursing, for they were among our most promising girls.

Gifts

When we nurses left our mission work in Korea and went up into Siberia to work with the Red Cross for six months, and saw the unlimited supplies there were to work with, we often wished that we might have such supplies in our Mission Hospitals. Of course our Mission Hospitals will never have the support behind them that the Red Cross hospitals had, but surely thought does express itself, for when the Siberian Commission of the American Red Cross went out of Siberia it sent 311 tons of supplies to the Mission Hospitals in Korea. We could hardly realize the gift until the great cases began to come in. There were such quantities of things, and everything so beautifully made. It is such a pleasure to have them to work with. And everything is being put to real Red Cross work here, just as much so as if they had been used in France or Siberia.

We also have many other gifts to be grateful for; money has been sent by kind friends for the milk fund for Korean babies, for support of nurses and school girls. Also large quantities of used postal cards have been sent, which have been used in Sunday schools and in the dispensary.

First Furlough

My first five years spent on the Mission Field have been full of interesting experiences. I have learned to love the Korean people. I love Korea and my work, and if it were not for the need of a rest, I would hesitate now to go home on furlough. My greatest regret is that I have not been able to do more. It has been said that Medical work is Christianity in action, and I am so glad that I have had the privilege, for five years, of being connected with this phase of Mission work.

OUT-PATIENT DEPARTMENT (SURGICAL)

Cracks in bones and holes in skins;
Old dames with ulcers on their shins;
Scalds on arms and burns on hands,
And children with tubercular glands.

Frozen ears and frozen toes;
A little boy who's skinned his nose;
Fingers crushed and fingers cut,
And long scalp wounds stitched up with gut.

Perhaps you think that I feel sick
When from a wound I pull a wick,
Or when I put a dressing on
A stump from which a finger's gone?

Perhaps you think my bandaging halts
While I sniff my smelling salts
With shaky hand and chalky face?
—Quite the contrary's the case!

When I look upon these sights,
Bruises and burns and cuts and bites,
And feel my own limbs whole and sound,
With never a sore and never a wound,

How fit I feel no tongue can tell,
How positively, acutely well;
And in gross health and spirits gay
I leave the clinic every day.

ON THE SALARIES OF PRIVATE DUTY NURSES

By One of Them

This question has been much discussed among nurses. Some think we are paid too much. Others hold that no amount could be too much for the service rendered.

Likewise, patients hold differing views. We all know the patient who delicately elevates her eyebrows when her bill is rendered. We know also the patient who frankly asks why we charge so much, and the rarer case of the patient who wishes to express her appreciation by adding to the amount charged. Utter lack of understanding of the difficulties of the nurse's work is not uncommon.

The patient's point of view is by no means always in ratio with her financial condition. She who daily feeds her Pekinese with tenderloin from a Dresden plate, is apt to think $7.00 a day an outrageous charge for twelve laborious hours spent in the skilled care of a mere human being. Such a one will joyfully pay $50.00 for the restoration of an antique table, but groans at paying an equal sum for a week's labor spent in the effort to restore an antique husband!

The whole attitude of patients to this question is a very erratic and unintelligent one, and should not be made a factor in any attempted settlement of it.

This question, however it may be solved, must be solved by nurses themselves. The doctor has no more right to dictate in the matter of nurses' salaries than the nursing profession would have to attempt an adjustment of doctors' fees. While there are glorious exceptions, the average physician has as little understanding of, or interest in, the status of the nurse he employs, as would a layman. He does not support in any way the attempt of the nursing profession to regulate and control its practice. He is not interested. He, consciously or indifferently, employs women who are not graduate nurses, and in some cases totally incompetent, and allows the patient to suppose she is receiving the services of a fully qualified, licensed nurse. This should be corrected, but the co-operation of the doctor is necessary to its adjustment.

In the course of several years of private nursing, I have come to believe that the only logical solution of the problem is the adoption of a sliding scale of charges, similar to the practice followed by many physicians, and most hospitals. There would probably be no more abuse of the system in one case than in the other. Ethics and ideals are not professional—they are personal.

Meantime, the worthy attempt of the best alumnae associations to regulate the salaries of graduate nurses in private duty is a failure, because nurses from small hospitals, practising in New York, charge varying sums, according to their mental bias—as one of them put it to me recently, "Whatever I can get." Hence, we have the spectacle of graduates of the best hospitals charging a fixed sum, while a nurse on the same case, perhaps less qualified, charges more, which is naturally a little puzzling to the patient.

It is the only form of service I know in which inferior workers may demand any sum they please. In business, a man employing a large staff pays them on their individual merits, or according to the relatively difficult character of their work.

This brings up the question of whether a nurse may justly charge more to care for a difficult case than for an easy one—a reasonable proposition, and one which could be adjusted under the sliding scale system.

Let us seriously consider this method of adjusting the problem of our payment. It does not seem fair that the patient with limited means should be denied the privilege of being nursed at home if she prefers it to a hospital, nor is it right that the nurse should forego the joy of relieving the pampered, idle rich wife of at least half her bridge winnings! Let us workers in the world take some of the wasted substance and put it to good use. Let's be bedroom Bolsheviks! Let us take from Dives and give unto Lazarus! But let us not fail to distinguish between Dives and his anthithesis.

And, above all, let us never become mercenary, but seek only that which seems to be just and right. Let us be always laborers worthy of our hire.

Graduation this year will be held on May 19th. The Alumnae will entertain the graduating class at luncheon at 37 East 71st Street on the following day at 1:30 P. M.

At the quarterly meeting of the Alumnae Association, held February 17th, it was announced that by an order of the Supreme Court of the State of New York, held in and for the County of New York, dated the 2nd day of February, 1921, and entered and filed in the office of the Clerk of the County of New York on the 3rd day of February, 1921, the name of this Association was changed to read as follows:

"The Alumnae Association of the School of Nursing of the Presbyterian Hospital in the City of New York, Inc."

Such change of name, pursuant to said order, will become effective as of March 15, 1921.

SCHOOL NOTES

Since the last issue of the Quarterly the constitution of the Student Association has been revised and another meeting has been held. The School now has student government organization, and we trust that everyone will do their best to keep it up to a high standard. At the recent meeting, Miss Maxwell was elected an honorary member of the organization, arrangements for proctors to keep the halls quiet after 10 P. M. were made, and also rules for breakfast. The preliminary class will join the student association when they join the school. In the meantime they are under the School Office regulations.

Two engagements of great interest to us all have recently been announced. Miss Mary Elizabeth Deans, '21, to Dr. John Taylor Howell, Jr., of Newburgh, N. Y., and Miss Freda Fowler, '21, to Dr. Edward Wight Clark, Jr., of Englewood, N. J.

We have noticed a distinct improvement in early attendance at breakfast, and of course we are looking forward to the time when there will be no names at all on the little pad on the bulletin board outside the dining room. This certainly was a good plan for getting people down earlier, and I am sure we all feel better for having some breakfast, even if we won't admit it.

In a most interesting lecture which Miss Elizabeth A. Dines, of Teachers College, gave us a short time ago, she quoted these few sentences from Professor Thorndike, to define for us the independence we seek as nurses of today, "The truly independent thinker does not make less use of other men's ideas than the servile thinker, but more. The expert man of science or law or business has a thousand masters, while the servile mind has but a few. The truly independent thinker does not put less faith in his masters than the servile mind. He puts more faith in them, but he chooses the right ones to put faith in. The servile mind has faiths that seem strong only because he never questions them. In fact, a good definition of intellectual independence is reasoned dependence.

"Only two conditions (to the attainment of this reasoned dependence) must be fulfilled. First, the master, models, facts, creeds and ideals must be right in the sense of being impartially chosen in the light of pure reason as the best for the profession's welfare. Second, each nurse must be taught, so far as she can learn it, that she, as well as the highest of her rulers, is free to do what she can to change ideas, customs, masters, models—for the better and that not the highest of the highest is free to change them otherwise."

This seems particularly appropriate to a new Student Government Association after an historical review such as Miss Maxwell's charming paper. Let us eagerly keep the good from all the preceding generations of nursing and add with zeal our own constructive contribution.

(N.B.:—Profession's, nurses, she, her, etc., substituted for "nation's," "man," "woman," etc., "he," "his," "he" in the article.)

We are always so glad to see the Head Nurses at "Prayers," and we wish they would come often and in larger numbers.

The Head Nurses and Staff surprised Miss Maxwell at tea on the anniversary of her birthday, March 14th. Miss Maxwell was much puzzled all day that so many remembered this date.

Miss Justus has returned from an extended vacation and has resumed her duties as night supervisor.

Miss Hester Vreeland has returned to make up time lost by her recent illness.

THE AFTERMATH OF NURSING

For special, weary from the long day's toil
  Wherein no gratitude or peace of mind
Doth day and night her happiness despoil;
  Wherein responsibility doth find
No rest or change from grinding day's complaints;
  Where relaxation, day or night, is barred
By the too long days of o'er-trained self-restraints,
  And thus each joy and diversion sadly marred:
For pupil nurse whose blaze days are yet to come;
  Who cannot shake the omnipresence of
The nurse in charge, the great and mighty one,
  Whose attitude is destitute of love:
For these dear William must have meant in part
These wailing lines of a lover's heart:—
"Weary with toil, I haste me to my bed,
  The dear repose for limbs with travel tired;
But then begins a journey in my head,
  To work my mind, when body's work's expired:
For then my thots (from far where I abide)
  Intend a zealous pilgrimage to thee,
And keep my drooping eyelids open wide,
  Looking on darkness which the blind do see:
Save that my soul's imaginary sight
  Presents thy shadow to my sightless view,
Which, like a phantom hung in ghastly night,
  Makes black night hideous from thy wants anew.
Lo, thus, by day my limbs, by night my mind,
For thee, and for myself, no quiet find."

TO THE ALUMNAE

Our "Wonderful Day" has left an indelible impression upon my mind, that we are a strong body of useful women with understanding minds and a clear vision of life, united in one great purpose to make the world healthier and better because of our presence. Already many of you have gained distinction in the different departments of nursing. You have made your school known throughout our land and in other countries.

One distinction which has been attributed to our graduates is their devoted, self-sacrificing care of the sick and suffering. They are also known for preventive work of a high type, for upholding educational standards in Schools of Nursing, and improving hospital administration.

Many tributes have been paid to those who "carried on" through the great world war, tributes for ability and devoted service in this and foreign countries.

My dear children, may I thank you, with an overflowing heart, for your loving expressions of appreciation for the small part I may have had in your preparation for this life of joy in service, and for the superb gift with which you have endowed me.

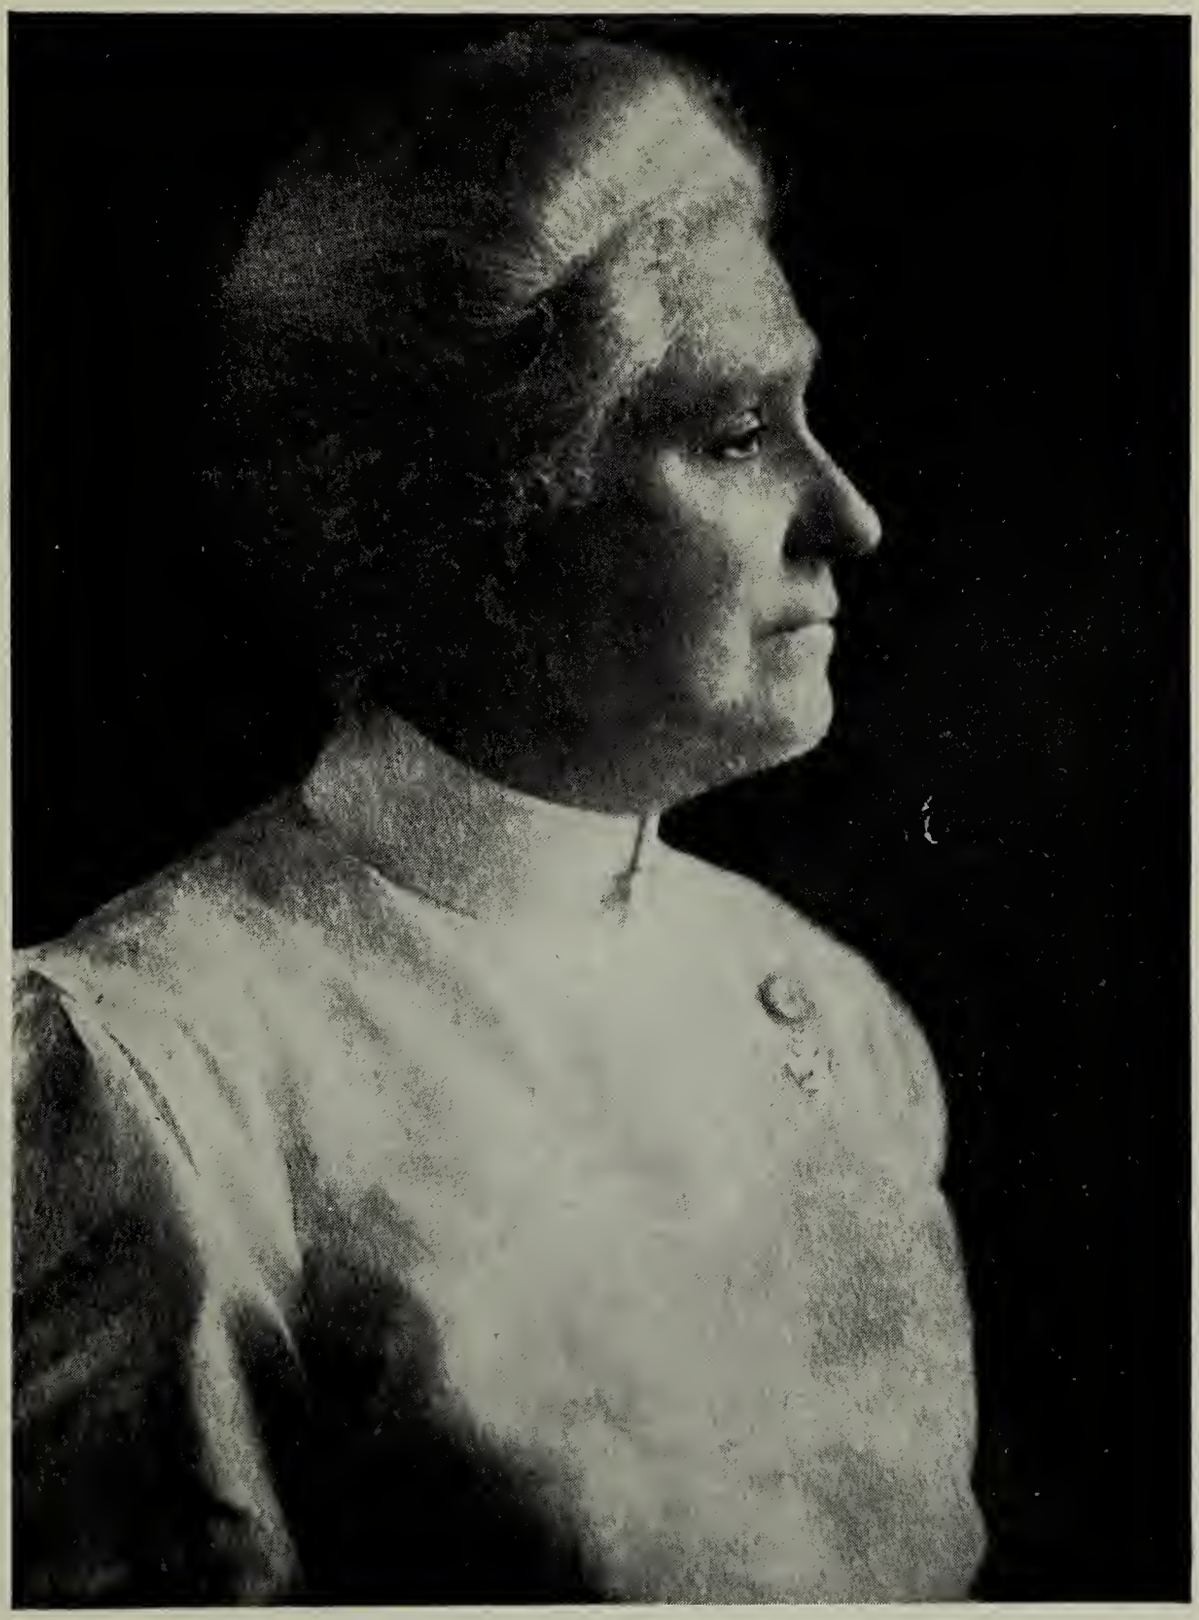

My last request in handing on this work to you is that you stand together as Alumnae, that any small differences be dealt with in a fair-minded and large way, that you give your loyal support to the School and to those into whose hands the work is given, and that you stand as a model for all Alumnae.

ANNA CAROLINE MAXWELL.

June 14th, 1921.

ANNA CAROLINE MAXWELL, R.N., M.A.

ANNA CAROLINE MAXWELL, R.N., M.A.

VALE!

Miss Maxwell has left us. Of course we can't realize this most talked-of subject in the history of the Training School. But it is true, all you who are far away. When you return to the office now, she will not be there to greet you. We have read the newspaper paragraphs sounding the praises and recognition of the world at large, but what can we, her own "girls," say to express our feelings in a way that would not be mere commonplace? Perhaps the greatest tribute her Alumnae can pay her will be a reassertion of their loyal attempt to perpetuate her example and teachings. The pioneer's first struggles she has passed through for us, and then gone far beyond that stage in making nursing the science it has become. Now in the final perfection of nursing education, we alumnae must see that the essential spirit, the spirit which has raised it from an ignoble to a noble profession, is not lost. Training Schools are being forced to develop a policy of definite appeal for students on other grounds than mere service. Something is being expected in return for such service. But the purely self-seeking candidate will never find her niche in nursing. Miss Maxwell has always been foremost in attempting to make the life of her nurses as normal and happy as possible, but she never allowed their personal claims to overshadow those of the patients under her care. Any one of us can remember moments of struggle when it seemed as if the demands of our outside existence were greater than our duty in the hospital. However, at such a time, it did not take long for Miss Maxwell's cold logic to define the path for us, and almost invariably that lay with the patients we had come voluntarily to serve.

As she has given an inestimable future to the entire profession, how much more has she given to us who have had the benefit of her personal contact and supervision. Every student has a fund of memories whose center is a certain tall figure in white who suddenly confronted one "with the goods"! Some never-to-be-forgotten lesson was sure to be learned at such moments. They may have dealt with the fashion of one's hair or the length of one's skirt, or with far more weighty matters of professional etiquette or treatment of patients. Be that as it may, by that presence an awe akin to fear was inspired, commanding the promptest obedience. It usually wore off, that worst stage of quaking, but that prompt response to suggestion—never!

Again, how her vitality and energy constantly spurred our own efforts! Many times have strangers, when seeing her erect figure pass down the halls, taken her for one of her own girls. In fact, the span of years covering her active labors with class after class, to say nothing of the diversity of her work outside the hospital, is nothing less than miraculous. Where is the source of all that energy? The applicants could not be kept away from the doors, if she had fully imparted that secret to us!

If, after our years of training, we did not carry away the highest interpretation of our profession, with its demand for skill, courage, and devotion, we did not rightly open our minds and hearts to the teaching of our superintendent, who, in herself, was the embodiment of these principles. Few of us could develop the personal magnetism and social power which are so large a part of Miss Maxwell's influence, yet these, too, she would have inspired in us. And to these qualities she adds that modern word summarizing a fighting spirit, good sportsmanship. Surely none of us feel, after quitting the field of our training, that we are meant to rest on those laurels and let it go at that. Rather she makes us feel the progress still to be made—with the fight always on for a world of health and sanity.

As you sail away on your long-earned holiday, Miss Maxwell, we are waving you wishes that can't be put in mere words. May you forget us long enough to be fresh for the fray when you return. Then, long may you reign over us, if not from the School Office, still from your post in the world at large!

PROLOGUE

The home of any Presbyterian nurse.

1894-1921! Alas, the cruel mark of time and fashion—sleeves too full; skirts too long; lines too slender. Frantic efforts to adjust the ancient uniform to the modern figure; these failing,—uniforms borrowed, begged or stolen from the faithful custodian of the sewing-room. Next a cry for caps! A fruitless attack upon the School Office and then to the rescue an active member of '99 who made them swift as magic.

SCENE I.

The First Presbyterian Church, June 19, 7:30 P. M.

A deserted corner, then flocks of nurses from every direction. In a few moments the lower assembly room of the church filled to the doors.

"Where is Miss Maxwell?" "Can't we see her before graduation?"

Then the difficult task of finding her! Back and forth greetings, exclamations, inquiries!

"I though you couldn't come!" "I couldn't stay away! My assistant gave up her holiday." . . .

"So you did leave your sick children?" "Oh, I left a perfectly good husband on guard."

"Is my cap on straight? Twenty minutes ago I arrived at the Grand Central Station!"

And finally the vital question, "Where is my class?"

Then the familiar voice was heard—"You really must be quiet. I suppose you will talk going up the aisle!"

With effort the hundreds fell into line and made the perilous ascent through narrow halls, up narrower stairways. The first to enter the church were graduates in white, those holding executive positions. These were followed by the classes in order of graduation.

At the appearance of Miss Maxwell with the Class of 1921 there was a marvelous tribute of enthusiastic applause.

After the invocation by the Rev. Dr. Coffin, the diplomas were presented to the Class of 1921 by Mr. Sloane, the distinguished President of the Training School Committee. At the close of this ceremony, Mr. Sloane said that he had the honor of presenting a diploma to one who was a graduate of the Class of 1921 and of each class which had passed through the School of Nursing of the Presbyterian Hospital.

By a charming gesture, Mr. Sloane brought Miss Maxwell to his side and read from a roll of parchment:

"The Presbyterian Hospital regards Miss Anna Caroline Maxwell as the founder, in 1892, of its Training School for Nurses and its guiding spirit for twenty-nine years. Her influence has been felt not only in our own institution, but in hospitals and training schools and in the nursing profession generally through the world.

"Miss Maxwell was graduated from the Boston City Hospital in 1880, and served in the Montreal General Hospital, 1880-1881; Massachusetts General Hospital, Boston, 1881-1889; St. Luke's Hospital, New York City, 1889-1892; Presbyterian Hospital, New York City, 1892-1921.

"Gifted with a wonderfully magnetic personality and endowed with a clear insight into the possibilities in the development of the nursing profession, sympathetic with the successive new steps made necessary in the methods of teaching, jealous of the position of the nurse in civilian life and ambitious for her proper recognition in military service, an inspired teacher, a helpful friend and a superb type of womanhood, Miss Maxwell has been the glory of this institution and, more than anyone else, has added lustre to its reputation for nearly a third of a century.

"'The Board of Managers, in recording this tribute to Miss Maxwell, upon the occasion of her resignation, wishes her abundant health to enable her to carry forward the good of the noble profession which she has so long adorned.

"(Signed) WILLIAM SLOANE,
"President.

"(Signed) MATTHEW C. FLEMING,
"Secretary."

Listening to these happy words, Miss Maxwell stood before her nurses, a radiant figure—dignity, modesty, charm, in high relief. The beautiful moment ended with an instant's tense silence—then she stepped down, met by waves of applause.

The address to the graduating class, delivered by the Rev. Dr. Fosdick, deftly combined humor, wisdom, inspiration, diverting for a moment thoughts of separation.

The Class of 1921 led the way from the church. Swiftly turning in the aisle, a shining arch was formed of white diplomas, through which Miss Maxwell passed.

SCENE II.

Florence Nightingale Hall, June 19, 9 P. M.

The Reception to the Graduating Class of 1921—Music, masses of flowers—Congratulations on achievements—Prophecies for the future—Scores of proud parents—Rows of gallant admirers—A dignified background of trustees and managers—Hundreds of friends and nurses from far and wide. A dance, a supper, then "Au Revoir!"

Long Live the Class of 1921!

SCENE III.

Florence Nightingale Hall, June 20, 1:30 P. M.
Dining Room.

A delightful buffet luncheon—Determined probationers serving a vast throng. A distinguished few seated—standing room only for others. A babel of tongues—accompanying music, and in the air comradeship, appreciation, loyalty.

SCENE IV.

Florence Nightingale Hall, June 20, 2:30 P. M.
Assembly Hall.

Circle of nurses—The venturesome poised on window-seats and chairs. All eyes turned toward a little space in the center of the room. A mass of American Beauty roses, the gift of the staff, a glowing background for Miss Maxwell, who stood with Miss Brackett, the President of the Alumnae Association. Among those nearest, one chosen from each class to represent her associates. Miss Brackett read the following resolutions:

To
ANNA CAROLINE MAXWELL
R. N., M. A.
THE VOICE OF HER NURSES

Because of the approaching retirement of ANNA CAROLINE MAXWELL, R.N., M.A., the founder, and the director for a period of thirty years, of the Presbyterian Hospital School of Nursing in the City of New York, we, its graduates, desire to place on record this testimonial to her whose rare personality has so pre-eminently given distinction to the Presbyterian Hospital School of Nursing.

Although we shall be inexpressibly saddened by the severance of Miss Maxwell's active connection with the School of her making, we may rejoice that we have known her as our Chief, and we can glory in her achievements and in her personality and ability which have contributed so richly to the constructive and educational development, not only of this particular school, but of the entire nursing profession.

As our truest and most heartfelt tribute we offer unalterable allegiance to her as our guide in upholding nursing standards.

We extend to her our most affectionate congratulations, and pray that she may live long in the enjoyment of the fruits of her work and to be our continued inspiration.

THE GRADUATES OF THE PRESBYTERIAN HOSPITAL SCHOOL OF NURSING.

May the twentieth,
One thousand, nine hundred and twenty-one.

As the resolutions were given to Miss Maxwell, the Class of '94 made itself heard, and in swift succession each class attempted to express in the one brief moment allotted a perfect tribute to Miss Maxwell.

The result was unique and characteristic not only of the individual but of the class. Touching on widely varying points of their relation with her, some recounted episodes marked with deep sentiment, while others with rare imitation recalled amusing situations and vivid repartee, illustrating Miss Maxwell's deft handling of surprising situations and still more surprised students.

Twenty-seven classes passing in review! Laughter, tears, cheers, all in a moment! At every pause amusing ejaculations and flying retorts from the Chief herself.

Finally a bouquet of roses was brought to Miss Maxwell by Mary Magoun Brown, who, in a few words, portrayed a few of the thoughts surrounding the gift. Concealed among the flowers was a check for $4,000 and a bit of paper conveying the hope that it might be used "for a little spree." "Ah, but there is no place in this country for a spree! I shall have to go abroad!" was the quick reply.

To cover the emotion of the moment the musicians had been instructed to play, "For she's a jolly good fellow," with the intention that everyone should sing. For a few moments only the musicians were heard—no one could sing.

It was the Chief herself who took the situation in hand and tapping the time with her foot she rallied her forces.

This simple ceremony ended, the ardent throng broke around Miss Maxwell, bringing individual words of affection and appreciation.

They lingered late, and as they went these words came floating back: "Isn't she wonderful?"—"What shall we do without her?"—"Can she ever dream what she means to us?"

And from The Star herself—her eyes shining with tears—"This has been the happiest day of my life!"

L'ENVOI

TO THE STAR

Deep breaths of leisure,
Bright hours of pleasure,
Of zest, a measure
For travel, books, and art—
And then—
O Gallant Heart!
A glad return,
To play your destined part
As counselor and friend.

On Arrangements for Alumnae Day: Miss McLelland, Miss M. M. Brown, Miss Pearce, Mrs. W. P. Williams.

The programme for Alumnae Day was as follows:

IMMEDIATELY AFTER LUNCH

The following are the words with which Mary Magoun Brown offered our gift to Miss Maxwell:

"We are an intimate family group gathered as it were around you, our hearthstone. The tie that binds us to you is unending.

"There are no words that can bring you our message today. Each heart here present knows in what countless ways you have ministered to it.

"We have a rich inheritance to help us in our striving to follow your beacon light. May your spirit live in us.

"Our gift, that of your graduate nurses, is nestling in these flowers, bringing you the richness of our love. May the fragrant memory of this day abide with you forever, and may you feel surrounded and supported by your nurses, your children, as they have ever felt surrounded and supported by you. May we renew our pledge of loyalty to you and joining hands, go forward with our watchword, 'neighbors and friends.'"

Alumnae Day,
May 20, 1921,
Florence Nightingale Hall,
Presbyterian Hospital.

It had been hoped to publish in this number the twenty-seven one-minute speeches made on Alumnae Day. For lack of space and time this has been impossible. The classes were thus represented:

'94, Mrs. Trotter
'95, Miss Van Cleft
'96, Mesdames Geller, Howland, Murphy and Van Kirk ensemble
'97, Mrs. S. A. Brown
'98, Miss Ferguson
'99, Mrs. Byington
'01, Miss Granger
'02, Miss Culgin
'03, Miss Field
'04, Miss Gardiner
'05, Mrs. John Kernan

'07, Miss Boise
'08, Mrs. Ballentine
'09, Miss McKay
'10, Mrs. Leonard

'15, Miss Battles
'16, Mrs. McKenzie
'17, Mrs. MacCormack
'18, Miss St. John
'19, Miss Daniels
'20, Miss Belden
'21, Miss Low

Miss Cadmus wrote the Resolutions, an expression of perfect feeling and of rare art. Tiffany was entrusted with the mounting of the Resolutions. They are in book form—full calf, in a soft tint of mauve, and the school pin is embedded in the center of the cover. The inside of the cover is finished in moire of the same shade. The illuminating is beautifully designed in shades of mauve, blue and gold.

The lunch on Alumnae Day was in the hands of Miss McLelland, who executed a difficult task with complete composure and success. The menu was as follows:

Bouillon Chicken Salad Rolls
Ice Cream Cake
Coffee

Mrs. W. P. Williams acted as treasurer for the gift to Miss Maxwell, having as headquarters Miss McLelland's sitting-room at the Central Club for Nurses. Here the response poured in by hand, by post and even by telegraph from nurses in California. On Alumnae Day, the sum had reached $4,000, and since that time a considerable amount has been received from those too far away for immediate response.

Among those present were thirteen of our graduates who rank as Superintendents of Hospitals or Directors of Schools of Nursing: Miss Cadmus, Miss Clapp, Miss Clark, Miss Danner, Miss Dunning, Miss Fenner, Miss Ferguson, Miss Grant, Miss Hartwell, Mrs. Kinsey, Miss McKay, Miss Scott, Miss Frances Stone.

Telegrams and letters of regret were received from many others.

Mrs. Hesselburg deserves a decoration for devoting three days to the task of making the much-needed caps, as no supply was available to meet the great numbers of graduates returning for graduation.

A very happy and jolly group of P. H. graduates, with Miss Maxwell, of course, dined on the roof of the Pennsylvania Hotel on the evening of June 22, 1921, placing Janet B. Christie, Class '98, the guest of honor because of her many years of splendid service as Miss Maxwell's assistant.

The company was seated at a most attractive table, literally loaded with pink ramblers, from which was served a delectable feast.

Following this most enjoyable feature, the evening was rounded out by the rather spectacular departure of Mrs. Christie, who was made speechless by the appearance of one of the group suddenly stepping on the running board of the taxi and thrusting a huge bouquet of wonderful roses into her hands with an order to the chauffeur to "drive on," thus giving Mrs. Christie no chance to even discover that hidden among these roses were the Alumnae's tokens of regard and appreciation. Her face was a study, and what her words were may not appear in this description of a most pleasant evening, because of her being whisked away so quickly.

TO JANET BANFORD CHRISTIE, R. N.

Alumna of the

School of Nursing of the Presbyterian Hospital

In the City of New York

Class 1898

The members of the Alumnae Association of the School of Nursing of the Presbyterian Hospital hereby tender to you an expression of their deep appreciation of the telling part you have played in the development of our School, both through your personal devotion to its interests, and an unfailing loyalty to and support of Miss Maxwell.

In the positions of Supervising Nurse, 1899-1900; Night Superintendent and Relief in Office, 1900-1903; Assistant to Miss Maxwell, 1904-1921, you have ever displayed a "spirit of service" in the performance of your duties.

All are proud to join in a word of recognition of your wonderful success in carrying the Presbyterian nurses through their most trying overseas experience with so comparatively small loss of any sort.

Last but not least, your work as Treasurer of this Association over a period of fifteen years, involving an expenditure of energy and time, deserves the highest meed of praise and gratitude. It has been with you, as is often the case when one serves in tasks of this nature, apparently a rather thankless one, but, be assured in the sincerity of our expressions of gratitude.

Special mention is due of the part you took in the reconstruction of our financial obligations. Only those associated with you fully appreciate all you accomplished, but in the benefits resulting, none can fail to understand what you did.

All join in honoring you and offering deep and lasting good wishes.

TO ELSPETH ANNA GOULD

Alumna of the
School of Nursing of the Presbyterian Hospital
In the City of New York
Class 1909

In the coming changes in the Presbyterian Hospital School of Nursing, that caused by the retirement of Elspeth Anna Gould, R.N., Class 1909, presents another break that deeply affects the members of the Alumnae Association.

During her work as Supervising Nurse in Ward 10, 1909-1910, and that of Second Assistant to Miss Maxwell since 1911, Miss Gould has made herself very acceptable to the demands of those positions, and by her work as a member of the Unit while overseas earned the further right to our esteem.

This testimonial would be most incomplete were the work of Miss Gould as Business Manager of the Quarterly from August, 1914, to the present date not mentioned.

In the uninteresting details of this work Miss Gould has displayed her loyalty to our affairs which has earned for her the gratitude of this Association, therefore to her we extend our hearty thanks and best wishes for her future happiness and success.

Alumnae Association of the School of Nursing of the Presbyterian Hospital in the City of New York.

June 30, 1921.

It is with deep regret and with keenest appreciation of her untiring devotion to Miss Maxwell and the Training School, that we bid adieu to Mrs. Christie. Her position as assistant to Miss Maxwell—like that of all assistants—was one requiring untold perseverance and loyalty and much hard work, and in return for all this she gets little of the glory—that falls to the reigning queen. We feel, however, that Mrs. Christie has done more than her share in perfecting the halo of our "Queen."

It is Mrs. Christie whom the Alumnae have to thank for the financial stability of the Association. In its younger days, when funds were scarce, it was Mrs. Christie's foresight, energy and generosity that kept the Association intact.

Though Mrs. Christie has given up her position at the Presbyterian, we trust she will continue to remain one of the most active members of our Association.

We all knew that this time would come! It was inevitable that after years of unflagging devotion to her profession, Miss Maxwell—the inspiration and guiding spirit of Presbyterian—should want to pass on to younger shoulders the numerous responsibilities her position involves.

What could be more natural than that the person who has served Miss Maxwell so faithfully and efficiently—who has absorbed her visions and ideals—who is loved and trusted for her justice toward all—by every nurse who has come in contact with her—should be chosen to carry on the work. To succeed Miss Maxwell takes infinite courage, but we know Miss Young and we believe in her and in this her greatest undertaking. She has the loyal support and co-operation of every graduate and pupil nurse of the school.

A flaming torch, she has held on high,
Of great ideals which must not die.
She weathered storms, defied defeat,
Secured a victory complete.
And now on you the future rests,
With wisdom you will meet the tests.
Our faith is strong—you'll bear on high
That flaming light that must not die.

In the midst of the stirring events connected with the graduation of the Class of 1921 and our "Day" with Miss Maxwell, there moved a power, which, because of its marvelous ability to successfully grapple with the numberless details involved in the preparations for the events which brought so much satisfaction and pleasure to all, must not be permitted to go unmentioned in the annals of those never-to-be-forgotten days. This "power," known as Etha Etta Pearce, marshaled into line whatever of mind or matter bearing promise of being a contribution that she might discover, with a celerity and perfection of accomplishment and such apparent ease and quietness that but few suspected the wonderful work she was doing.

All will doubtless be glad to join in this tribute to her skill and efficiency which helped to give joy to so many.

THE FACULTY FETE

In a Tea House, wee and picturesque,
  Tucked away in Connecticut hills,
'Mid trees and flowers and much blue sky
  And other "vacation thrills,"
A merry party was gathered—
  Head nurses and officers, too.
The occasion, a Faculty Dinner—
  An invitation new.

Miss Maxwell was the Honor Guest,
  Mrs. Christie and Miss Gould,
And more than twenty others
  Were there where "good times" ruled.
Outdoors, where clouds and sunset
  Were giving all a treat,
We sat 'round little tables
  With the bestest things to eat!

Miss Keith, who was our Hostess,
  Well—you all know her skill—
Such luscious food! Such appetites!
  Our wants were shortly nil.
We lingered o'er our demi-tasse
  By moon and candlelight.
Much gaiety and laughter
  And fun were on that night.

'Tis said to be the longest day—
  The twenty-first of June—
But we all tho't it shortest,
  For train time came so soon.
With cheers and thanks to Miss Keith,
  We were hurried off and away,
But all had time to gather
  Rare mem'ries to stow away—

Everyone was happy,
  Everyone was gay,
For everyone knew and felt
  'Twas the end of a "Perfect Day."

SCHOOL NEWS

Red Cross Lecture

The School has recently had the privilege of listening to an interesting lecture by Miss Noyes on the activities of the Red Cross both at home and abroad.

Living in a land of numerous training schools, we were surprised to hear how comparatively few there are in many of the foreign countries, and consequently, the crying need for more trained nurses from every quarter of the globe, including, as well, our own country.

The first demand would seem to be for nurses trained in institutional management, and following in its train, graduate nurses specializing in public health, reconstruction and welfare, and all kind of public clinics as well as private duty.

They are urged to become members of the Red Cross. Trained nurses and those in training are the only members eligible to the society without any remunerative obligation. Miss Noyes also suggested that they would gladly welcome and give attention to the name of any graduate nurse who should like to volunteer for any particular kind of work in connection with the Association.

The Kitchenette is becoming more popular all the time. Rarely an evening passes without the aroma of fudge, coffee or some equally tempting odor, permeating through each transom along the hall, no matter how hard the occupant, who is not fortunate enough to participate, may try to ignore it.

Miss Maxwell was entertained at the first bridge party of the year. The guest of honor won the prize, it being a bit of real art, "a seashore flirt." Later, when refreshments were served, the new kitchenette came in for its due share of appreciation.

Miss Breadon and Miss Vickory entertained ten students from Teachers College, who are now living here and studying under Miss Young in preparation for teaching in training schools; the kitchenette ensuring the success of the party.

In May, the Henry Street nurses, Miss Wilson, Miss Patton, and Miss Carolina Smith gave a party, having as their guests of honor, Miss Jones and Miss Brooks, who are supervisors at Union Center. The course dinner was entirely prepared in the kitchenette and had for its crowning glory, a strawberry shortcake.

The nurses now on duty in Henry Street have found a still further use for our kitchen, and each night finds one of them preparing their next day's lunch.

The tennis tournament was given added zest this year by the gift from one of the students of a loving cup, to be handed down each year to the winner of the tournament; the first name on it being—Miss Florence West, '21, last year's champion.

A large number have entered the tournament this year and the preliminary rounds have just been completed. Some very close matches are booked for future rounds.

The never-to-be-forgotten Graduation Exercises of 1921 began as early as 7 A. M., when a stream of head nurses and officers of the school suddenly appeared at Prayers, and lent special dignity to the occasion. We did not sing "The Strife Is O'er, the Battle Won," but the happy expressions on the faces of the graduates showed that they felt it. Their brand new white shoes and stockings matched their shining faces.

Miss Maxwell lead prayers, in her own impressive way, and there was a lump in more than one throat when we realized that she would not be performing the same office for succeeding classes. Immediately after prayers, Miss Maxwell presented Miss Florence West, '21, last year's tennis champion, with a beautiful silver cup, a gift from one of the students.

At 9 o'clock th,e photographer was ready to do his worst. This ordeal over, the happy class was free to enjoy each other, shorten their uniforms, and watch the fascinating boxes of flowers pour in. By dinner time one end of the Dining Hall was a bower of beauty.

After dinner the Undergraduates marched to the Madison Avenue Church. The Graduating Class had no monopoly of thrills that night. The Probs. were thrilled because it was their first graduation and they were allowed the supreme privilege of sitting in the Gallery. The few Juniors present were thrilled because, by some good luck, they had escaped "relievnig," and the Intermediates were thrilled to the core, because they suddnly realized that theirs would be the next graduation.

That whole evening was one succession of thrills. We thrilled on entering the church to find the whole body of the church filled with splendid women, all wearing their pink roses, and looking so demure, followed by Miss Maxwell in gown and trencher, whose personality stood out even among those hundreds of women.

The greatest thrill of all came when Miss Maxwell was called forward to receive her Diploma, the wording of which was almost adequate to express our sentiments towards her, who has come to represent to us the embodiment of our highest ideals.

A moment later we all envied the Graduating Class their diplomas, because they were able to express their feelings by forming that most effective arch with their beribboned rolls—while we just stood and gasped our admiration, feeling that another year we might not be so fortunate.

The reception and dance were most interesting. The three proud doctors, each with a fiancee on his arm, seemed to be vieing with one another to see who could look the happiest.

The refreshments left nothing to be desired, both in quality and quantity. We actually failed to hear the time-worn slogan, "No 'seconds' allowed."

At midnight a tired but completely satisfied school of nurses climbed happily up to bed, thankful that some good angel had lead them to cast their lot in with the P. H. School.

The early spring will be remembered chiefly for its many rumors of resignations. Our thankfulness was very real when we found that in spite of so many rumors being true—Miss Young is still remaining with us, and we feel that we still have a friend in the T. S. O. who has our interests at heart.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER TO MISS MAXWELL

I have been meaning to tell you of Priscilla and my travels before this, but you know how letters just do not get written. Let me make a start now, though we have done and seen so much that I am sure one epistle will never hold it at all.

The New Orleans steamer from New York soon took us into tropical seas, where our drowsiness matched the lazy swish of the emerald waters. All day long we lay on the top deck, watching the dolphins play leapfrog over each other, and marvelling at their swimming prowess which enabled them hour after hour to keep just ahead of a swift modern steamer. Occasionally we exerted ourselves sufficiently to read to each other a story much in harmony with our mood—a fascinating tale of the South American jungle —W. H. Hudson's "Green Mansions." We scarcely moved a muscle from dawn till dark, and I am afraid we revelled in the fact.

On the boat we made one faithful and amusing friend— and only one—that was the table steward into whose care we were thrown. This individual, whom we inexplicably dubbed "Christ," assumed a peculiar air of responsibility for our welfare; when we were too lazy to attend stuffy meals, he made a tour of inspection until he ferreted us out in some obscure corner, for all the world like you on the trail of some specks of dirt— and finding us he would insist upon our consuming his delicacies, bread and cheese. Another trick of this friendly old soul was to pop his head suddenly into our deck porthole, be it day or night, and hold conversation with us, which we soon learned covered a great desire for a dean's prune or preserved fig, in exchange for which an inevitable weather-beaten apple rolled sheepishly in through the window.

But how can I ever compress the tale of our wanderings into "tablet" form if I ramble on this way. I shall have to skip our stay in New Orleans with a bare word or two, though it would take many words and a fluent pen to catch the spirit of that city and send it back to you.

I was surprised to find the Queen City of the South at first sight not actually beautiful, excessively flat, with almost a sense of bareness, so that I felt a shock of disappointment. As the days slipped by, however, and we came to know the old section, the winding streets of bygone French and Spanish days, and, in company with some of the old inhabitants, we saw the deserted iron balconies gay once more with flowered silks, with the witchery of smiles and the accidental dropping of a deep red rose into eager waiting hands below, we began to feel the fascination of this town. And then as we roamed through the beautiful hidden gardens at twilight, hearing tales of love, of war, and of great men from the lips of those who had lived through New Orleans' stirring times and had known and entertained the literary and social lights of their day—for as they tell you with pride famous men of all countries never failed to come to New Orleans at one time or another —why then the romance and charm of the sleepy city cast a veritable spell over us until the atmosphere became alive with oaths and laughter and the chattering of foreign tongues. I have rarely seen an American city which clings so lovingly to its old traditions and meets its past deeds from the relentless march of time and the ruthless hurrying by of modern feet. It was very sad in this particular— to see the "old regime" dying out, to hear the French language now only being spoken in a few high-ceilinged drawing rooms, and to see the ancient landmarks being obliterated. Why do you know, they told us that when the time-honored French Opera House burned a year or so ago, the city felt as if a personal friend had gone, and the older generation mourned that event, deeply realizing that it had dealt the death-blow to the New Orleans they knew and to all that name had stood for in history. Those who loved their city in its highest glory now stay in their gardens, reminiscing, and resignedly watch the tide sweep by on its way to the "movies" or the "toddle," for young New Orleans is as extremely modern and American as the mother city is foreign and full of old-world pleasures. Perhaps the contrast is more striking here than usual, for within the narrow, "thirsty" streets both orders still hold sway, and the new is having a harder time winning its "duel to the death" (a much heard-of phrase in New Orleans society not long ago) than is sometimes the case. Perhaps, too, we felt the conflict more strongly than most visitors, for we had the opportunity of knowing a delightful family where both points of view are housed under the same roof, and the same blossom scented garden, listening silently to the widely differing thoughts of two generations. If you ever want to spend some hours lost in Louisiana's early days, and wish to feel the subtle charm of New Orleans—the Beautfiul Woman, as she is pictured—read Miss Grace King's book, "New Orleans—The Place and the People." Perhaps you already have, and perhaps you know the city well. Anyway, my two words seem to have lengthened out considerably.

Our way lay next across Texas, of which there is not much to be said. Were I to revisit the Texas waste now after seeing other types of desert, I am afraid it would strike me as ultra bleak and somewhat dingy, though still and always majestic. But waking up in it unawares one morning, my first desert in spite of my travels, it gave me an unexpected and indescribable thrill. I felt utterly bewildered and awe-inspired by the limitless tracts of bare, brown land with black and purple mountains clearly etched in fantastic shapes against the hard, vivid blue of the sky. We—the people, the train, and the houses—dwindled to the proportion of mere atoms, which left us with a sense of unreality. We seemed to be no longer connected with anything in life, nothing counted, nothing existed, except the changing lights and shadows on the domineering, all-absorbing barren mountains and endless stretches.

After one or two stops in Texas, we found ourselves at last with my sister and her adorable youngster in New Mexico, and surrounded by a, to us, entirely new element—the Forest Service.

But I see that this letter is already disgracefully long, so I shall save our interesting New Mexico doings—seeing of Indian "Pueblos," camping in the "Cliff Dwelling Regions," and riding through stirrup-deep snow across the "Hemez Range"—until I next write you.

Greetings to you all, hard-working City Dwellers!

KATHERINE V. KEY.

EXTRACT FROM A LETTER DATED MAY, 1921

I am now living in Long Beach, Cal. We have a splendid hospital here and many good medical men and nurses from all over the country.

The Presbyterian Hospital is well known out here. It makes you very proud to say you are a graduate.

I am in love with Southern California, and I think I shall make this my permanent home. I am still doing private work and am kept busy all the time. I had a taste of being assistant superintendent in a small hospital in Redlands for a few months.

I hope you are in the best of health. I was surprised to hear of Miss Maxwell's "farewell" and am sure you will all miss her. She is certainly wonderful and I am glad I was able to have my training under her.

Very sincerely,

WINIFRED PURVIS.

EXTRACT OF LETTER FROM H. B. WRIGHT, CLASS OF '20

I have been for almost a month in a clinic with six doctors who are considered very excellent ones by everyone here. My work for the most part has been with the eye, ear, nose and throat specialist, and the experience, I think, will be very valuable. The clinic has been in operation only since the first of this year, and the experiment is being watched with much interest by many people here, and there seems to be no doubt but that it will prove very successful. The equipment, including laboratory, X-ray, pharmacy, etc., is very up-to-date and it really is a very interesting place.

My position, which was to be only temporary, has developed into a permanent one. However, I may leave the first of August to begin visiting nursing work with Palama Settlement here, as there will be a vacancy then.

You may be interested in the remark made by the doctor to whom I applied for a position in the clinic when I told him I was from Presbyterian. It was, "They don't turn out better ones anywhere!" I hope his opinion will not change after this experience.

EXTRACT FROM A LETTER FROM EDITH MILNOR, TUSCUMBIA, ALABAMA, DATED MAY, '21

I have been here since January and may stay until a year is up. I am the County Public Health Nurse and find the work very interesting and worth while. The county appropriated for the Health Unit in March, so the work is not as yet well organized. There are only two members on the unit, the health officer and I. To make it complete, we need an inspector and a secretary. We have examined somewhere over three thousand schoolchildren and find defects in about 85 per cent of them—usually enlarged tonsils and diseased eyes. Just now there is a great deal of smallpox in the county, so I am spending most of the time vaccinating.

This summer, I am going to do follow-up work on defective school children and have some classes in Home Nursing, First Aid, Child Hygiene, etc.

Elizabeth Curtis was the nurse in an adjoining county, but has been sent to do Anti T. B. work temporarily, near Birmingham.. She may come back here—we sincerely hope so.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER TO MISS MAXWELL, DATED APRIL, '21

As you probably know, this organization is quite young, but full of enthusiasm. Charlotte is a most progressive town and unusual in expressing its love for people, frankly. For instance, we have a Good Fellow Club, second to be organized in this country, I understand. It has 600 members, men of all walks of life, and their purpose in uniting is to help the poor of the city in the most constructive way.

Any nurse will find Charlotte a delightful place to live and will find our staff most congenial. We have eleven nurses, three doing school work, six engaged in general and industrial nursing, and one employed in the Venereal Disease clinic.

Our offices have recently been moved to a charming old house which served one time as a parsonage. Our Health Officer has remodeled and repainted the house. Many are surprised on entering to see the improvement.

Very truly yours,

NORMA LEITCH, '20.
Supervisor, Charlotte Co-operative Nursing Association.

EXTRACT OF LETTER TO MISS MAXWELL, DATED APRIL, 1921, FROM MISS MARY HOPKINS

President of the Stanford Clinics Auxiliary and San Francisco Maternity

Now we have Miss Wales among us, and she is starting to take up the various lines of the work, I feel I must write you to say how pleased we are with her personally, and that we have great hopes that she can make a very fine department of our Social Work.

It will take some time to get the various clinics and some new assistants up to their full efficiency in co-operation, but Miss Wales seems much interested and enthusiasm will carry her far even if the way is not always easy.

Meanwhile, we feel much indebted to you for your choice, and all are ready to aid her and enjoy her to the full.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER FROM MARGUERITE WALES, CLASS OF '20

This opportunity that you gave me out here is even more wonderful than I imagined and I do wish I might come in and tell you all about it to get your much-needed advice about many things. I find the organization of the hospital, medical school and clinics so different out here, at least at Stanford, that all plans of building up the social service department must be made with the history of the old organization clearly in mind. The Auxiliary is assigned a certain fund for free beds, etc., and all patients are admitted through the social service department. This brings a great deal of clerical work to this department, and one of my problems is how to relieve the situation so that we may have a more distinctly social service department.

The Dean of the Medical School, the Superintendent of the Hospital, and the Superintendent of the Training School, as well as the chiefs of the clinic, have been most helpful in discussing the problem, and they seem most eager to help in putting us on a better basis. Had you heard that Miss Hogue, the present Superintendent, is to be Dean of Women at the University in the fall? I believe they are still looking for someone to take her place, as she asked me if I knew of anyone. One of the doctors from the East said he wished they could get someone whom Miss Maxwell had trained. I suppose I shall always be bringing that question to you, Miss Maxwell, as I suppose all your graduates do.

I was glad to meet Miss Ash at the tea which was given for me at the Century Club by my Auxiliary shortly after I arrived. She has done such splendid work in building up the Telegraph Hill Settlement, and I was very glad to have your card to her. I have not yet had an opportunity to meet Miss Bauer. Dr. and Mrs. Lucas of the University of California were at the tea. I think you know Doctor Lucas, and I know Doctor Philip King Brown spoke of meeting you in Paris. I just wish you might have been there to see what a nice party you sent me to, with so many interesting people present. Of course, President and Mrs. Wilbur would always come at Mrs. Hopkins' bidding. Mr. Hopkins has been one of the trustees for years. He is tremendously interested in making the Auxiliary very efficient. And with all these splendid people putting so much faith in your recommendation, just see what a task and what a horrible responsibility I have to live up to. Since this is a branch or twig of your tree, I shall write you from time to time as the buds begin to leaf out.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER TO MISS MAXWELL, DATED APRIL, 1921

You have been on the list of people to whom I should write at once for so long that I cannot even look at the list any more! I have surely thought of you all many, many times, and always with gratitude for all that you gave me in training and influence at the Presbyterian.

My last trip to Paris brought me right back to the spirit of Presbyterian Hospital, for I met several people who knew you. There was Miss Margaret and Alice Parsons, who are members of the Madison Avenue Church. They spoke sweetly of you. They are doing splendid work at the Vic-sur-Aisne in Miss Anne Morgan's unit, and I had the good fortune to go out there for two days. It was an inspiration, certainly, for our work is along the same lines. As they had been in the field much longer and had a corps of experts in all sorts of branches, I gained a great deal which will help us here.

Then the nicest surprise was my meeting with Miss Elizabeth Russell at the American Hospital at Neuilly. She certainly proved a friend in need, for my co-worker became badly run down and a complete change under competent medical supervision seemed the only thing for her. The Neuilly Hospital was the only place, and yet we didn't know very much about it. But Miss Russell took my co-worker right "under her wing" and seemed to understand exactly what was needed. She certainly is a wonder, and I admire your choice of a nurse for that place.

Our work here is most interesting, though I am by no means specializing in nursing, particularly while Miss Burke is away. In fact, I am fast qualifying for an excellent Jack of all trades. When the house (or baraque, rather) was first opened last fall, we specialized in recreation for the children, letting them come to play the Victrola, or use the games and puzzles after school. I did the necessary nursing, and we did quite a bit of visiting to get acquainted.

Our Christmas tree was the big event of the winter. It was loads of fun to get it ready, of course, and still more to see everyone's enjoyment of it. One of our friends in Paris consented to come out as Pere Noel, and the children were indeed delighted. Most of them had never seen him before.

Our program is gradually growing now, so that practically every minute is taken up—if not in having classes or "playground" or gymnastics or dispensary (which is at any time because the people often come from other towns just whenever they can), then it is preparing for them or receiving callers, which must be done with French cordiality. We even keep a sort of hotel, because there are so many people coming to see the big French cemetrey near here and have no place to stay. We have several rooms available, fortunatly or unfortunately, as you look at it, for the doctor sent by the French government for this region settled in another town. Having the extreme age of thirty-three, he said he was too old for a wooden baraque like ours, and therefore went where he could have a stone house.

I shall some day add "Doctor" to my list of accomplishments. I am also Theatrical Manager and Costumer. We gave Cinderella in French for Mardi Gras, and the children really did very well.

We also keep house and have a dog, two rabbits, three chickens, no maid, and an undying devotion to this place.

I am coming home the first part of June for my sister's wedding, but am hoping with all my heart that nothing will interfere with my plan to return in July.

Miss Cordelia Jackson, whose address you gave me last summer, had unfortunately returned to America before I saw her.

REPORT OF THE ANNUAL MEETING OF THE ALUMNAE ASSOCIATION, MAY 20, 1921

Various reports of all committees were read and approved. There was nothing of great import except the report that Mrs. Ellen Emmet Rand had been selected as the artist for Miss Maxwell's portrait.

A few changes and amendments were made in the By-Laws, according to advice from the lawyer in charge of revising them.

Members of the graduating class were unanimously voted into the Alumnae Association.

Ballots were passed and voted on for officers for the coming year. Chairmen of committees were to be appointed by the Executive Committee.

A vote of thanks was given to the Arrangement Committee for the Luncheon.

It was moved and seconded that a committee be appointed by the chair to draw up a set of resolutions expressing the sentiment of the Alumnae Association concerning the faithful service of Mrs. Christie during the past twenty years. It was moved to put a copy of this resolution in the next "Quarterly."

A vote of thanks was given to the Committee on Resolutions for their part in the program for the afternoon.

It was moved and seconded that a letter of recognition be sent to the Board of Managers for the message brought to Miss Maxwell through Mr. Sloane on Commencement night, and also that copies should be sent of any other resolutions concerning this particular event.

Miss Hill was Night Superintendent and Matron in the Hall for a number of years. She will be gratefully remembered by the students in the school at that time. Miss Hill was a chief nurse during the war in this country and remained in the service after peace was declared.

On August 12, Pauline Longhurst Dolliver, at Phillip's House, a private department of Massachusetts General Hospital, after three months of nobly borne suffering caused by inoperable abdominal carcinoma. Born in Auburndale, Mass., in 1862, she was graduated from Massachusetts General Hospital School for Nurses in 1889. After several years in head nurse positions at Massachusetts General and St. Luke's, New York, and in private duty nursing, she became assistant to Miss Maxwell at the Presbyterian, New York. In 1910 Miss Dolliver returned to New York to organize the Central Directory for Nurses, a position she resigned in 1914 to accept the post she occupied at the time of her death, that of assistant to the resident physcian of Massachusetts General Hospital in charge of Phillip's House.—American Journal of Nursing, September, 1921.

HEAD OF PHILLIP'S HOUSE

Miss Pauline Longhurst Dolliver Had Long Been Prominent in Her Profession in New York and Boston

Miss Pauline Longhurst Dolliver, assistant to the resident physician of the Massachusetts General Hospital and in charge of Phillip's House, a private ward of that institution, died at the hospital on Wednesday, after an illness of nearly three months' duration. She was born in Auburndale on January 10, 1862, the daughter of Captain James M. and Mary Longhurst Dolliver, the former a Boston steamship pilot, who had received two gold medals, one from Queen Victoria and the other from the Boston Humane Society, for the rescue of persons from shipwrecks.

Miss Dolliver was educated in the public schools of West Newton and was graduated from the Massachusetts General Hospital Training School for Nurses in the class of 1889, remaining at the hospital for one year as head nurse of the surgical ward. Early in 1890, Miss Dolliver went to the State of New York, and while there was head nurse of St. Luke's Hospital in New York City and also at St. Luke's Hospital in Utica, N. Y. She later did private nursing for some three years, one year of which was spent with a patient in European travel.

Upon her return to New York City, Miss Dolliver attended the School of Philanthropy at Columbia University. Returning to institutional work in 1897, she became the assistant to the superintendent of nurses, Miss Anna C. Maxwell, at the Presbyterian Hospital in New York. In 1899 Miss Dolliver resigned from that hospital and accepted the position of superintendent of the Training School for Nurses at the Massachusetts General Hospital, which position she held until 1909.

In 1910 Miss Dolliver again went to New York City and organized the Central Directory for Nurses, holding the position of registrar until 1914, at which time she returned to her home in his city. In January, 1917, she was appointed to the position which she held at the time of her death.

Miss Dolliver was a member of the Guild of St. Barnabas for Nurses, at the Cathedral Church of St. Paul, the Nurses' Alumnae Association of Massachusetts General Hospital, the Massachusetts State Nurses' Association, the American Nurses' Association and the National League of Nursing Education.—Boston Transcript, August 12, 1921.

A LETTER TO MISS MAXWELL

Dear Miss Maxwell:

The news of your resignation from the directorship of the Presbyterian Hospital Training School for Nurses impels us to express to you something of our regret for your departure and of our appreciation of your work. The Presbyterian Hospital has co-operated with Henry Street for many years generously and efficiently with the friendliest of relations on both sides, and we have drawn many of our nurses from the ranks of those who have had the privilege of being trained by you. We feel that the tie that binds us professionally is very close, and we are deeply sorry to lose officially one whose friendship has been a continual source of encouragement and inspiration.

Moreover, apart from our sense of professional loss, we want to indicate our appreciation not only of your unceasing vigilance in perfecting the art and raising the standards of nursing, but also our vivid impression of your rare personality and presence, not unremindful of that of Florence Nightingale, with a determination and accomplishment second perhaps only to hers. Although, Miss Maxwell, as people and friends, we are deeply sorry that you are withdrawing from the profession, as nurses, we have the comfort of knowing that we can never lose your work, for it is a monument of bronze.

We realize that almost no one has given to nursing so many years of extraordinary hard work and undeviating standards, keeping unimpaired her energies and powers, and we want to unite in congratulating you on your future as well as your past accomplishment and the wishing only that your years of leisure may be as full, satisfactory, and far reaching as your years of labor.

Faithfully yours,
THE HENRY STREET NURSES.

A BORD de "SAVOIE"

July 21, 1921.

My Dear Miss Brackett:

The wonderful roses which you sent to cheer me on the voyage, were with me for five days, and even then it was with regreat I consigned them to a watery grave. Thank you, and through you, the Alumnae of our School.

You are an important body of women, banded together to aid the School of Nursing and keep faith with the public, to sustain all that is of value in the present system and to further the educational standards of nurses in our States and country.

I do not need at this late date to adjure you to hold the torch high to keep the faith!

With renewed feelings of love and admiration for the seven hundred and five splendid women it has been my privilege to help in meeting the responsibilities of Life! Believe me,

Sincerely yours,

ANNA C. MAXWELL.

A steamer letter was sent to Miss Maxwell from different departments of the Hospital (each department taking a day). Below find one from head nurses and one arranged by Miss Paul, Miss Barrows and Miss Key (Miss Key was a patient at P. H.).

FROM THE HEAD NURSES

Oh, wonderful tide, rolling out to the sea,
Will you carry some messages, please, for me
To a ship that is nine days out they say,
And is carrying our Lady Maxwell away?
She has only gone for a change and rest—
To the lands oversea she's a welcome guest.
They love her well, for they knew her before
Through her masterful work in the great World War!
I'm not very big and my voice is so small
I was 'fraid that I'd never reach her at all.
But since you, good tide, have come to my aid,
I'm sure I can keep every promise I made.
The head nurses sent me and loaded me well
With wishes and love-thoughts and good things to tell.
"We miss her so much and want her to know
Our good will is with her where'er she may go."
"We'll stand by the School and uphold everything
That she by her life and her teachings did bring."
And then "We'll be looking with joy to the fall
When she will be back and can be near us all.",
I'm 'fraid I'm forgeting some messages though,
For there were so many to send her, and so
I guess that I'd better just leave it to you,
Oh, tide and the waves, to tell her "how true
She has been to us all," and "we will not forget
The principles taught and examples she set."
"Just tell her we love her, for that includes all
We could think, wish, or ask, and will always recall
To her mind that she lives in the heart of each one,
And through us she'll have a large part in what's done
To alleviate suffering, and be a good 'neighbor,'
To give of our heart as well as our labor."
Go quickly, good tide, tell her all this—and then Bring her back in the fall—"We must have her again!
We won't give her up—this is only a 'loan'
For always and always, Miss Maxwell's our own!"

July, 1921.

THE EIGHTH DAY

The dawning of the Eighth Day,
  What pleasures will it bring?
As far and farther yet you sail
  From toil and everything.

The shores of France now soon you'll see,
  Its sun and warmth and flowers
Are waiting near at hand to show
  The charm of nature's powers.

Excitement stirs the drowsy air,
  The wandering mind returns
From where it dwelt the voyage long,
  And with new thoughts it burns.

So long you've left "P. H." behind,
  The bond seems severed quite,
And all those busy working days
  Seem vanished out of sight.

But 'tis not so: the phrase "Eighth day"
  Has meaning for us too.
Appendix stitches then come out
  Amidst a great to-do!

Men think they throw the thread away,
  But we know otherwise.
Each stitch becomes a mighty link
  To strengthen olden ties.

So think not you can from us go.
  We'll bind you to our side—
In every daily task we do
  Your spirit shall abide.

Then on this eighth day of your trip
  Let's keep it in our minds
That every little P. H. stitch
  Becomes a tie that binds!

Dear Miss Brackett:

May I, through you, thank the Alumnae Association of the School of Nursing for their Resolutions passed upon my resignation from the Hospital, and for their generous gift?

My work and association with the Alumnae has always been a pleasure, and I only wish I were worthy of the sentiments so beautifully and kindly expressed in the Resolutions.

Though the parting of the ways, to a certain extent, has come I shall always be grateful for the opportunities I have had in being a member of this Alumnae and a graduate of this School, and of Miss Maxwell, and I shall look forward in the future in doing my share in upholding the high standards of each.

With kindest of greetings to each member of the Association, believe me,

Yours very sincerely,

JANET B. CHRISTIE.

Among the papers Miss Maxwell wished always to be kept in the School office, this interesting letter was noticed:

KENARDEN LODGE
Bar Harbor, Maine

August 23, 1904.

My Dear Miss Newman:

Your kind letter of the 18th inst. expressing in behalf of yourself and head nurses of the Presbyterian Hospital your appreciation of the comforts you enjoy in the new Nurses' Dwelling, I duly received and I assure you it is very gratifying to me to know that they all enjoy their new home which I intended they should have had years ago but was prevented building it owing to difficulties which neither I nor the Managers of the Hospital could either foresee or control.

When the question came up about a name for the building I finally concluded that it should be called the "Florence Nightingale Hall" as I believed that name would as nearly as possible express the character of the building and the purpose to which it was to be devoted. I had and still have a great reluctance to have that building or any other named after me as it might give the impression that I had erected it for the purpose of magnifying myself, which I have certainly not wished to do, and the object in my mind in all such cases is simply to honor the Master by doing our duty and not to have it proclaimed ostentatiously before our fellow men. While I appreciate the kindly feeling of yourself and all the nurses, you must excuse me from giving my consent to having the building called by my name.

I appreciate the desire of both the graduates and the undergraduates to be allowed to give something for the adornment of the Hall, but I must ask you and them to be kind enough to let this matter rest until I return to New York, which I hope to do early in October. You are probably aware that just about the time the building was completed, I had a severe attack of sickness which prevented my giving any personal attention either to the completion of the building or to its furnishings, but I did intend and supposed that the directions I had given had resulted in everything being so complete as to make the nurses quite comfortable, and when I return I will take pleasure in going through the building and seeing whether and, if so, to what extent any improvements in furniture or otherwise can be made and I will endeavor to meet the views of both the managers of the Hospital and the nurses. I confess I do not like the idea of the nurses with (as I believe in most cases), their limited means, taxing themselves to do anything for the furnishing of the building, especially as most of them are only there for a short time and others will be coming in year by year to enjoy the benefits of what they might have done.

Again thanking you for your very kind letter and begging you to wait patiently until I return to New York, I remain, with kindest regards to you and all the nurses,

Yours very ruly,
(Signed) JOHN S. KENNEDY.

TWO YEARS' NURSING EXPERIENCES WITH THE THE NEAR EAST RELIEF IN TURKEY

A nurse can probably find no place in the world where her services are more needed than in the interior of Turkey. In March, 1919, I arrived in Constantinople with a large party of other Near East Relief workers. After doing guard duty in the Derindjé warehouses for a few weeks, I was sent to Smyrna, and in May to Cesarea.

The Beginning of a Hospital

Cesarea is a dirty, squatty, crooked little stone city, 120 miles from a railroad. The Near East Relief Station, however, was at Talas, pleasantly situated on a hill six miles from Cesarea. A doctor had preceded Miss Easton and me and had already started clinics. Our first duty was to clean up the hospital which had been occupied by soldiers during the war period. It was a fine stone building, three stories high, holding sixty beds. Cleaning was not so difficult but before the beds were up, the bedbugs appeared. For several days we had women continually walking around picking up the insects and putting them into pans of water while the medical staff squirted kerosene or bichloride into the cracks.

Gradually our supplies came in, and the hospital was started with a fine new equipment. Patients came quickly. Most of them were surgical and their conditions extreme. There were many bad chronic infections. One young man came in with a large bullet hole in his thigh. It was nearly a week old and for several days had been stuffed with scrambled eggs. Many cases came in ox carts from surrounding villages, riding thus sick or wounded for a day or two. They were certaintly most grateful for the clean soft bed that awaited them.

I was the anaesthetist and had charge of the wards. I also taught the native assistants to give ether and chloroform. We tried always to teach the native nurses our duties so that some day they would be capable of taking our places. We had four English-speaking nurses, five uneducated nurses, and two orderlies. Only two of the nurses had had hospital experience. Miss Easton and I planned the routine work as nearly as possible like that of the Presbyterian Hospital, New York, where we had received our training. Our first Moslem patient was a small beggar girl, Fatima, picked up in a half-starved condition on the street. She was covered with rags, scabies, lice, favus and sores.

For several months we were without a doctor, but found great help in our medical books. At one time the government ordered our hospital closed because we had no doctor. We then hired a native Greek doctor in order to keep open. He had the true spirit of a doctor and often showed good judgment but many strange methods. He usually respected our opinions but one day I came into the ward to find he had made many cuts over the back of a bad eye case and ordered cupping. His idea was to take the inflamation from the eyes by bleeding the patient. I had treated the eyes for nearly two months with no improvement. As it happened, a few days after the cupping, the eyes began to improve and grew steadily better. The doctor looked very wise and what could I say! For necessary operations, we called in a Turkish surgeon—not what you'd call a surgeon in America.

In September, 1920, the hospital roof caught fire from a defective chimney, and the whole building burned. It was well equipped with steam sterilizers, an X-Ray machine, and a steam laundry, and it was of course a great loss. All of the patients, and three-quarters of the equipment were saved, the X-Ray machine included. No one could control the crowds which gathered, and when the building fell five were killed and eight badly burned. A new hospital was immediately set up in a nearby building. This was not very satisfactory and held only 20 beds. We could admit no one but the orphans from our orphanages and our helpers. The burn cases were a great care and we had no vaseline or any kind of ointment base. Carbolized oleomargerine did not prove a bad substitute however. All the burn cases recovered without bad permanent injuries.

Treating Eye Diseases

One bad problem was the large number of cases of conjunctivitis and trachoma among the orphans. In Talas there were six hundred orphans, in Cesarea about five hundred, and in Zindjirderé four hundred and many of these had bad cases of eye trouble. The disease spread rapidly and was difficult to control. After the hospital burned, I gave practically my whole time to eyes, running ears, and favus heads. Dr. Gannaway, the American doctor, who was sent during 1920 to take charge of the hospital, trained native helpers in eye treatments and started clinics in the three orphanages mentioned above. He operated on 227 trachoma cases before he left in November. To segregate all the sore eyes was difficult as there were many cases of scabies to be isolated, favus which ought to be, as well as tuberculosis and other diseases, and some of the children had two or more of these ailments. We had one separate house for the most advanced eye cases which required treatment with hot or cold compresses continually. The children had their own towels and washed in running water.

The conjunctivitis was very obstinate. The children came as often as necessary to the clinic, and a card with the name and treatment for each was kept in the clinic room so that treatments could be checked. Occasionally I examined the schools and orphanages to be sure no new cases had developed which were not reported. Until October, 1920, I do not remember the number of cases, but in October there were still 320 treatments being given each day. By March these treatments had decreased to 95, all of which were trachoma. There were six conjunctivitis cases in the hospital. Outside patients who desired came to these clinics. Eye diseases are so numerous that there is urgent need of an eye specialist in every town in the interior.

I have no doubt there were many, many more cases of trachoma which I failed to recognize.

Favus Treatments

The favus among the orphans is even more discouraging. The doctors tried X-Ray treatment on two cases but without success. We had not the proper materials for measuring the dose given. For a long time, I tried the ointments recommended in the books on skin diseases but with no permanent cures. Then Miss Easton and I tried tar caps, pulling them off under anaethesia. This was the native method of treating the disease and certainly one way of pulling out the hair. We found that the sores became badly infected under the caps and very little of the hair came out. As a last resort, a few weeks before I came away, we decided to hire two native experts on tar caps. They had made some cures in the Cesarea orphanage but were two heartless women. Each week they came and pulled off the caps with no anaesthesia, scrubbed the heads and applied new tar caps. They disregarded the infections which seemed to heal up somehow, and claimed their cures were due to some secret medicine which they put in the tar together with the occasional application of a stewed apricot poultice. The real value of their treatment was the fact that they had the knack of pulling most of the hair out with the cap. The hair was shaved before the cap was applied. After a cure, the hair grew in naturally again except where the disease had entirely killed it. Sometimes as many as fifteen or twenty caps are necessary, and it is a harsh treatment which most people could not undertake. The children are grateful, however, and they forget the treatment quickly.

To be sure, one may not be able to do the best that should be done for these people. However any one having the advantages of an American training can render services in the interior of Turkey which no native can render, and the gratitude of the people makes the work a pleasure.

RACHEL KING.

Honolulu, May 25, 1921.

My Dear Miss Young:

I am enclosing a check for fifteen dollars for my Alumnae Association dues for this year. I feel so far away from New York and Presbyterian out here that even a reminder of dues is quite welcome.

Not long ago I wrote Miss Maxwell about the position I had taken in a clinic here in Honolulu. Very recently a vacancy has occurred in the Palama Settlement nursing staff so I am to begin that work June first, and expect to enjoy it very much. The nurse in each district has her own small clinic, with school and home visiting in addition, so there is plenty of variety in the work.

This is a beautiful spot to live and work in and we were so fortunate in finding such a comfortable and attractive little house right on the sea that plans for leaving Honolulu are far in the future. It is hard to think of Presbyterian without Miss Maxwell, but she surely does deserve a long rest. The only possible solution for the problem is for Miss Young to take her place.

Very sincerely,

HARRIET B. WRIGHT.

Opelousas, La.

My Dear Miss Maxwell:

It is with the greatest disappointment I find I shall have to miss the graduation this year and by such a narrow margin. Our schools close down on the twentieth and I expect to leave very shortly after that date for home!!!

As you see from the enclosed clippings I won out, or as I should say "they," for it was only through the great kindness and loyalty and the very splendid fight my friends put up that the work was continued.

I have had some very interesting experiences this winter, but I have enjoyed myself immensely.

Very cordially yours,

DOROTHY STOCKTON.

May 9, 1921.

Dear Miss Maxwell:

I have been meaning to write to you for so long. You have no idea how often I (like all the rest of your flock) think "what would Miss Maxwell say to that."

In 1918, after I had seen you, I stayed on at my French hospital at St. Cloud until just a few days before the armistice when I was ignominously sent away to rest! The hospital was turned into a "grippe hospital" in September, 1918, and we had to work night and day—but we only lost one officer—we had no soldiers. Our garden was honored by a bomb during one of the last German air raids on Paris.

I was obliged to rest until January, 1919! Then I did four months' work at the American canteens at Gare d'Austerlitz and Gare d'Orsay. That was most interesting. All the dear American boys were passing through Paris on their way home and it was such joy to feed them! How they did love Mary Elizabeth's doughnuts!

In May, 1919, I went off to the devastated regions—Chauny in the Aisne—this time with the French again. We stayed there for six months until there were no more people living in cellars and until all had the absolute necessities of life. Then my "chief," Mme. Halphen—a very rich French woman—mother-in-law of Edward De Rothschild—asked me if I would take a village for the winter. I simply jumped at that and a little dispensary (with rooms for me) was built, after my plans and under my eye, by German prisoners. We used the burned and broken bricks from the ruins to build with but the result was delightful. In the morning I did general dispensary work and made up drugs—for there was neither druggist nor doctor. In the afternoon I went off on my visits—I had a cart and pony. You see I had in a modest way to act the country doctor, for I could never get one in less than 24 hours time. I also had to make lists of what all these poor people needed. These lists were sent to Mme. Halphen who immediately filled them out and sent me everything I asked for. And very rapidly—for her son-in-law is President of the Chemin de Fer du blard. I think that no other woman in the devastated region worked under such pleasant conditions for I was absolutely free—under control of no society of any kind—absolutely unhampered. Mme. Halphen paid all expenses but only came to Suiceny twice during my stay there. I don't think I have ever been so happy in my life. I've never felt so useful. Two people had come back to the village when I went there—when I left there were 1,300.

Nursing was really a small part of the work. I helped make out the papers for "Dommages de Guerre" and got a certain number of advances—I taught the catechism regularly to the children (Catholic naturally) and went to Mass because I found that the only villages that were really being reconstructed were those where village life centered around church and cure. On the other hand, I once stole four tons of coal. You see we had not had any at all and it was January. The major and I had been "taking steps" with the proper authorities for months—no result. So one day I borrowed a camion and went off with two devoted poilus and my German "orderly" who was really Polish and very useful—and filled that camion at an abandoned German camp in the forest of St. Gobain. It was to heat the school barracks which had just been finished. Later I told the colonel and he gasped and swallowed and felt of his collar —but that was all.

In the spring the doctor and the druggist came back and Mme. Halphen felt that there was no need of continuing the work after June—that was a blow. I just loved my people and hated to leave them.

I spent July resting at Mme. Halphen's chateau, Le Monastere at Ville d'Avray. August and September I had the boys over from England and we had a beautiful time in Normandy—near Decuville.

Then at Mme. Halphen's advice I came here to see Dr. Bruno about some other work—for I wanted to do something. While I was waiting for him, Dr. Williams came along. I had not seen him since the day of my wedding in 1901 and had never even heard of him. Naturally I fell upon his neck and took much of his valuable time. He introduced me to Miss Crowell and here I am—her "assistant for the schools," I mean for the training schools in the different cities—there are seven.

Of course we lived in France for ten years and nearly all my war work was with French—so at first being with an American organization—gave me somewhat the sensation of sitting on a bunch of fire-crackers. But now, when Miss Crowell says to me at 3 P. M., "Mrs. Erdal, will you go to Marseilles tomorrow morning?" I find it merely pleasantly exhilarating.

Dr. Williams did an awful thing this spring. He took advantage of Mrs. Williams' absence to shave his moustache!! The result was awful beyond words—I asked him what he thought you would say and he looked decidedly guilty. He let it grow at once, but not until Miss Crowell had seen that he was photographed and laying a cornerstone at Bordeaux too.

Seriously, I find the work most interesting, but oh, how difficult. I never visit a hospital without thinking of you and of the Presbyterian and how often I've wished to be able to talk to you for just a half hour—to get your advice when I've been in a tight place.

Lately I've had the pleasure of showing a number of Paris hospitals and invitations to three American Red Cross Scholarship nurses—one of them was Miss Simons, a Presbyterian graduate—such a nice girl. We so thoroughly enjoyed talking Presbyterian.

Dr. Soper has just been in and asked me to send you his love. And will you please give mine, dear Miss Maxwell, to Miss Stone and Mrs. Christie. I so often think of them, but life goes so fast. And most of my writing is done to Edward and Buddie who are at school in England. Seventeen and fifteen, think of it.

With every good wish and always in the same spirit of affectionate devotion.

Sincerely yours,

ASTRID ERDAL.

Extract From Letter

In spite of the fact that we have two more American nurses (now three of us in all) than when I first came, we are just as busy as we can be. Having more nurses does not mean less work, but simply better work.

We have recently joined a nursing association which is composed of six Mission Hospitals. A Board of Examiners is appointed from these hospitals and our nurses all have to take this examination.

We are making many new plans for the betterment of our Training School, and I hope part of them at least may materialize. Almost the entire nursing end of the work needs to be revised, but I did not feel able to undertake it alone. However, now that we are three, we feel justified in undertaking a lot of changes. Now I find myself wishing that I could remember all the blank forms for all sorts of things which we used in the P. H., for they had all been carefully devised, and all these things go to make for efficiency. But I can not recall all of them, and so I'm wondering if I may trouble you to send me some blank forms.

I know I am asking no small favor, but I trust that you will not mind. We feel that we are laying foundations here, and we are so anxious to make them worth while, so that others in years to come may continue the structure.

Nursing in India is still in the pioneer stage, so I especially appreciated Miss Maxwell's paper in the American Journal of Nursing. It is also very interesting to read of present-day problems at home. We have some of the same even here.

I was so surprised and sorry to hear of Miss Maxwell's resignation. I wonder who her successor will be. Hers was no small task, but how splendidly she performed it! Would that I might accomplish even a small part of what she has in the nursing world! She has set the highest of ideals for a great many nurses. I hope we may all prove true to her and to her ideals, and pass them on to others.

If Miss Maxwell is still with you, please give her my kindest regards. I want to write to her soon.

Of course I realize that we cannot use the P. H. forms exactly as they are, but I think we can adapt some of them to our use.

Thanking you in advance for all this trouble that this letter is bringing to you, and with best wishes to you and any other of my old friends.

Sincerely yours,

HELEN McC. KENDALL.

To All Chairman, Local Committees.

My Dear Miss Evans:

Again we are calling for volunteers. The Army, Navy and United States Public Health Service are in need of additional nurses for the care of disabled ex-service men. All new enrollments are sent a special letter when badge and appointment card are issued, calling their attention to the situation.

The Division Directors of Nursing are submitting to you a plan which calls for the circulation of the enrollments under your committee. A big task, but one which I know you will attempt in the same fearless manner as characterized your work during the war. The eyes of the world are fixed on the ex-service man, all types of people are needed to adjust his relationships. If he needs nursing, nurses are the ones who should assume this responsibility. The Red Cross Nursing Service is the reserve of the Army and Navy and may be called upon in any great emergency. The United States Public Health Hospital Service has also asked for our assistance. The emergency is here. Let me urge your prompt assistance with the plan submitted by the Division Directors.

Thanking you, I am,

Sincerely yours,

CLARA D. NOYES,

Chairman National Committee on Red Cross Nursing Service. 14030.

A request from Dr. Dorman of Turkey, who is known to many of our graduates.

Three nurses are needed to go out this fall as head nurses in the pavilions of the Hospital of the American University of Beirut, Syria. Salary $600 a year, with board and lodging, and traveling expenses both ways. The American Hospital is conducted in connection with the Medical School of the university and an important part of the head nurses' work would be the training of the native nurses.

Those interested in further information on the subject are requested to communicate with A. U. Staub, Executive Secreary, Room 505, 18 East 41st St.

In the April number of the "Quarterly" was published an article "On the Salaries of Private Duty Nurses," by One of Them. There were many comments both for and against the article. One letter was received with a request for its publication in the July number of the "Quarterly." Unfortunately there was not room in the July number, so its publication had to be postponed until October.

It seems as though the ruthless overhauling given the author by G. O. B. was most unjust and uncalled for.

In the first place the article was written by a well-known member of the Alumnae Association and one much admired and liked not only by her Association but by her patients. She is one of the last people in the world one would ever consider selfish.

To the Editor of the Quarterly:

When I first read in the April "Quarterly" the article "On Salaries of Private Duty Nurses," by One of Them, I resented it and wished to answer it at once. As it is I have let several weeks go by with ample time to count one hundred. In that time I have been a patient myself and received attention from several nurses. Now having recovered and re-read the article, I feel even more than before that I must answer it. It is unfair to both nurses and patients. I have been both as I am a P. H. graduate and for the past fifteen years have had nurses in my house on an average of twice a year. Of course I had had splendid nurses from P. H., but I have also had excellent nurses from up State and Middle West hospitals, in spite of the disparaging remarks in the article about small hospitals. My chief objection to the article is that the writer is wholly and supremely selfish and awfully sorry for herself. I am sure that her patients who would "express appreciation by adding to the amount charged" would be rare indeed. She reminds me of a nurse I had who was out every afternoon and evening she was with me. I never disturbed her night's rest but once when one of the children had a nose bleed. When my husband asked her for her bill on leaving she said, "I am not charging you for the care I gave your daughter but only for Mrs. B." I would not have her again at any price. As a pleasant contrast I like to remember the nurse who offered to tie my little girl's hair bows and who called the children in to see me now and then or played games with them when they were tired of the maids. She would never have written, "The whole attitude of patients to this question is a very erratic and unintelligent one and should not be made a factor in any attempted settlement of it—it must be solved by the nurses themselves." It must be, but with an entirely different attitude. "Utter lack of understanding of the difficulties of the nurse's work" may not be uncommon among patients—but an utter lack of understanding of the difficulty of the patient in giving herself and her household over to a nurse is not at all uncommon among nurses.

This is Alumnae Day. I have been thinking of Miss Maxwell's resignation and of all for which she has stood all these years. No one has ever been a greater worker for nurses and their rights. No one has secured for them so many rights and privileges. I would not take from them one jot or one tittle. But Miss Maxwell taught first and always the rights of the individual patient! We know that real nurses give us more than value received because they give us the little things which money cannot buy. I object to the profession losing its ethics and becoming "Bedroom Bolshevics." One other objection and I am through. Miss Maxwell would never ridicule a patient for the paying of $50 for the restoration of an antique table any more than she would consider it a waste of money to own a beautiful painting or to listen to good music. This interest in art and culture was one of Miss Maxwell's methods of making her training school a privilege as well as a profession.

At the end of this article I am criticizing—the writer says "let us not be mercenary, let us be laborers worthy of our hire." It sounds a bit like a guilty conscience after what preceded.

Over self-pity never brings anything either to a patient or a nurse. As she will cheer up and will start in to make others happy and comfortable her bank account will start growing and she will have no time to call other people names or write pessimistic articles.

CALENDAR

The Executive Committee meets the first Monday of every month.

The quarterly meeting will be held Thursday evening, November 17th, at 8 P. M., in Florence Nightingale Hall.

SCHOOL NOTES

Madeline Waterbury, '22, was married on August 18th to Mr. Spencer J. Whitaker, Jr., at Skaneateles, N. Y. She is living at the Normandie, Rochester, N. Y.

Lucy Bruggerhof, '22, left the training school on September 1st. She will be married to Mr. Morris Pierson of Stamford, Conn., in December.

This fall the School is unusually lucky. Thirty-seven entered the probationary class on September 7th. Their new home is at 47 East 66th Street.

We are now having regular three to eleven nurses on the wards. The new schedule is apparently much more satisfactory than the old "relieving" system.

A life-size photograph of Miss Maxwell has been hung in the Assembly Hall.

The east corridor leading from the front entrance to the surgical side is being made into new quarters for the record room. The offices of the attending surgeons will be moved from the private corridor to the old record rooms on the second floor.

Another floor is being added to the Isolation Pavilion. The new rooms will be occupied by the Metabolism Department.

Margaret McCurdie, '22, has returned to the School after an eight months' absence on account of illness.

Gladys Wilson, '22, has returned to the School after several months' absence on account of illness.

EXTRACT OF LETTER TO MISS YOUNG

Dear Miss Young:

The news of your new work at the P. H. was eagerly welcomed. It is splendid! I do hope you will be very happy. The new students, I am sure, will find in Miss Young the same inspiration that we old students found.

Our group of Presbyterian graduates in China has grown a bit this autumn. We are so delighted to have both Helen Schurman and Gertrude Banfield in Peking.

This is a gala occasion in Peking, for this week makes the formal opening of the Rockefeller Hospital here.

We have a great many eminent scientists, and many other celebrities here for the occasion. The clinics, lectures and addresses have been most interesting. This afternoon the dedication exercises were celebrated. There were nearly two hundred in the academic procession—a thrilling array of gowns and hoods of every degree, representing every large college in the world. It is a great disappointment that Miss Maxwell was not with us—had hoped her "spree" might lead her to China. How she would enjoy these days —and how she would love the beauty of our new hospitals!

REPORT OF DELEGATES

The Annual Meeting of the New York State Organizations of Nurses was held at Hotel Utica, Utica, N. Y., October 25, 26, 27, 1921.

There were between 300 and 400 nurses present at each meeting.

October 25 (Tuesday) was taken up with the program of the New York State League of Nursing Education and the New York State Organization for Public Health Nursing. In the evening a joint session was held with a very interesting program. Special mention might be made of the addresses by Miss Goodrich, Miss Hillard, and Miss Burgess.

October 26 and 27 (Wednesday and Thursday) were assigned to the New York State Nurses' Association.

On Wednesday morning the most interesting committee report read was that of the Legislation, by Anna L. Hansen, chairman. She described in detail the injunction of the Chatauqua Correspondence School, sent by Mr. Bayley to Miss Gilman and Miss Burgess of the New York State Nurses' Association, to prevent the enforcement of the New York State Nurse Practice Act.

In the paper on ethics, a plea was made for the instruction of student nurses in the different activities of the nurses' associations.

Elizabeth Miller, superintendent of the Contagious Hospital in Philadelphia, made a strong appeal for more contagious work in the school program. The public health nurses voiced the same sentiments. The minimum of 75 hours theory and instruction was asked.

The Chair very strongly urged more interest in the American Journal of Nursing. This is necessary, both from a professional standpoint and from a financial standpoint, as the Journal is in great need of more subscriptions and more advertising.

The alumnae associations were especially interested in Miss Jessie Murdock's paper on the Responsibilities of Alumnae Associations for the Ethics of the Profession. All felt that the associations had a definite influence on the ethics of both the graduates and the school.

Respectfully submitted,

CHRISTMAS CAROLS IN THE WARDS

Sixty nurses and a handful of very lusty doctors carolled through the hospital with unusual enthusiasm and harmony this year. All thanks are due to Mr. Ernest Carter, who trained the chorus and led the singing in the wards. The singers carried candles and the procession was most effective in the dim light of the wards.

CHRISTMAS IN THE RESIDENCE

Upon the stillness of the early Christmas morning came the sound of carolling voices. The Seniors had arisen to keep up the old custom and start this day of happiness aright by awakening the house to the tune of "Merry Christmas" songs.

TO MY SISTERS

My dear, dear friends, may I write to you,
The "Damns if you don't" and the "Damns if you do,"
And venture to ask just what you desire
In your "Official Organ"—which seems to inspire
Greed for another page or two
Of gossip and subjects I ought to taboo?
Or else you're in arms because someone's leg
Has been a bit pulled and you prithee and beg
That the printer's large and enormous fee
Be cut to the size of an under-fed flea!
So now I ask you as fem to fem,
"Just what in Hell can I do under them
Conditions which seem to be quite in keeping
With the atmosphere of an Alumnae meeting?"
Thanks I'm not out for, or co-operation—
And amusement's been mine in its publication—
Those things don't grow in Alumnae life
Which is curtailed and stunted by feminine strife.
Perhaps you are craving Alumnae news,
And if such is the case, please cease to abuse
The editor, whose own imagination
Is taxed to the limit of exasperation.
Has ever a one in your talented bunch,
With exception most rare, ever offered a hunch
To help fill the pages of the "Quarterly Strife",
To give it some punch and a wee bit of life?
You not only don't offer, but simply refuse
To write a few columns or pages of news.
The excuse is the same: "I haven't the time,"
Or, "That sort of thing is not in my line."
The one long suit of which you can boast
Is to growl and kick, or sit back and roast
The feeble attempts of the active few
To do those things which you ought to do.
From this spineless crowd, I do not exclude
My own blank slate or my wrangling feud.
When I took your thankless editor's chair,
It was going a-begging for want of an heir.
This sort of thing is not in my line,
And bridge interferes with all my spare time.
Spelling! My word! I can't spell my own name,
"Chrises" and "Christs" are one and the same:
My reading of proof is a farcical bluff

And ends in your all being up in a huff.
And spelling is not my one limitation:
My efforts with pen are one consummation
Of stupid, innocuous words to fill space.
A couple of friends—my one saving grace—
Have tried to patch up and embellish my blunders,
But even so, I am guilty of hundreds.
I'm completely fed up on your whole tribe and batch
And relegate this to one who can catch
The hang of the seat of your editor's chaair,
Who can smooth out the wrinkles and ease the despair
Of the "Damns if you don't" and the "Damns if you do."
So here's to you all, and to all an adieu!

WHAT THE HOME FORCE IS DOING

Ward One is in charge of our credulous Fill
Who with marvelous tales her co-workers fill.
She believes all she sees and is partial to rumor—
'Tis strange that in this our Fill they should humor.
When Fillmore they fill more with rumor than fact,
One would think that some day our Fill would react;
But Fill more or less thrives on what she has heard,
And if Fillmore they fill less, she is most perturbed.

Miss Price passed the buck of old observation
To our Fill after much base exaggeration
On the merits of giving Ward One cellarette;
Now Fill sees her error and has started to fret.

Old Seven and Five again reign serene
Under Allanach rule and she sure is a Queen.

Wards Nine and Eleven are run by the school.
'Tis here that the students learn how to rule
Their seniors and probs, and staid supervisors,
And that orderlies, maids are their safest advisors.

Ward Six is a place of one hectic rush;
The speed-artist, Hughie, has Margaret a-flush
From morn until night and then some—to use slang—
'Tis the wreck of her life, this speed-artist gang.
This rumor's been spread, and true it must be,
Miss Eliot knows from A unto Z
Ward Six and its staff and all they demand,
And is ever most ready to turn to a hand.

Thru Eight's never ceasing hustle and bustle
Above all the din is heard the crisp rustle
Of Westie's immaculate dress, spic and span,
And so it remains tho' the day's on the wane.

Miss Byron has left the O. Patient D.
And Gee, what a hole now there will be!
She was trained to a finish when her three years were up
And has since been the making of many a mutt.
Three cheers for the bestest the P. H. ever had;
Ye crepe-hangers mourn for this event sad!
May God speed our future hourly nurse,
May she save them by hundreds from riding a hearse.

Ward Ten is kept busy by Norma, 'tis said,
And my, what a life the careless have led.
There's rumor abroad that Miss Miller will leave.
This rumor in spreading, we think and believe,
Has got a bit twisted and Norma's exempt—
'Tis her sister who's had that chronic ailment.

Ward Twelve is a-drift in a motherless storm;
Miss Brown is a victim of care and so worn
That sick-leave she has for her restoration—
This news has the T. S. O.'s confirmation.

Robena has charge of the same old Op. Pav.
And some time Robena always does have;
Our Bobby has just been a-raising Old Ned,
And now she's the raise she thinks she will wed.

THE PEEK-ABOUT CORNER

There have been many tales abroad as to what the third floor and basement of Isolation were going to be used for. The first rumor that romped around wildly was that the top floor was to be made into a suite for Dr. Palmer. That plan never materialized: the T. S. O. canned that on the grounds that every student nurse in the training school would be down in less than a month with some sort of contagious disease. That idea blew over, but the renovation and enlargement of Isolation continued.—Now don't misunderstand and get the impression that Isolation proper has been renovated: far from it! The plumbing equipment is the same: no more, and we trust, no less.—As Isolation stands now, the Constitution clinic, and the lab for Metabolism are contained therein. Dr. Geo. Draper is High King of the Constitutionists and Dr. H. Rawle Geyelin High King of the Metabolics. In a certain theoretical sense, we understand that they work together.

The equipment of the Constitution clinic seems most simple though unique. All that is visible to the naked eye —and in Dr. Draper's work it is usually a case of all that is visible must be naked to the eye—are rows upon rows and tiers upon tiers of craniums. What craniums he has not been able to secure from "real dead life", he has improvised from plaster; and those types of jaws that don't grow in real life, he has also improvised from plaster.

In a lecture given the student nurses by Dr. Draper, he told them that the most interesting and most extraordinary lower jaws he had ever encountered in his research work were among the nursing profession; they are a class by themselves. Several members of the Alumnae have made or gotten—which ever you prefer—their $50 for the Pension Fund by selling their lower jaw anti mortem. One or two, we understand, received as much as $300. Of course this entails many legal papers, much red tape, and the services of a lawyer, so it is not suggested as the most feasible course of obtaining your quota for the enrichment of your future. To be sure, yours may be a question of the present, not a question of the future.

Like the old Metabolism Dept. we all know so well, the new branch in Isolation is quite pretentious, lots of bottles of blue solutions, graduates galore, and five-pint bottles in every niche aand cranny. And every minute detail of all this vast equipment, Dr. Geyelin has at his finger ends.. If the enlargement of this Dept. continues, poor Dr. Geyelin will have to take recourse to the ten digits on his pedal extremities.

When Isolation proper is not in use, some of the unruly diabetics—caloric thieves—are kept there. At first it was supposed that the idea was to keep them out of food's way but we have since learned that their appetite disappears on admission there. That was a clever hunch, and how foolish of us not to have thought of it years ago! That just goes to prove that very few of us learn by experience.

Taking it all in all, Isolation is quite a compact and busy little workshop these days. In a sense, as before mentioned, Dr. Draper and Dr. Geyelin work together. Dr. Draper has rather put one over on Dr. Geyelin, for all meta-bolics are constitutionists; but not all constitutionists are metabolics. So it remains to be seen how long Dr. Draper will be permitted to remain on the map before that slow but steadily moving glacier, the Metabolism Dept., will sweep him to one side and force him to take a constitutional in other quarters.

There are many, many changes, not only in routine, but there seems to be a marked tendency to architectural upheaval. There is no doubt about it, the hospital has for years been out-growing its foundation and walls. No doubt this sudden mania for building and rebuilding in the past year and a half is prompted by the near prospect of the new hospital and imminent demolition of the old. In short, the spirit of building is in the air and they can't wait for the new buildings but must play and practice with the old.

Now there is the corridor leading from the Front Door to the medical side. Since the corner-stone was laid, there has been a step to get from the corridor to the floor of the front hall and another step if one turns to the right for the Dispensary. For all these years people have made those steps and from the beginning of the old ark have lifted wheel chairs to right and to left. Now since the new hospital is almost upon us, a cement incline has been laid to facilitate vehicular traffic. But one can't, right out of a clear sky, cure a dog of old tricks: directly after the cement was laid and set, Miss Dean on one of her hurried trips to the Dispensary made the step when there was no step to make, lost her equilibrium, turned turtle, sprained her ankle. Rx: supine position in bed for six weeks, without telephone, v. o. Dr. Auchincloss. Recovery: noisy when not sleeping.

As some of you know, the corridor from the Front Door to the surgical side is no longer a passageway, supposedly, but the Record Room. First the door at either end had a large sign, "NO ADMISSION"; later it was changed to "KEEP OUT", with doubtful results. The new location of the Record Room is not overly roomy but airy and light, and during the tennis season, will give Miss Price a wonderful opportunity from a grand stand seat to see that there is no loitering among the clerical staff.

1242 Comox Street, Vancouver, B. C., December 11.

My dear Miss Maxwell,

How sorry I was, not to get down to New York for graduation! But I left the East the middle of May and went to California with my mother. We stayed two or three months with my sister at Long Beach and came north in September.

Fortunately my Quarterly Magazine found me there and I did enjoy reading all about the big doings. You know, when all has been said and done, there is only one Miss Maxwell.

I quite envy your wonderful trip; and I do hope you have struck good weather in the most beautiful parts at any rate. You would see Miss Russell, of course, in Paris, and probably many others.

I have settled down to hard study once more. I used to think if I ever passed my Regents that I would never be foolish enough to get mixed up in anything else; but here I am plodding away, taking the University course in Public Health work. They give a seven months' course, and include many interesting subjects, even to motor mechanics, so that we will not cost the government the price of a Ford every time we make our rounds in the rural districts. I am quite looking forward to my field work after Christmas.

My mother and brother have a very comfortable flat here with me, a nice grate-fire and cosy chairs, which all appeals these terribly rainy months. I wonder at times where all the rain comes from.

Hilda Macdonald had lunch with me a few days ago. She was on her way to Honolulu to do some nursing. She had been doing Provincial School work in Saskatchewan.

Jessie Mundie is married and living here. Also Hazel Lillian Bell, who has a beautiful boy.

Miss Purvis was specialling in the hospital when I was in Long Beach. I had on my stripes so she hailed me one day in the corridor, although I had never seen her at P. H. She graduated many years after I did.

This is just a Christmas letter, hoping that it will find you in the best of health and spirits. It conveys my heartiest Christmas Greeting. And I am hoping that some day in your wandering you will pay Vancouver a visit.

Much love, Sincerely yours,

MARIE L. THOMPSON.

SCHOOL NEWS

The January "Uniform" Dance was rather smaller than some of the dances given this year, but those present had the benefit of sufficient floor space for dancing and appeared to enjoy the evening to the full. The cheerful log fire added greatly to the enjoyment of the evening.

The Staff Dance in February will long be remembered by the unusually fine music provided. The enthusiasm grew as the evening flew by and midnight came all too soon. If the Senior Class predominated the January dance the Probationers certainly did the February one—and looked as though they were having a wonderful time. The great excitement of the evening was the announcement of a very interesting engagement.

A very attractive little dinner party was held in Miss Keith's cozy Tea Rooms on the third anniversary of the Senior Section 1922. Many half forgotten experiences and impressions were brought to mind and a great many resolutions were made for the future. Here's hoping they live up to them.

February 20 was a memorable occasion for the Senior Section of 1922. First they were called upon to pass through the mental agony of appearing before a Medical and then a Surgical Officer of the School—while each man in turn probed deep to find how much practical experience each one had stored up during her course. This ordeal being over, the next shock came in the late P. M. when these same nurses were called to the much dreaded School Office and suddenly found the coveted pin shining on their respective bibs. The less fortunate members of the School were fairly dazzled at dinner time by the white shoes, cuffs and new pins that so suddenly appeared in their midst. This very unusual event was celebrated by an impromptu Pin Party in the Senior sitting room at nine o'clock that night.

DINNER HONORS MISS MAXWELL

(From THE MODERN HOSPITAL, April, 1922.)

In the spring of 1921, at the time of Miss Anna M. Maxwell's retirement as director of the school of nursing of the Presbyterian Hospital, New York, it was suggested that a dinner be offered her in recognition of her services to the community. Miss Maxwell regretted that the pressure of work incident to her retirement precluded her acceptance of the honor. Upon her return from a long holiday in Europe, her consent was again sought and was finally won on the plea that an opportunity would thus be given not only to recognize her achievements, but to say "Welcome Home."

The executive committee on arrangements for the dinner consisted of Miss Mary Parsons, chairman, Miss Mary Magoun Brown, Mr. Thatcher Brown, Miss Anna E. Goodrich, Miss Jessie M. Murdoch, Miss Adelaide Nutting, Miss E. E. Pearce, Miss Blanche Potter, Mrs. John I. Pratt, Mrs. Whitelaw Reid, and Miss Lillian D. Wald.

A large committee of 150 was formed representing the great variety of community interests in which Miss Maxwell has taken a definite part. Thus there came together at the Biltmore Hotel, on the evening of February 1, 800 of her fellowworkers and friends of the professional and social world. A reception preceded the dinner, after which Dr. John H. Finley, chairman, with the guest of honor, led the way to the banquet hall.

Dr. Finley developed an interesting program with not only a fine conception of its significance, but with that light touch of humor which distinguishes his rare gifts. Early in the program, a greeting from Miss Louisa Lee Schuyler, the honorary chairman, was read by Dr. Finley, who designated Miss Maxwell as "that wonderful woman to whose initiative is due the first conception of a school of nursing in this country". Her message follows:

"I wish to add my word of affection and esteem to the many tributes which will be showered upon you by your friends assembled this evening to do you honor.

"You are the dean in this city of your noble profession of nursing; and the school of nursing of the Presbyterian Hospital owes the high standaard it has reached and maintains today to you, as its director for thirty years, to your power of organization, your executive ability, your genius in the art of teaching, and your strict discipline, so tempered by justice and kind-heartedness, that each pupil has accepted it as suited to her own individual need.

"God bless you, and keep you with us in health and happiness for many years to come.

Louisa Lee Schuyler."

Miss Adelaide Nutting gave a brief, masterly survey of the development of nursing in America, portraying with what vision, as a pioneer, with what wisdom and enthusiasm, through long years of heroic effort, Miss Maxwell had made her contribution towards perfecting a system of technique and standard of ethics upon which alone the usefulness and strength of the nursing profession can be maintained and developed.

BRITISH NURSE CABLES APPRECIATION

A cable was read from Mrs. Bedford-Fenwick, President of the National Council of Nurses of Great Britain, as follows: "National Council of Nurses, Great Britain, offers Miss Maxwell warm appreciation of splendid life's work for nursing and humanity." This message was followed by one from Dr. Hamilton of the Protestant Hospital in Bordeaux—"Hail Miss Maxwell! Fairy godmother of the Bordeaux School."

The next speaker, Dr. George E. Brewer, carried one swiftly from a consideration of ideals to their practical exposition. As consulting surgeon of the First Corps of the American Expeditionary Forces, Dr. Brewer was director of the British Base Hospital No. 2 to which the Presbyterian Hospital Unit was assigned during the war. His thrilling testimonial of the courage and efficient service of this unit during times of danger emphasized his belief that this was due not only to the character of the individuals, but to the spirit of the school of nursing of which they were examples.

The American Red Cross was represented by Mrs. August Belmont, who paid a generous tribute to the nursing service as an integral part of that organization. Mrs. Belmont traced Miss Maxwell's energetic co-operation at the time of the organization of the Red Cross and recognized her signal services during the period of the war. After recounting a charming story of an old servant who wanted her sick mistress to have her roses "when she could smell 'em", Mrs. Belmont added, "And you, Miss Maxwell, should have your roses when you can smell them!"

Dr. Haven Emerson devoted a few minutes to the subject of the development of the nurse herself as the link between the doctor and the patient. Dr. Emerson indicated that, in his opinion, the success of public health work depends in the last analysis, upon the intelligent enthusiasm and co-operation of the nurse.

To Miss Lillian Wald fell the pleasant task of describing the development of that branch of the nursing profession which finds a noble expression in the settlement work of Henry Street. An account was given of the difficulties of the early days when the present scope of the work was only dreamed of and when Miss Maxwell stood behind the project as one of its staunch supporters.

The program was interspersed with the reading of telegrams of congratulation and good wishes from a number of organizations among which may be mentioned the National League of Nursing Education, the State League of Nursing Education, the American Nurses' Association, the board of trustees of the Presbyterian Hospital, and the Army Nurse Corps. Messages came also from many friends of the medical profession, among which may be quoted that from the dean of the Medical School of Columbia University: "I regret exceedingly my inability to personally express my sincere appreciation of all that Miss Maxwell has contributed to nursing and to medicine. Her example and influence will be a permanent memorial. May she live many happy and useful years!—William Darrach." And also the following from the dean of the medical profession: "Many thanks for invitation. Regret extremely that I cannot accept. Miss Maxwell's services merit every tribute of respect, admiration and gratitude which can be paid her. Please give her my cordial regards, felicitations and best wishes.—William H. Welch."

Greetings were brought Miss Maxwell from Miss Hilliard, representing the Alumnae Association of St. Luke's Hospital; from Miss Riddle of the Alumnae Association of Boston City Hospital; and from Miss Cadmus of the Alumnae Association of the Presbyterian Hospital.

The closing address was made by Miss Anne E. Goodrich. For the moment the record of achievement was forgotten in the vivid portrayal of Miss Maxwell as a friend. The quick sympathy, the unfailing interest in human effort, the love of the world—books, music, travel—and above all, that "sporting spirit" were drawn with skillful hand, leaving to memory a radiant tribute lavishly paid to a living friend.

In response, Miss Maxwell conveyed her deep appreciation of all that had been said by her friends, but acknowledged herself as only an instrument by which the work had been accomplished. Miss Maxwell attributed whatever success had been attained to the faithful co-operation of the board of managers of the hospital and to the spirit of youth which came into the school of nursing with each new class. Thus sharing the honors with those who shared the labors, Miss Maxwell said "Adieu."

MISS E. E. PEARCE.

MISS MAXWELL'S SPEECH AT DINNER AT BILTMORE

"The order of things has changed! Tonight I have been permitted while still in the flesh to hear the eulogies of my warm-hearted and too-generous friends. It is a unique experience, the memory of which will last through life. If any measure of success has been achieved, it is largely due to the quality of the people with whom I have been associated,—The Boards of Managers, School of Nursing Committees who have given their time and thought and financial support, the Medical Staffs of the hospitals whose progressive ideas and constructive criticisms have been of inestimable value, my co-workers who have given their loyal support in all departments of the work. I think the most enjoyable part of my life has been in the training of the student nurses who have encouraged me by their enthusiasm and youthful responsiveness. Through joy in my work, the years have passed all too quickly and have brought me to this happy ending.

Again may I thank you most heartily."

50 Rue de Lalande, Bordeaux, France.
December 2, 1921.

My dear Miss Young:

I am sending you in a separate envelope the little address the nurses made to Miss Maxwell the day she visited the Protestant Hospital, thinking you might want it for the "Quarterly". I am also sending it to the American Journal of Nursing. The address was accompanied by a little souvenir from the School.

I appreciated receiving the last "Quarterly" and am looking forward to receiving them regularly. The notices of the Alumnae Association have reached me, but owing to lack of sufficient postage, the tax is double. This is a small matter but in the course of a year it amounts to considerable; and there is always a fuss with our not-too-amiable postman who will not come up two flights of stairs to collect, so we have to go down. Would you mind calling the secretary's attention to this matter?

We enjoyed a delightful visit with Miss Maxwell this October while she was Dr. Hamilton's guest at Bagatelle. She looked so well and was doing so many things of interest. The nurses of the Florence Nightingale School were so happy and honored to make her acquaintance the day she visited the hospital. They were all presented to her and she shook hands with each.

Very sincerely yours,
GERTRUDE CELHAY.

Below is the address made by Mademoiselle Rossignol to Miss Maxwell when she visited the Protestant Hospital in Bordeaux in October. The nurses presented her with a souvenir:

Miss Maxwell:

It is a great happiness for us all to receive you in our school and to express to you here our respectful affection.

We feel ourselves attached to you, dear Miss Maxwell, not only by the affinities that bind people together who are working for the same principle, following the same ideal, but also by that solicitude, by that attachment which you have unceasingly manifested toward us.

We cannot forget how greatly you helped and encouraged our beloved Directress when she undertook her tour of propaganda in America. If the dream of the new School at Bagatelle is becoming a reality, if the walls are rapidly rising in the park of that beautiful estate, it is in a large measure due to your far-reaching influence in helping our dear Doctor Hamilton, who went over to you with the courage and self abnegation that makes of her life an apostate.

Our beautiful new school will constantly remind us the noble and generous acts of that wonderfully altruistic country which is yours. During the autumn or winter evenings when we gather together in the library, we will find much to help us forget our day's fatigue, to improve our minds by the books which the Nurses' Association of the Presbyterian Hospital of New York have given us in memory of Miss Anabel Roberts, who died on the battlefield of France. We will read the books this heroine has read; the books her family has so generously offered us.

Believe us Miss Maxwell, we are quite overcome by the many marks of sympathy and appreciation which we owe to our beloved Directress and all those who have collaborated with her in building up the reputation of our School. We have come to harvest the fruit of her life-work and we will endeavor to show ourselves worthy of so glorious a past.

Extract from letter from Mrs. Shibley (Florence Miller).

We are starting home with our two small daughters in June and hope to reach New York about the first week in August. You didn't know about our second daughter, did you? Mary Liftwich, we have named her, and she was born last October. Perhaps The Quarterly would like that bit of news. Elizabeth is over a year and a half years old now and very sweet, but quite a handful to manage, and how I'm going to take them both on a trip over twelve thousand miles is beyond me.

Miss Leila R. Bennett is in Seattle, Wash. 809 Fifth Avenue.

Sunday, April 2nd, a service for the last of the dead to be returned from France was held at Army Base No. 2, Brooklyn. We were glad to notice that of the sixteen nurses of the Jane A. Delano Post, No. 344, marching behind the caisson six were members of the Presbyterian Hospital Unit, paying this last respect to all the soldiers and nurses who gave their lives in the war.

We are indebted to F. O. H. for the following contributions from the diary of S. G. F. Due to lack of space the extract will appear in serial. Don't miss a Quarterly! If your address is wrong have it changed before it is too late!

The following extracts from the diary of S. G. F. cannot fail to be of interest to all of us who take pleasure in our work and whose ideals and Christian spirit are such that the worst hardships can be a pleasure. Those who know S. G. F. personally will be better able to understand her credulous spirit and the influence of her winning personality.—F. O. H.:

En route to India via Bordeaux.
May 6, 1921.

Here I am at last, started on that mission of mercy! God grant that it may be a great and noble mission. To think that the longings of my childhood are at last to be fulfilled seems almost incredible to me. May I be a credit to my profession and an honor to those noble, self-sacrificing women who have gone before me! Yes, here I am and doing what I have longed to do for all these years; but even so, my farewell to the dear ones at home and all my dear, dear friends, and seeing the green shores of the States—and, bless you! I never expect to see another country like you—pass into the horizon; to give up for six long years all that I cherish most except—well, except for one thing, is breaking my heart by piecemeal. But, Sue, you have said enough. What is the breaking of your little heart compared to the untold happiness you hope to be instrumental in conferring on others. This will never do. How are your innermost thoughts and feelings going to convey to you and yours, in years to come, what you saw and did. To do. Ah, yes, to do! May I never in the future forget all that stands for now.

The boat seems like one big, floating city to me and I feel as though I should take the subway when I'm en route for home—my wee, tiny stateroom below—and that I should save time if I took a bus on my promenade, but evidently I am a most inexperienced person; for all the other missionaries are complaining frightfully about the discomforts of the boat and the discourtesy they have had to endure.

These dear, wonderful people have been everywhere and seen everything and have done so much and have so much of interest to tell a poor greenhorn like me, that I am more than overwhelmed and awe-inspired. I feel that I have been, perhaps, a little too presumptuous in thinking that I might be worthy to follow in their footsteps. There is one quiet, middle-aged gentleman, Mr. Perth from Amboy, Me. Once or twice when I've felt a bit wild and flip I have been almost tempted to play upon his name and home town and ask him if he is sure that he is not connected in any way with Perth Amboy, N. J. He has been awfully nice to me and told me all about himself and the wonderful work he has done in China, the Philippines, Arabia, and some in India and Egypt. Mr. Perth is certainly a set little man; I'm sure no unbeliever could resist him. I wonder if some day I will carry the same force that he does and in the future be able to relate to the embryo missionary my many conversions of the soul as well as my healings of the body. Mr. Perth says that one must have the courage of his convictions and that one's convictions must never be stranded on the fence. A true believer with courage, he says, can over-ride any heathen religion that was ever hatched. That seems like a queer way of putting it—"hatched." What does he mean by that? I should think that even the heathens would have some feelings and ideas of their own and that they wouldn't care to have their religion spoken of as being "hatched."

We have been three days out now and I haven't had a touch of mal de mer until today. I think the boat must be small and growing smaller, 'twould seem, with this rising wind. I have had so little action to put in my diary so far, but I do believe there must be some soon. But if I continue to feel——

May 7.

Such a twenty-four hours as I have put in! The only thing I feel sure, which kept me alive was that clear, shining star—my work of the future. I'm feeling much better now. Had another long chat with Mr. Perth this afternoon. Poor man! I do feel sorry for him. He has been married eleven years and has ten children—one set of twins. Such a family responsibility to worry him, together with all his responsibilities for mankind in general! He doesn't seem to be awfully strong, either. He told me today that he never would have been able to carry on his great work if he had not had a four months' leave to the States out of every eighteen months. He says it makes him feel like a new man to leave his work in the care of his associate, who is a fairly capable man, and his children in charge of his wife, and be able to rest for four good months. The only drawback is that his children just run wild in his absence and it takes him another fourteen months to get them in trim. His wife—Oh, I do hate that! I wonder why Mr. Perth should always say "my wife." It gives people such a wrong impression. One might think he looked upon her as so much property—is no good at discipline. I think it is such a pity for a man of Mr. Perth's unusual force to have a wife so partial to a large family. One or two, or even three, but ten! Poor, poor Mr. Perth.

May 10.

Have seen a little of Dr. Rogers, who is going to Arabia to do some research work. I rather like Dr. Rogers, though I truly don't approve of him, and don't admire him as I do Mr. Perth. He is a well-meaning young man and what I think they call a "breezy Westerner." He is rather rough with one's person, and from what I have overheard him say I'm afraid a bit inclined to be coarse. I talked to him a long time about my work and tried to find out without being too inquisitive just what his work was to be. I find him rather unsatisfactory to talk to. He laughs a great deal when there is apparently no point. He told me today that even a Baptist minister could never resist "ragging the shirt off me." I didn't mind so awfuly much, but it does seem as though his reference to my shirt was bordering on familiarity, and would have sounded less vulgar if directed to one of his own sex. When I told him how inspiring Mr. Perth's work with the Arabs had been, he burst into roars of laughter and said he hoped he'd find the filthy Arabs as interesting pathologically as Mr. Perth had found them spiritually. Then he suggested that I forget all that "high stuff" and run a race with him around the deck. Racing I do think interesting, and providing there are no prizes and no betting, I don't exactly disapprove of the idea. However, I didn't think it was best for one bound on God's mission to be so wild, and so told Dr. Rogers I'd rather not. Before I had time to remonstrate he had grabbed me about the waist, picked me up bodily and run the length of the deck with me. Then he was impertinent enough to ask me if I didn't feel more favorably toward racing with such assistance. I could feel myself flushing up, but realized that the less said the better, and so in great indignation I left him.

May 11.

Am beginnnig to feel that I really know Mr. Perth. It upset me greatly today to have him give me a black look and put me in my place, but I did deserve it. Dr. Rogers was sitting on the deck with Mr. Perth and me—uninvited of course—and knowing what a gay one he was, I thought I'd try a bit of punning; so I asked Mr. Perth if he was connected in any way with Perth Amboy, N. J. He gave me one terrible look—I do hope he never looks at Mrs. Perth that way—and exclaimed, "I come from the driest State in the Union, not the wettest." I felt so mortified to think I had been so extremely presumptuous and childish. But Dr. Rogers saw nothing serious whatever in the situation. He gave me a very wicked wink and went into peals of laughter. Mr. Perth muttered something I couldn't understand and got up and left us.

May 13.

I'm so worried! I don't want to avoid Dr. Rogers' society altogether, but I do not like some of the things I have overheard him say. Today I heard him tell the captain that he thought Mr. Perth was a d——d old bore and that if he were doomed to buck—or butt, something like that—up against the likes of him for the next two years, he didn't know what in—well, I just can't repeat any more such language—he would do!

May 14.

Dear me! but this trip across the Atlantic is a long one, but here again my fellow passengers blame the "little tub" we are on. Tub or no tub, I'll never forget it and shall always have a friendly feeling for the chug, chug, chug, that took me on my way to the lands where I am so much needed. In many ways I won't be sorry to be through with this part of the trip. It isn't lack of loyalty for my co-workers at all. When I say that I really, down in the bottom of my soul, don't think our unadulterated society is good for any of us. Dr. Rogers has the faculty of breaking up the atmosphere, but he is so tremendous! He is just like a cyclone; no one can resist him because of his sheer physical force and perseverance. Though I don't approve of Dr. Rogers, I think a little less tremendous Dr. Rogers associated with a zephyr and not with a cylone would be good for us. The other missionaries don't care for him at all, I am beginning to realize, and what astonishes me is that he seems to be amused and not the least bit upset by the fact. At times he positively courts his unpopularity. He told Mr. Perth and several others at lunch today that his father's definition of a missionary's work was a legal right to interfere in other people's affairs, and he was having a wonderful opportunity of observing the truth of his father's axiom. Then he had the audacity to add that he had never yet known his father to be wrong!

May15.

Dr. Rogers suggested a game of bridge last night, but no one knew how to play. He was quite disgusted, and then, with a queer little twinkle in his eye, suggested that we dance if Miss Smith would only play for us, and added that he would be very glad to give lessons to those who couldn't dance. His suggestion met with such silent disapproval that I actually felt sorry for him. While I don't dance, still, I can't see why we shouldn't have had a little fun about it. What is the sin in dancing if one does it in all modesty? But hush! The things of this world are not for your Sue!

There was quite some commotion below late last evening. The bath steward had drawn a bath for someone, and judging from the ejaculations I heard from the distant end of the corridor I imagine he must have gotten it too hot. Such language, my word! What I can't understand is that the voice sounded exactly like Mr. Perth's, but I know it couldn't have been his, for he would never lose control of himself like that and most certainly never use such language. I'm afraid it was Dr. Rogers, and yet a little thing like the temperature of his bath would never worry him. Why, why must I always encounter, in various ways, the baser part of Dr. Rogers? I do like him, but, even so, I cannot approve of him.

I also heard the steward telling the stewardess this morning that it was a darned good thing we were three miles out, for the captain was three sheets to the wind last night and Mr. Perth wasn't much behind him. I wonder what he meant? This is not a sailing vessel; I am always interested in Mr .Perth, but if I should ask him what the steward meant he would probably think me most inquisitive. Dr. Rogers will undoubtedly be able to explain to me, if he only will. The mere mention of Mr. Perth seems to put him in a bad humor these days. Perhaps Mr. Perth has not been as tactful in his disapproval of Dr. Rogers as he might be—a little too much of that wonderful open frankness of his, maybe.

EXCHANGES RECEIVED

St. Luke's Alumnae Bulletin.

The Alumnae Quarterly Echo—Alumnae Association, Lenox Hill Hospital Training School for Nurses.

Port Jervis, N. Y., Feb. 18, 1922.

To the Editor of The Quarterly.

Dear Friend: It is my desire, without meaning to be unkind or unappreciative, to call your attention to various things, both great and small, in the publication of the Quarterly that I feel must be remedied if our Association is to preserve its usual dignity, and if our "Official Organ" is to rank among the foremost publications of our profession.

First, may I suggest that you publish a few good, snappy articles, contributed by some of our members, to give the magazine some body and foundation? Why not avail yourself of the literary talent among our members? It is their Quarterly, and it should be their privilege to write whenever and, within reason, whatever they choose for its columns. The original purpose of the Quarterly was not to make a "one man" periodical. I'm sorry if I am too frank, but I want you to understand.

I do not doubt for one minute that your intentions are of the best and that you have worked hard, but you seem to lose sight of what an alumnæ paper should be and should stand for. We want alumnæ news—news which is fit to print—and we want the old dignity, ideals and accomplishments of our Association upheld and lauded. The older graduates must be the guiding spirit for the younger set in our Association. The tone of the Quarterly, if it has any, is wrong, and I strongly urge that you try to remedy this by bringing some of the real literary meat of the Association into its pages.

Before closing, I will mention the many typographical errors and careless mistakes that are always present. They are most misleading, to say the least, and those among the addresses cause a great deal of trouble and inconvenience when those now living in California, unmarried, are listed as living in New York and married.

I trust that you will take my mild criticism as it is meant. Some day, perhaps, we may meet personally and have opportunity to discuss this matter at greater length over a cup of tea. Yours sincerely,

My dear Miss Young:

I have accepted the position of Assistant County Nurse of Wilson County. I had every intention of taking the Henry Street course in New York, but decided to do this for the present. I have been studying myself for over a year, preparatory to going to Columbia.

I enjoyed my work in the Rocky Mountains very much, and it certainly gave me more self-confidence if nothing else. My work was mostly in the schools, introducing the Modern Health Crusade. Besides talking to the school children, I had to talk at meetings of the Parent-Teachers' Association and women's clubs. It got to be quite easy, and the people of the town seemed to be pleased with my work. I hope that I will be allowed to do the school work here.

Sincerely yours,
(Signed) DOROTHY LAW.

SERMONS IN STONES

A High Encounter

(From the British Journal of Nursing, Aug. 20, 1921)
(Oration delivered June 5th, 1921)

We print below the oration of the Rev. Robert Davis at the laying of the cornerstone of the Nurses' Memorial School, Bagatelle, Bordeaux—the gift to France, as our readers know, of American nurses.

At this moment and in this place it is the invisible—a thousand times more than the visible—it is the unheard, that raises the occasion up out of the commonplace into a moral importance.

Behind this nurse of America the eye of the spirit can see the long line of working nurses whom she represents. They have wished to erect an enduring memorial to their belief in the profession of nursing. They have wished to put the seal of their admiration, the sanction of their love, upon the careers of the two hundred and eighty-five nurses who paid the cost of being a nurse in the hour of war.

Behind the Directrice of this training school the eye of the mind can see those who for thirty years have supported her and her ideal; those who have been patient during the long delay, until the public they served were ready for their standard of technique and personal character; those who have by now passed from this world—but we are responsible for this school and its place today.

Back in the youth of our race, back on the misty rim of history, when God spoke to men, when a high impulse entered into the souls of men or when men associated themselves in a solemn public obligation they set a stone upon the face of the earth. The stone was an enduring mark that time would not destroy, that passers-by would not overlook. And thereafter those who traveled that way bared the head, whispering, "Once God was here. Here our fathers engaged themselves for a high encounter."

Dumb Stone, we bid you speak. Other stones will be placed about you, but you will remain the central step of the entry staircase. All who enter and leave this building will touch you as they pass.

We bid you speak to these who come to learn. Tell them that they enter the profession which, above all that are open to women, demands patience, self-forgetfulness and every sweet virtue that God puts into the human heart. Tell them that the nurse who enters a home to help when ordinary helpers have failed—she to whom the defiled reach out their hands for purification, the hopeless for hope, the abandoned for love—may win rewards such as no other profession can hope to merit or receive.

O Dumb Stone, speak to those who pass back and forth, saying that this is one of the few spots where the working women of the two great Republics have met in co-operation; that sisters of different bloods who shall never see one another have joined in this achievement to aid women to better realize their own powers, and to better serve their lands.

Dead Stone, live! Live, because those in whose name this building is erected were alive. They were drinking deep of the crimson draught of life and danger when their end came. Those who love them best have wished to rear no dead memorial, no statuary aloof in marble immobility. Their monument is this school, this engine for human welfare. Stone, live! as a symbol that those who have passed from sight still live. They live because each of those who cared for them have resolved to each do their own part and a little more, that among us all the world may not lack the service they would have offered. Live! tell us again that the immortality of our beloved is in our own hands.

Solid Stone, on your stable base, let not the years disturb you. You are the symbol of the deathless force that binds the two Republics together. You represent the fundamental alliance that the maladjustment of the moment may not change. The alliance between France and America is not only political, not only economic, not only historical; the deathless alliance between the countries is based on faith; for both believe that it is the supreme business of a state to equip its youth to serve well; both believe that in giving life one gains it more abundantly. This common faith, held by one land as by the other, is the ground of our union.

THE GRADUATION EXERCISES OF THE CLASS OF 1922

When asked to contribute to the July Quarterly by telling something of the Commencement of 1922, I gladly responded because, having had the good fortune to have known through personal observation and contact the heroic efforts of those who brought The Quarterly into being, many of whom now are, through force of circumstances, more or less remote from the center of P.H. activities, I feel the least each can do is to make it possible, through the Quarterly, whose coming so many look forward to, for them to keep in touch with their Alma Mater.

An added inspiration was supplied when there came the statement by Mr. William Sloane, President of the Presbyterian Hospital Board of Managers, as follows: "I always read it from cover to cover."

To many who were present at the Commencement in 1921 the feeling that the Presbyterian Hospital School of Nursing then entered upon a new epoch was very strong, and as the time drew near for that of 1922 the thought that this would emphasize Miss Maxwell's retirement caused some to dread witnessing the great change; but, lo! as is often the case, our apprehensions were needless, because there stood the "Chief" on the platform, all magnificent in cap and gown, watching from a vantage point which had never before been her privilege, nearly two hundred of her graduates, and more than one hundred undergraduates, advance to the inspiring notes of the organ in the Seventy-third Street Presbyterian Church. The probationers had the advantage of high seats, where they could view the whole scene, which must have thrilled them.

Mr. William Sloane, President of the Board of Managers, presided with his accustomed gracious dignity, and Dr. Henry Sloane Coffin, the pastor of the church, led the exercises with prayer.

Before introducing Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler of Columbia University, the speaker of the evening, Mr. Sloane made some telling remarks, which it is our good fortune to be able to give nearly verbatim.

Mr. Sloane's words to the graduates:

It is always gratifying to see so many of you, the graduates of this school, on these occasions, as it proves your interest in and loyalty to the hospital and school. You, to a large extent, are the trustees of what is known as the spirit of the Presbyterian Hospital.

Tonight your ranks are increased by this new group. Give them a hearty welcome and make them feel that you need and expect them to make evident their interest in the affairs of the Alumnæ, and, young as they are, that there is much they can do.

Urge them to adopt the Quarterly as their responsibility to support as the organ of the Alumnæ's well known high standards. It is through this, in some measure, the public judges of your ideals. Though not a graduate of the school, I read each issue from cover to cover.

Just here let me ask you to give no heed to the unfounded rumors concerning the future of the hospital—that it is to be "swallowed up by Columbia" or any other similar false predictions. We rely upon you to help the managers to preserve the integrity of the hospital, and if ever you are in doubt as to what course to take, ask yourselves what Miss Maxwell would think or say, and you will not fail to reach the right decision.

I have been directed by the Managers to thank you for the splendid gift to the hospital of the recent portrait of Miss Maxwell by Ellen Emmet Rand. It is an excellent likeness and we are delighted to possess it.

Three hundred years hence student nurses standing before this portrait will be told, as a part of their instruction in the history of nursing, of the wonderful contributions that Miss Maxwell made to the nursing profession in the early period of its development in this country, and I can imagine she will be described as but second to Florence Nightingale in her influences in this field.

To the Class of 1922:

Our progress along the path of education is marked by Commencement Days—school, college and training school alike; each period presumably showing an advance in our knowledge over the preceding one. Tonight you formally complete the preparation for your life work, thus marking this as an eventful day in your career. Hereafter, thrown upon your own resources, you must trust to what you have learned in our school of the theory and practice of nursing; and endowed, as we know you all are, with common sense, you are qualified now to assume the great responsibility which falls upon every nurse in whatever field she may enter.

The Presbyterian Hospital is as proud of you as I trust you are proud of it. Though separated from your classmates and from the hospital, may your common interest in and affection for this institution keep you banded close together as loyal Alumnæ, and we wish you every success in your professional and personal life.

Mr. Sloane then introduced Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, President of Columbia University, the speaker of the evening.

Much regret is felt that because Dr. Butler spoke without notes we must trust to memory to recall his words. The outstanding note in what he said was that, in addressing the Class of 1922, he stressed the fact that its members now entered the "new profession of nursing." He then went on to say that "nursing originated in the religious orders, developed in war, and now is reckoned among the professions because of its place in the development of medical science."

To have such pronouncement by a leading educator of our country, yes, and of the world, should mean much to every trained nurse, as those who made the struggles and sacrifices which have made possible this utterance are fast passing the responsibility of "carrying on" to the young nurses of today.

Dr. Butler further stressed the close linking of scientific nursing with human interests, and urged well-balanced outlook and action on the part of the individlual nurse.

It is regrettable that Dr. Butler's exact words cannot be reproduced, but he made it clear that nursing, when it entered the ranks of the professions, assumed an added obligation because of its increased responsibility to the vital, human interests involved in all health work—whether preventive or remedial.

Next came the presentation of the diplomas by Mr. Soane, and the pins by Miss Maxwell.

Then, would all might have witnessed the sight when our dear Miss Young in her gracious manner stepped forward, took Miss Maxwell's hand and led her to the place she had always held in the lead, as the class retired after graduating exercises.

With Miss Maxwell and Miss Young leading, the Class, each member of which looked so spick and span, went to the Hall, where, in the dining-room before the great bank of beautiful flowers, this group of thirty-eight recruits to the P.H. ranks had the school pin fastened to their uniforms and the hand of fellowship given by Miss Maxwell.

Mr. Sloane and Dr. Butler followed later, presenting their felicitations to the happy group.

Refreshments, the buzz of many happy reunions, followed by dancing, completed another year for our well loved Presbyterian Hospital School of Nursing.

GRADUATION FESTIVITIES, 1922

The night before Graduation saw a very unusual sight in the Head Nurses' Dining Room. The Head Nurses were conspicuous by their absence, and in their places were the much elated members of the Graduating Class. Stranger still, the officers of the school suddenly appeared from the pantry carrying the most tempting dinners to the amazed guests. Miss Davies, with an amused grin and a napkin thrown professionally over her arm, appeared to be enjoying the novel situation immensely.

Miss Maxwell, the guest of the evening, sat at the head table and enjoyed the verses that were sung at intervals all through the dinner. These ditties spared nobody. The one sore spot in each nurses' career was dug out and sung to music to the great delight of all the class.

After dinner the class adjourned to the Assembly Hall, where a Class Prophecy was read. The Class Prophecy must have been a revelation to Miss Young. To think that in 1932 the leading positions in the nursing world, both in the United States and Canada, will be held by members of this famous class of 1922!

After the reading of the Prophecy the hall became sprinkled with dancers. Miss Maxwell sat in a corner watching, and one by one the girls gathered around her till the last dancer had joined the cosey group. Miss Maxwell popped unexpected questions and told of her own unique experiences in her fascinating way. When the gathering finally reluctantly broke up the members felt that the evening had been one of the most enjoyable and memorable events of their whole training.

The next morning the class picture was taken with all the usual form and ceremony. Members of 1922 felt that the arrangements were complete when Miss Maxwell appeared in their midst.

The flowers were particularly beautiful this year and were enjoyed for several days. The thirty-eight graduates wore Mr. Sloane's gift—corsage bouquets of red roses—which looked particularly pretty on the blue and white stripes.

Mr. Sloane spoke a few encouraging words before introducing the speaker of the evening, Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler of Columbia University. Mr. Sloane then called the graduates forward to receive their diplomas, while Miss Maxwell presented the much coveted pin.

On leaving the church the graduates formed an arch with their diplomas and waited for Miss Maxwell and Miss Young to pass through together. The graduates were especially glad to be allowed to repeat this little act of courtesy started last year.

To the delight of 1922 Miss Maxwell once more fastened each graduate's pin in place. Altogether, at the close of the reception and dance, the class felt a warm feeling of gratitude to Miss Young for all that she had done to make graduation the success that it was.

But the festivities of graduation did not end with the dance on May 11, for May 24th saw motors, heavily laden, leave Nightingale Hall for the joys of Innis Arden, Sound Beach. The day was perfect, and after exploring the wonders of Tod's Point, the class returned to the camp to play around and enjoy that wonderful spot to the full, while Miss Maxwell and Miss Young made and served salads.

Mrs. Tod not only made the picnic possible, but was on hand all afternoon, doing all in her power to give the picnickers a really good time. She and Miss Maxwell provided great entertainment together. Their stories and jokes were tremendously appreciated by those who were near enough to enjoy them.

The class made a valiant effort to express gratitude to Mr. Tod on the return drive—by singing to him at his doorway. He tried to look pleased and succeeded to a remarkable degree—considering the honors of the first two verses of "The Hymn of Thanks."

On the return trip Miss Young announced that now the class of 1922 had really graduated.

Miss Maxwell was unable to accept the invitation, and following is Dr. Wilbur's reply:

Stanford University, California
April 3, 1922.

Miss Anna C. Maxwell,
Lockport, N. Y.

Dear Miss Maxwell:

We were all so pleased with your good letter of March 20th. Those of us associated with the responsibility of the new Stanford School of Nursing have been particularly appreciative of your interest. I had copies made of your letter for distribution. Of course, our attempt is a very modest one, but we are trying to start things in the right direction. I feel sure that it would have been most gratifying to you if you could have been present at our exercises. There was a fine wholesome spirit that encouraged me very much.

If by any good fortune you should come to California we shall be deeply appreciative of a chance to see something of you.

With kind regards,

Sincerely yours,

RAY LYMAN WILBUR.

"Backward, turn backward, oh Time in thy flight!"
Where is the appendix that woke us at night?
That useless small object that laid us all low.
Any really good nurse just a few years ago
Would come down to breakfast in uniform clean,
Then confess about ten that she felt kinda mean.
After hearing her story the surgeon would say
"I guess your appendix can come out today."
It was almost routine when a nurse became sick
To grab her appendix and excavate quick.

But the times have all changed, and it's no longer done—
The doctors found something new under the sun.
When a nurse goes off duty it's no longer true
That she points with distress to a sore R. L. Q.
Whatever her trouble—be it sore feet or head—
They blame the whole thing on her tonsils instead.
They're removed by the dozen—you're really not nice
If you don't go around with your throat packed in ice.
It's guaranteed surely to make you feel fine.
In an unguarded moment they even swiped mine!

EXTRACT OF A LETTER FROM MISS MARGUERITE WALES TO MISS MAXWELL

1412 Cabrillo Avenue, Burlingame, Cal.,
May first.

My dear Miss Maxwell:

The day of our school reception Dr. and Mrs. Wilbur and I had luncheon with Mr. and Mrs. Hopkins, and Dr. Wilbur produced your letter, which he said he was going to read at the opening of the school that afternoon. He spoke with great appreciation of it, and when I stopped at my office after the reception I was proud indeed to find a letter for me, too, from you.

It would have been perfect to have had you here with us, for I am sure you would have enjoyed it all and meeting all the people out here who have such a high appreciation of your work. I hope Dr. Lamb will some day feel that a trip to the Coast is just what you need. It is such glorious country, and we grow more and more enthusiastic about it every day. Miss Lindsay and her mother have sent for their furniture and are making their home here. My sister, Mrs. Stoddart, who came out with her two children last fall to stay with me, announce that if I do go back East, she will remain here anyway, so you see there must be a big fascination about the place.

I feel sure you will be interested in the nice things that have happened to me these past few months. My Board of Directors, who have all been so splendid in every way this past year, gave me a very pleasant surprise by increasing my salary very generously.

Things are growing so here, and with our beautiful new nurses' home (you would love it!) our training school is developing along the lines you would approve. I find Miss Landis most ambitious and big-minded about it.

Please forgive me for running on so much about my affairs, but I feel they are somewhat the fruits of your labor, or are going to be, so hope I have not bored you. And I think you will be glad to hear how Miss Lindsay has gone into a new and interesting piece of work in the schools. We hope it will eventually work into supervisorship of the school nurses. At present she works with them in connection with the nutrition work and hospital clinics. She is very much interested.

Miss Tucker has written me she wants to come out, and I know there will be something interesting for her to do. Miss Pomeroy, who is a San Francisco girl, is to take up work with me at Stanford, so you see we will have quite a number of Presbyterian nurses taking care of San Francisco, and when you come out we will have a great deal we will want to talk over with you.

I hope you are feeling much better now, and that you really are planning to come West some time in the near future. In the meantime, I thank you again for your thoughtfulness in writing me at the time of our school opening. It meant a great deal to me.

Please pardon this letter on the typewriter, but I was sure my Corona would make easier reading than my pen.

With very best wishes, I am,

Sincerely yours,

MARGUERITE WALES.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER FROM MAE CARTER HARRIS, '12

I do hope by next year I will be able to attend Commencement. My boy is now five years old and much improved in health, which will permit me to leave him with a nurse. We had a birthday party for him yesterday and I had quite a time trying to keep twelve children on the lawn.

If ever you or any member of 1912 pass this way, you will always find the latch-string out. We have plenty of room and would be more than glad to entertain you one and all.

MISCELLANEOUS

Alice Keith, formerly Instructor in Dietetics at P.H., opened "The Studio" on Lexington Avenue last fall. She has since sold it, and is spending the summer with her mother at Lakeside Avenue, Bridgewater, Mass.

Doctor Homer Swift was married to Emma Fordyce MacRae, daughter of Doctor and Mrs. John Addison Fordyce, on Monday, the twenty-fourth of April.

Alida Carter, daughter of Doctor and Mrs. Herbert S. Carter, was married to Mr. William Macdonough on Saturday, May 6th. Miss Carter was formerly connected with the Occupational Therapy Department at P.H.

Doctor Golden, formerly Resident Physician of Peter Bent Brigham Hospital, has recently taken charge of the X-Ray Department at Presbyterian Hospital. The department is being enlarged, and it will now be possible for graduate nurses to receive instruction as technicians in radiography. This is becoming more and mort a definite branch of the nursing profession.

Dr. Warfield T. Longcope, formerly Medical Chief at P.H., has gone to Baltimore, and is now Professor of Medicine of Johns Hopkins Medical School and Physician-in-Chief of Johns Hopkins Hospital.

The last of a series of teas, which have been held during the year by the Supervisors of Henry Street, was held on June 6th at the Cosmopolitan Club, with Miss Goodrich as guest of honor. Miss Goodrich left for Washington University, Seattle, where she will lecture on Public Health at the Summer School.

The friends of Mrs. Lowrie, née Barbara Amour, now living in Rome, Italy, will be pleased to hear that she will be in New York for a year. Mr. Lowrie will exchange with Dr. Sedgwick of Calvary Church in New York. They expect to arrive in July.

Miss Maxwell was very busy early in June, installing herself in her new apartment at 510 Park Avenue. As usual, she worked day and night getting settled, and the result (as one would know) is charming.

Miss Maxwell left New York for Boston on June 12th to address a meeting of the Massachusetts State Nurses' Association on June 13th on the "Educational Value of the Supervisor and Head Nurse in the Modern Hospital." Dr. Richard Olding Beard from the University of Minnesota addressed the meeting on the "Present Problems in Nursing Education."

Miss Maxwell plans to spend a month with her family in Boston before leaving for the Adirondacks for the summer.

Miss Young left New York June 19th to attend the convention of the American Nurses' Association at Seattle as the delegate of the Alumnæ Association.

The headquarters of the American Red Cross in Paris were finally closed in May, and Miss Helen Scott Hayes, latterly Chief Nurse of that organization, has returned to this country.

THE NEW PROVIDENCE HOSPITAL

"The great campaign for a new general hospital in Providence culminated at Infantry Hall May 15 in the midst of scenes of the wildest enthusiasm that greeted the announcement that the goal had been reached and that the $1,000,000 sought had been exceeded by more than $200,000.

"The exact total reached, after seven days of actual work by the 800 men and women who made up the teams, was $1,222,608.89."

Congratulations are extended to Edith Clapp, '02, Director of Nurses of the Providence General Hospital, on the wonderful success of the drive.

MORE ABOUT MISS MAXWELL'S DINNER

The Editor of The Quarterly asked the present writer to send to the April number of The Quarterly an account of the dinner given in honor of Miss Maxwell at the Biltmore Hotel. Through almost inexcusable carelessness this was not written in time. The Editor was compelled to substitute an article, by the same graduate, which had appeared in The Modern Hospital. This obviously lacked much information which would be peculiarly interesting to those who read The Quarterly and who are intimately associated as Alumnæ.

This lack has been noted, and a number, residing at a distance, as well as those unable to attend the dinner, have written asking if a copy of Dr. Fisher's address could be obtained. Inquiries have also been made as to the nursing organizations and individuals attending the dinner. With apologies to the Editor and with many regets for the delay the following appears:

THE ADDRESS OF DR. FISHER

Mr. President, Miss Maxwell, Nurses and Friends:

Miss Maxwell, I have the honor to have been chosen to bring to you, on this great occasion, the greetings of the Board of Managers of the Presbyterian Hospital. To express to you their appreciation of the honor that has come to you—and by you to the hospital—because of your great personality, your great ability for organization, and the vision and courage by which you have ever inspired others in the field of your work. Whoever has come to consult you upon Training School and Nursing problems has come away with a larger vision, a greater faith, and a new courage.

I see many in this audience who, in the years of our work together in the Presbyterian Hospital, have stopped in my office, as they came from yours, to tell me of the wonderful way you had solved their problems and lightened their burdens.

When we have read our Bibles or studied our histories we have realized that, in all the ages, some men and women have developed and stood out above their fellowmen and have become great leaders of their peoples, whose influence has extended far beyond the fields in which their daily work was done. Their birthplaces have been forgotten. In helping their own they have helped humanity and the world has claimed them.

For a little while, perhaps, we thought of Miss Maxwell as belonging to the Presbyterian Hospital. Today Miss Maxwell does not belong to the Presbyterian Hospital, nor to New York, nor to Massachusetts. Miss Maxwell belongs to the world—wherever suffering has been relieved and new hope and courage have come through the healing touch, the sympathy and faith of the trained nurse.

A LETTER FROM RUTH C. WILLIAMS, '17, TO MISS YOUNG

Goodwill Hospital
Nan Hsu Chou
Anhwei, China,

April 2, 1922.

Dear Miss Young:

Last night when I saw that the P.H. Quarterly had come I thought, now for a good hour's visit with the people and doings at P.H., but I was sadly disappointed. It took me the whole of ten minutes to look through the little there was to be found in the January Quarterly and I wondered what had happened. Suddenly I realized that I had no one but myself to blame for lack of news, for if all who have gone wandering off into the great world of "doing things" have not kept in better touch with "Our Base" than I have, we don't deserve to have any messages sent to us from you all that are at home keeping the Base running. All this is just to tell you how much I enjoy The Quarterly when it finds its way to this far-off Inland Station in China. Also, Miss Young, many are the times I have meant to sit down and have a chat with you, telling you that we are more interested than you can know in all that is happening at P.H., and that we are back of you in everything as you take over the work. May the good work go on and "all hard places be made smooth!"

And to think that I have been here in China almost two years with no word to you all! As to the life and work that I have found so very interesting and fascinating out here: I arrived here in August, 1921, in time for six weeks' visit with my brother and his family before going on to Peking, where I was to spend the winter in the Language School. That short visit was in a way a "life-saver" for a new missionary. It gave me a little time to get first-hand impressions of the life and the many, many types of people at work out here in China before being dumped into Language School with a hundred other "newcomers," who were also trying to adjust themselves to life and things in China. Many were the hints and helps that I gained from that visit, but I won't bother you with them now. I only hope that sometime I can do as much for someone else when they first come out!

My first year out here is now all a wonderful dream! In spite of spending five or six hours a day on language study, it was made as carefree and happy a year as anyone could hope for. All the time, unconsciously, we were absorbing the Chinese language, customs, and adjusting ourselves to a new way of living, and trying to do it all with as little strain as possible. There is a strain, that few of us realize, for on all sides are the sights, sounds and smells that we have never experienced before. Soneone has said that China is China because of the sounds and smells, and I am sure there was never a truer word spoken. There is the cry of the beggar, the call of the hawker with his queer things to sell, the squeak of the wheelbarrow man as he brings the water to sell; the blind man as he feels his way along the street beats a little brass disk which only blind men use, and the small shopmen who carry their boxes of things through the streets and use little drums and bells to let the people within the dark houses know what is for sale. Each sound has its own meaning to those who live in China, and the sounds all mean the same from the north to the south of this great country. But the one sound that we all love to listen for in Peking, and which so far I have never heard anywhere else, is the whistle one hears as a flock of pigeons fly through the air. The leader has the whistle tied to his leg, and seems to draw all the others after him with the whistle.

And the smells! It is simply impossible to describe them! I shall never forget my first ride through the streets of Changsha, on a hot August day, with my nose playing me all kinds of tricks, as I tried to recognize one out of what seemed to be fifty different smells.

Of course, I was lucky in going to Peking for language study, for I had many friends there, and after my first two months, the first spent in a Chinese house, and the second in the hospital, I lived with the Frank Meleneys. It was some change to leave the Chinese house with its paper windows and stone floors and no plumbing and go to live with Helen Meleney in a very modern little bungalow with real plumbing, and at least ten other houses on the same compound full of real, true Americans. Time was more than full with sightseeing and good times with the many friends that we had in Peking. There were seven of us there who had gone to France in the same unit, a rather unusual thing to find in one city in China, don't you think? Somehow I managed to finish my first year in the Language School, and after a wonderful summer on the ocean with my brother's family, I came here to my own work.

This is a little town, an express stop on the main railroad between Shanghai and Peking, which makes it mighty nice in having friends stop off to see us as they go through. It really is a city, and has a real wall, which we find a fine place for a short walk. The people are for the most part very poor; the lucky ones own farms in the country which they go out to till in the seasons, the rest of the time living in the city. I have never seen a much flatter country, with only a few trees, and off to the northwest one can see the hills. Our work has been here just ten years, and thanks to many interruptions, due to the war and change of staff, etc., the medical work has developed very slowly, but at last we feel that it is getting under way, and we hope for big things. When I came last fall the floods had played havoc with our little dispensary, so that our first work was to rebuild and get things into shape. It is at last running rather smoothly, and our little twenty-bed hospital is ready to prove to us that there is a need of a larger modern hospital, which we hope to build in two or three years.

Our staff at present consists of a foreign doctor, a Chinese doctor, and a Chinese male nurse and druggist or dispenser, as they are called out here, as well as servants, and yours truly, who runs around trying to do a little of everything, but getting nothing much done. I hope soon to have a Chinese woman nurse to add to our staff.

Until one has tried to outfit a hospital in China—from the supplies used in the operating room to the linen and furniture needed in the wards, from the building of a Chinese kitchen to the food and dishes that finally reach the patients—no one can know the hundred and one queer things that can come up. You can judge from this that we have had to start at the beginning of things here, and I would not have missed it for anything.

In January I was fortunate in being able to go to Hankow for the Nurses' Conference. It was very well worth while and most helpful to us all, and showed a wonderful amount done along the lines of nursing education in China. I am having copies of the China Nursing Association Journal sent to you, so that you will be able to see just what we are accomplishing in China, and trust that it will be added to that pile of well read (?) literature on the library table. When one realizes that there were over ninety nurses at the Conference, and that over twenty of those were Chinese nurses, one soon must recognize that China is fast taking her place in the world of nursing education.

Many, I know, feel that it is a waste of time to start in a little out-of-the-way place like this, with everything so at the beginning; but there have had to be beginnings to everything, and some of us love the feeling that we have started and built up our own. In the meantime we dream of the time of Public Health centers and Visiting Nurse centers, and hope that the little hygiene we are teaching in the schools will find root and do a little something to show these people around us how to live decently, with more cleanliness and fewer smells!

This has turned out to be much longer than I had any intention of writing, but at least it ought to give you a little picture of what China means to me, and also the fact that we live every minute out here just as intensely as anyone can anywhere. We often wish for the smooth running routine of P. H. and the many accessories with which we were surrounded, but we are more than thankful for all that we have. With this come my best wishes for P.H. and all P.H.ers. May each of you find as much joy in your work as I do in mine here.

Very sincerely yours,

RUTH C. WILLIAMS, '17.

SCHOOL NOTES

An earnest appeal for funds from the American Relief Administration, of which Herbert Hoover is chairman, for the United Moscow School of Nursing, reached us in May. The letter accompanying this appeal revealed the fact that hospital conditions in Moscow were in an appalling state, the nurses being literally without sufficient food, and immediate help from the Schools in America was imperative to keep the present staff of nurses together.

Our nurses received this appeal with their usual enthusiasm, and plans were made at once to raise money for the fund. It was finally decided to give a dance, the guests to be charged admission, and further paying attractions to be added in the way of cake, candy, punch and sandwiches. The Hospital Staff co-operated and furnished the orchestra.

The dance was a success, financialy and socially. Everyone who had a favorite recipe for candy or cake made it and put it on sale, and the display of cake and candy and sandwiches would have extracted money from an even less enthusiastic gathering. One particularly popular attraction was a Strawberry Shortcake booth operated by the head nurses, and a close second was the table where the thirsty dancers fairly mobbed the nurses dispensing punch and sandwiches.

The few cakes and boxes of candy left at the end of the evening were successfully auctioned off. The proceeds from the dance were, including donations, $787.38.

An innovation which has been recently installed in the Hall pantry is a patent dishwasher that is proving very successful. It is a distinct improvement over the old method, and has the additional advantage of sterilizing as well as washing the dishes, so that precaution trays of the sick nurses will no longer need to be kept separate.

When for several consecutive days Mamie was not to be found presiding over her accustomed post, and we heard she had a severe cold, there was universal sympathy which deepened to real distress when she was moved to a room off Ward VII and diagnosed as pneumonia. The inquiries came singly and in pairs and in droves, and everyone was very worried.

She was most sincerely missed. We knew, of course, that the Hall did get dusted, but one somehow missed the energetic flap of Mamie's duster. And when an unexpected phone call caught us unawares, and we sneaked quietly down the back stairs some few minutes later, our lack of preparedness more or less concealed under last winters' coat suspiciously buttoned around the neck, one did miss Mamie's healthy scolding for keeping the phone waiting so long. For several weeks Mamie, who could somehow never do things by halves, was desperately ill, and when we heard she was really recovering we were overjoyed. Mamie convalesced at Burke, and is now quite well again, and back at work with all her old-time vigor and still facing us with our sins of omission.

The operating room is still buying an operating table. Numerous tables well mentioned in the advertisements have been tried out from time to time, but none seem to meet the requirements. We, editorially speaking, feel that we could offer several reliable suggestions, for we have very potent memories of the time we had our tonsils out and our heroic efforts to make ourselves comfortable on that table. Nature has dwelt very generously with us (still editorially speaking) in the way of natural padding, but we never knew we had so many bones till we parked ourselves on that table in the brief interval of waiting for the party to begin. Of course, looking at the subject dispassionately, we realize that the main object is not to make the table so comfortable that the patients will fall over each other for the privilege of resting upon it, but we do feel that something just the merest trifle more yielding would be desirable. Any improvements along this line that may present themselves in the near fture will be favorably mentioned in the next issue.

At intervals during the last weeks of March and the first weeks of April there was considerable speculation as to why all the patients were so industriously engaged in cutting pink cherry blossoms from yards of figured crepe paper. The mystery was solved on the night of the Junior-Senior dance, when the Assembly Hall was converted into a veritable bower of blossoms. The effect was most artistic, and quite unusual, and made a delightful background for a charming dance. The orchestra was splendid, and everyone had a thoroughly happy evening.

Several very worth-while books have been added to the library lately. There are two splendid volumes in readable

English on psychoanalysis, Lytton Strachy's delightful life of Queen Victoria, several books of modern fiction, and that soul-satisfying satire, "The Cruise of the Kawa."

New York City

Dear Miss Young:

According to promise, I am sending you herewith my report for 1921 to the Young Women's Christian Association "Statement of Work." I trust that it meets with your approval, and that you will consider it worthy of a page in our "Quarterly."

Cordially yours,
ALICE H. MAC LELLAN.

CENTRAL CLUB FOR NURSES

Affiliated with the Young Women's Christian Association of the City of New York

Eleven years ago, when the little brownstone house on East Thirty-fourth Street, accommodating only thirty-six nurses, was known as the Central Club for Nurses, we little thought that, within so short a time, we should attain our present importance. On July 1, 1916, the imposing fourteen-story building at 132 East Forty-fifth Street opened its doors to 252 permanent members, with transient accommodation for 13. Central Club is certainly a magnificent monument to the nursing profession made possible by the Young Women's Christian Association campaign of 1913. It not only provides all the advantages of a well-run club, but also spells "Home" to the graduate nurse, and it includes both religious and social privileges.

Membership—The membership numbers 1,893, representing 167 hospital schools of nursing in every state in the Union and several foreign countries.

Password—"Co-operation"—It is very gratifying to know that our club stands for co-operation to the community; every organization feels at liberty to call on us at any time. Too much cannot be said of the wonderful spirit with which the nurses respond to such calls. It may be to serve in an improvised hospital ward or an exposition hall, manning booths, or special service in disasters. It matters not what the call is, Central Club for Nurses has never been known to say "No."

Social Activities—Our beautiful assembly room is used particularly for meetings of nursing organizations; the total number held during the past year was 88. In addition, there were two stereopticon lectures, four receptions, nine dances and 75 tea parties.

Religious Activities—Every Sunday afternon a Bible class, conducted by Miss Carrie E. Eggers, is held in one of the attractive reading rooms on the second floor. This is followed by tea.

Service—The total number of transients accommodated during the year was 1,350—248 more than in the previous year; 122,033 were served in the dining-room, which has a seating capacity of 76.

The waiting list of 659 applications for permanent rooms tells a story of how popular our club has become. On January 1, 1921, the Committee of Management, after very careful consideration, voted that resident members might live at the club five years, thereby making it possbile for every member to enjoy for some period of time the comforts the club affords.

ALICE H. MAC LELLAN,
General Secretary.

AMENDMENT TO THE NURSES' PRACTICE ACT

The University of the State of New York

Albany, May 25, 1922.

To the Secretary of the Nurses' Alumnæ Association:

Dear Madam:

By amendment to the Nurse Practice Act the period within which application may be made for license as Registered Nurse under the waiver has been extended from January 1, 1921, to January 1, 1923, and for making application for license as Trained Attendant until September 1, 1922.

This amendment was made by joint action of the New York State Nurses' Association and the State Department of Education, because it was found that there were many nurses in the State who, either through ignorance of the law or failure to appreciate the full effect of its provisions, failed to take advantage of the waiver provision within the time fixed by statute and so found themselves unable to use the term Trained, Certified, Graduate or Registered Nurse or the term Trained Attendant. The opportunity is thus afforded to all such nurses within the State who were eligible to apply for a license previous to January 1, 1921, now to make application for registration under the waiver. But bear in mind that such applications must all be made prior to January 1, 1923, except in the case of applications for license as Trained Attendant, which applications must be made prior to September 1, 1922.

The law requires that all who practice as Trained, Certified, Graduate or Registered Nurses or as Trained Attendants be licensed and registered as such, whether the individual is practicing in an institution, in public health service, or in private duty; and provides that no person unless so licensed and registered shall assume the title or use the abbreviation R.N. or any words, letters or figures to indicate that the person using the same is a Trained, Certified, Graduate or Registered Nurse, or assume the title or use the abbreviation of the term Trained Attendant (T.A.) or any other words, letters or figures to indicate that the person using the same is a Trained Attendant.

This letter is to seek your co-operation in making the requirements of the law known to those who should be so licensed. Will you therefore kindly convey this information to everyone interested, and also the information that

ANNUAL REGISTRATION is mandatory under the statute. Annually, in the month of January, this Department is required by statute to publish a list of those who are licensed and registered to practice as Registered Nurses and as Trained Attendants; and it is hoped that ultimately this list will contain the name of every person so eligible to practice, to the end that not only physicians and nurses, but the public as well, may be fully informed as to who are Registered Nurses and who are Trained Attendants.

I am therefore urging that you give the matter of application under the waiver and of annual registration your hearty support and co-operation.

Very respectfully yours,

AUGUSTUS S. DOWNING,

Assistant Commissioner and Director of Professional Education.

EXTRACT OF LETTER FROM MRS. J. B. CHRISTIE TO MISS MAXWELL

May 25th, 1922.

My dear Miss Maxwell:

It has finally been decided that we do not get away from here until August 18th, the date we left New York last year. In view of the hot weather, we made an effort to leave June 1st, but our agreement is so worded that we either stay or forfeit our transportation.

Besides nice Dr. Hubbard, we have all the doctors of Tampico, as they have been given the privilege of sending their patients into the hospital, whether they belong to the oil companies or not. It is surely a motley collection, both doctors and patients. A great many of the companies are, for the present at least, transferring their activities to other parts of the world; probably when a stable government is established in Mexico the boom will return.

We hear you went to Graduation after all, and looked perfectly grand in your cap and gown among the dignitaries. I am sure the class was thrilled when they found you were to present their pins.

Elspeth and I had dinner with the Sheldons on Tuesday—a perfectly wonderful home dinner. Mrs. Sheldon has a Jap cook and a Mexican maid, and seems to be very happy.

We saw her again down town yesterday, and she invited us to lunch, but we were pressed for time and could not go. Mr. Sheldon is a very delightful man, and although he has been in this country for twelve years, Mexico has not gotten him (as they say it does men if they stay half that time). Mrs. Sheldon thinks of going home next month, as her husband thinks July and August will be too trying for her out here.

I think I have told you that the hospital is about four miles from town, with the usual Mexican road between, which means that in the wet season it is almost impassable. Well, in April the street car company suddenly decided to extend the car line out here, and in six weeks we were going into town on the electric cars. This rapid work has been the sensation of the decade, as in Tampico it usually takes several years to accomplish such a piece of work. However, they say this is the one organization in the State that could have done it.

We are anxious to hear about your plans for the summer. We miss you terribly, and wonder what you are doing and wearing, etc.

I sent a telegram to the Graduating Class, and had a nice note in reply from Miss May, the president.

Elspeth has been on night duty for four weeks, and now is going down the river to Treport, about seven miles away, and very near the gulf. She will return tomorrow evening.

My malaria cleared up entirely, and they tell me it will not recur. A slight attack of diphtheria is the only other disability I have had—was off duty for a couple of weeks—but have now been on the job again for a week and am quite O. K. Best love.

JANET B. CHRISTIE,
William C. Gorgas Hospital,
Apartado 78 B,
Tampico, Mexico.

EXTRACT OF LETTER FROM MISS MUNCK TO MISS MAXWELL

March 11th, 1922.

My dear Miss Maxwell:

I am so very sorry that I did not see you when you were in Europe, I should have been so delighted to have had you here for some time, and to have had your kind advice, and some of your nerve and inspiration. I hope, however, that you had a delightful trip.

I should very much have enjoyed being present at your dinner. I delighted in the names of the committee, but as I received the invitation two days after the party I was unable to be present!

Perhaps you know that we are to have an international gathering of delegates here in Copenhagen in May. I do hope to see some of my friends from U. S. A. We are to elect a new international secretary, and to accept in a formal way four countries—Belgium, Norway, Italy and China. I wonder shall we be able to do it nicely, as very few of us are able to speak foreign languages well? I am going to brush up my French, but I have very little time for it, as we are graduating a class of fifty-nine this spring, and the final examinations come within the next two weeks.

I am very happy having Miss Reiman for instructor. We have introduced Student Government, and it seems to work very well. Our State Registration has not come yet. Parliament is working slowly on it, but it meets with much animosity from many sides.

I do hope the dear P.H. is flourishing under Miss Young. Much love.

Affectionately yours,

CHARLOTTE MUNCK,
Bispebyerg Hospital, Copenhagen.

To the Editor of The Quarterly:

I have received many inquiries from graduates as to the regulations concerning the privilege of burial at Arlington. The following answer comes from the Atlantic Division of The American Red Cross.

HELEN YOUNG.

April 21st, 1922.

My dear Miss Young:

Miss Johnson has asked me to answer your letter of April 17th.

It is true that all nurses who have served honorably with the Army and Navy are entitled to burial at Arlington. It is necessary, however, to gain permission from the War Department, the Chief of the Graves Section.

We have had several nurses recently who have been buried there. Arrangements are made to meet the body on any specified train, and the Red Cross Potomac Chapter makes a policy of seeing that the families and any friends who wish to go are taken care of, as it is quite a long drive from the station to the nurses' plot.

If there is any other information that I can give you I will be delighted.

The funeral, of course, is carried on with military honors, firing squad, buglers and chaplain.

Yours sincerely,

CHRISTINE M. NUNO,

Assistant to Director Nursing Service.

The Business Manager,

Alumnæ Association of the Presbyterian Hospital Training School for Nurses, 37 East Seventy-first Street, New York, N. Y.

Dear Madam:

The Library has failed to receive copies of Vol. 11, No. 4, and Vol. 12, No. 1, of your "Quarterly Magazine." As it is undesirable to bind up incomplete volumes of the periodicals in this Library, we are writing to you again in the hope that this letter will reach the person in your association who would have the authority to aid us. The publication is reaching us regularly, but we failed to receive these numbers. If for any reason these numbers are not available for our use, we should be glad to have the information in order that a proper entry may be entered in our records.

Awaiting your favorable consideration. I am,

Very truly yours,

E. H. ANDERSON,

The Business Manager would be grateful if any member of the Alumnæ holding the above mentioned volumes would kindly forward same.

REPORT OF THE ANNUAL MEETING OF THE ALUMNÆ ASSOCIATION, MAY 12, 1922

The annual meeting of the Alumnæ Association was held May 12, 1922, at Florence Nightingale Hall.

There were forty members present—only forty members out of our great number of graduates to welcome the graduating class of 1922 and to elect officers for the coming year. We trust that next year we may have a greater number.

Miss E. E. Pearce's report of the Ways and Means Committee was to the effect that one thousand six hundred and eighty-one dollars ($1,681) had been received in donations for the Pension Fund.

There have been a great number of resignations during the past year due to the increased yearly dues. We trust that the members appreciate that the seven dollars which has been added to the dues is for the purpose of increasing the Pension Fund and is only a temporary measure.

It was decided to send a delegate to the convention of the American Nurses' Association at Seattle and Helen Young, '12, was chosen to represent us.

Elizabeth Brackett, '15, as president, presided and addressed the Association on the lack of co-operation in our alumnæ work.

Continuing, she said: "I appreciate the fact that we are all very busy and a great many of us located at great distances from the school, but I feel that this should not cause us to lose interest in the doings of the Association. The Editor of The Quarterly has a difficult struggle to obtain news for the magazine. We all look forward to receiving it and reading what has happened to each and every member. Can we not each contribute our mite of news?"

A vote of thanks was tendered Miss Brackett for the excellent way in which she has handled the affairs of the Association during her presidency, and Miss Deming was given a warm welcome as President for the coming year.

The meeting adjourned, following which tea was served, the probationers assisting, thus making the acquaintance of the graduates of the school.

Much interest was added to the day by the presentation to the school of the excellent portrait of Miss Maxwell by Mrs. Emmett Rand. This was hung in the Reception Room during graduation week.

TO THE ALUMNÆ OF THE SCHOOL OF NURSING OF THE PRESBYTERIAN HOSPITAL— GREETINGS!

We are embarked on a new year with revised By-Laws, a new group of officers, and a new Editorial Board for The Quarterly. There are great plans being made for the future—whether they succeed or not depends largely on the support of every member of the Alumnæ Association.

As your new President, I take this opportunity to thank you for entrusting this office to me, to pledge my interest and effort, and to beg a responsive, constructive share in the year's work from all of you.

DOROTHY DEMING,
President.

REPORT FROM CHAIRMAN OF "PENSION FUND WAYS AND MEANS"

Last November a letter was sent asking each member of the Alumnæ Association to consider the possibility of adding fifty dollars to the Pension Fund during the following year. It was hoped that it might prove an interesting experiment to devise methods of earning this amount, quite apart from the ways provided by the profession of nursing.

This plan was suggested by the almost incredible success attending the three million dollar campaign of the Smith College Alumnæ Association. These energetic women —a large proportion of them self-supporting—brought together a vast sum by the simplest as well as by the most original schemes.

Another consideration seemed to indicate the wisdom of the plan. Funds are most frequently obtained by some form of public entertainment, instructive or amusing. A committee of representative women must be secured, and in the formation these questions would invariably be asked:

"Just what is the Pension Fund?" and "What are the nurses themselves doing for it?" The first is easily answered; the second less easily. A reply which reveals earnest work and self-denial on the part of the individual members of the Association not only creates an interest but insures the co-operation of those outside the profession.

For example: "During the past year the nurses themselves have contributed five thousand dollars to the Pension Fund. This represents work and sacrifice and is not the result of any entertainment. We are now hoping to treble that amount by an attractive afternoon or evening which will merit the attention of the public. Will you help us to make this a success?"

In some such way the second question should be answered. To this end, an effort has been made to test out the Association itself, so that each member may realize the potential value of the Fund and her own responsibility.

The letter of November has brought a variety of responses, written and verbal. These might be classified as follows: First, regrets for inability to contribute anything; second, offers to contribute less than fifty dollars; third, acceptances of the entire proposition; fourth, criticisms of the plan.

The following excerpts have been selected at random and may be regarded as typical:

REGRETS

"I am so sorry to be unable to promise more than my encouragement. I have a good sized debt, much responsibility at home, and a small salary. I won't always be so poor, I hope, and this Fund shall be one of my first thoughts."

"I am sorry to say I must join the ranks of those who have 'heavy responsibilities and family obligations which consume all my time and strength,' as I have married a poor doctor! But I want to be one on whom you can depend for work now and then. I could address envelopes and relieve you of some tedious work."

"I have been trying to think up ways of earning fifty dollars, but since I have had to give up work and take care of my blind invalid mother, I find that my liabilities exceed my assets. However, here's hoping I can be able to do something by fall."

"The appeal comes at a bad time for me. I was not able to work for two years after I came home from France, and now am taking a course in Public Health Nursing. I will certainly do what I can when I am earning again."

"All my time is taken up with work at Columbia. After I finish my course and have a position again I shall assume my responsibilities."

OFFERS TO CONTRIBUTE LESS THAN FIFTY DOLLARS

"I take much pleasure in enclosing twenty-five dollars and later on hope to send a like amount. You ask how I earned the money. By no clever means, I assure you. I am not in the least gifted or versatile, partly due (I like to think) to the fact that I am never idle long enough for more than short rests between cases. When there is a call for a special fund I usually dedicate certain days of nursing to it, and I find much pleasure in those particular days."

"Please find enclosed twenty-five dollars. I am sorry it is not more, but it is all I can afford at the present time. I have so many obligations to various nursing interests, here in Canada, and I feel that I must keep up with them. I hope the money is pouring in."

"I am so much interested in the Pension Fund and care about everything to do with the dear P.H. In this far-away corner of Mexico, New York seems like another world. I am the wife of a missionary and fifty-dollar bills do not grow on bushes near our door! But I can send five dollars, which comes with good wishes for success."

ACCEPTANCES OF ENTIRE PROPOSITION

"I am delighted to send fifty dollars to the Pension Fund. In reply to your question, I took it from my bank account, as I had no way of earning it outside my profession."

"Here is my fifty. I hope you have had a fine response from our class. It seems to me such an important thing that we should all come together on this project."

"You may like to know how I got my fifty dollars. I saved it by putting aside all my ten-cent pieces. I really began to do this some time ago, to save money to pay for a visit out West. I have just deflected my savings to the Pension Fund, and I will now begin over again."

"I am very happy to be able to send fifty dollars and only wish I could do more."

"I did not display any great gifts in earning my fifty dollars. I simply subtracted it from the every day income from the hard work of nursing. I could not take it from my bank account, as I have no such good thing. Nevertheless, I am not yet quite despairing, for in spite of a vacation, on account of illness, I have paid the fifty dollars and also did get a much coveted hat and suit."

"I have had an unexpected windfall—a present of one hundred dollars—so I'll divide it with you. Please find enclosed fifty. I often wish some of our fastidious special nurses could look in on me at this moment. A sudden change in the weather—all the pipes frozen (and this is no joke in the rural districts)—all the cats having kittens—all the sheep lambing—three children down with the grippe—my husband in the hospital with pneumonia—and just one extra pair of hands to do everything."

"As I am sailing for Europe next week I cannot do any work for the Fund, so I enclose my check for fifty dollars, wishing you the best of luck."

"Though so far away from the Hospital my heart and thoughts are often there. I am always so proud to remember that I am one of you yet. I am only too pleased to send my check for fifty dollars." (This from England.)

"I am going away for a rest as I am "all in." I am sending my check for fifty dollars, as I never could rest with fifty dollars between me and peace. But earn it I will—later on—even if I have to do it diving for pennies with the little niggers off the Florida shoals."

"This is how I earned my fifty dollars: Twenty dollars making hemstitched napkins, ten dollars for keeping two children three days while their parents were away, two dollars making a skirt myself instead of having it made, eight dollars for painting some woodwork instead of paying the man to do it as usual, and twelve dollars for taking care of a friend's pet cat for two months. He is thirteen years old and has to be especially watched and a delicate diet cooked for him. I can tell you I earned that twelve dollars!"

"I believe in the Pension Fund! I am depending on it to keep me out of the poorhouse in my old age, and I hereby elect myself one of your working committee. This summer I shall make marmalade, and carry on a profiteering business, as I am good at marmalade. If I only knew how to make home brew or run the gauntlet to Canada I'd beat you all out! Anyhow, I'll do my best."

CRITICISMS OF PLAN

(One letter of this type)

"I hasten to reply to your note in regard to adding fifty dollars to the Pension Fund. I think it is a very grave mistake to ask the members of the Association to do this. The increase of dues to ten dollars a year has made a great deal of hard feeling, and this last request will only drive people out of the Association."

(Two letters of this type)

"I find it very difficult to pay the increased dues of ten dollars. It seems to me that is all we should be asked to do for the Fund. I should like to hear from you again in regard to this, as I really can't see any reason why I should be expected to give to a fund that I shall probably never draw on myself."

A SURPRISING REPLY

(From one now drawing a pension)

"I want to do what I can to help with the Fund that is going to mean so much to many of us. Please have fifty dollars deducted from my pension this year and turned back into the Fund, for I think I can somehow manage to do without thát much this year, but next year I may be still further incapacited." (Needless to say, this generous offer was not accepted.)

Florence Nightingale Hall has proved a fruitful field for the enterprising. Delicious home-made candy in convenient packages made its appearance at appropriate intervals. This was the practical thought of one whose days are arduous, and whose evenings are not always her own. Her record is three hundred pounds of candy, fifty dollars to the Pension Fund and (something which she does not often mention) many hours of work between 11 p. m. and 2 a. m.

Next the needlewomen sprang to arms! Fine hand-worked handkerchiefs, embroidered lingerie and dainty afghans were exhibited to be won by lucky numbers after the deposit of twenty-five or fifty cents. Strangely enough, one person drew two prizes!

Not to be outdone by the utilitarians, a fortune-teller modestly appeared from our ranks and generously revealed the future to those who sought her occult powers. It is said the curtain was lifted at the touch of a twenty-five cent piece and so frequenly that thirty dollars was the result.

It is also related that one of our number, quite seriously ill, denied herself the luxury of special nurses and turned into the Pension Fund her allowance from the Sick Benefit Fund.

Still another tale centers in the remote region of Bleecker Street. Forty dollars had been earned by odds and ends, but the last ten resisted capture. In the process of putting away winter clothing an ancient fur coat came in for inspection. "Happy thought! Perhaps I can sell it? It certainly has its good points," thought the ambitious one. And she sallied forth, coat in hand—ten dollars her goal. At Forty-second Street an offer of six dollars—at Fourteenth Street it rose to eight dollars. "Ah!" she thought. "As I go DOWN the price goes UP!" At Bleecker Street she made her last stand. Near Broadway, nine dollars. She shook her head and turned eastward. In a melanchody basement, close to the Bowery, triumph awaited her. "I vill gif you ten dollars." With rapturous thanks she snatched the dingy bill and dashed for the street, leaving her benefactor speechless with astonishment. His mental comment probably registered, "Now vy didn't I say $9.98!"

In concluding, the chairman sends her thanks and appreciation to all those who have so gallantly and earnestly entered into the spirit of this venture, whether by gift of gracious word or gift of hard-earned money. It is hoped that the task has not been too difficult and that it has brought a rare compensation.

Perhaps this little account—all too incomplete—may persuade those still unresponsive to take a part, however small, and thus link up our ranks into a splendid working corps.

Amount added to Fund by increased dues.....	$3,689.00
Received in response to letter.....	1,679.00
Pledged by Oceober in response to letter.....	500.00
Total	$5,868.00

In addition to the above amount received and definitely pledged, another $500.00 has been tentatively promised.

Chairman Ways and Means Committee of the Pension Fund.
